UNFINISHED SYMPHONY.
Schubert's Beautiful Composition Analyzed by George Upton.

Schubert's "Eighth Symphony" is but a fragment. The first two movements are complete. There are nine bars of a scherzo, and with them the symphony stops, and yet among all of the composer's works not one is so beautiful in ideas or more perfect in form than this. No more of it has ever been found, and no one knows why Schubert should have abandoned it.

The first page of the score is dated "Vienna, October 30, 1828." For 45 years it remained unknown, and it is due to Sir George Grove that it was rescued from its obscurity and given to the world for its constantly increasing delight. The score was published in 1873, and the first performance was given at the Crystal Palace, London, on the 6th of April in the same year. Since that time the symphony has become one of the favorite numbers on the concert stage.

The allegro opens at once with an impressive subject given out to cello and basses. At its close, the oboes and clarinets take up a melodious theme pianissimo, the violins accompanying it in an agitated manner. After a short interlude, the movement enters with a melody which will never cease to fascinate the hearer with its wonderful beauty and grace of motion. After its repetition by the strings, the second entry comes a pause, followed by a most passionate declaration in the minor, as if to drown the memory of the former moment of happiness. The beautiful theme again returns, however, and the first part of the movement closes with a struggle between these expressions of perfect happiness and wild passion.

The second part begins with the original subject, varied for the basses, which is gradually developed amid full orchestral outbursts up to a powerful climax. As it flies away, the first theme re-enters, and is again treated with charming variety, the whole closing with another climax, in which the opening subject forms the material of the coda.

The adagio begins with an introductory passage for the horns and bassoons, the double basses accompanying pizzicato, leading up to another lovely theme, given out by the violins. After a striking development with changing variety, the subject is stated by the clarinets, with string accompaniment, repeated by the oboes, with the addition of a new phrase, in which the flute joins. The whole orchestra follows with stately harmony, succeeded by an episode which leads up to a new treatment of the second theme by the strings. This follows the customary repetition in brilliant detail. The coda is full of melodious beauty, and closes this delightful work. GEORGE UPTON.

This symphony will be played at the Marquam next Thursday evening by the Portland Symphony Orchestra. Following is the full programme:
Symphony No. 8 in B minor (unfinished).....Schubert
Allegretto.....Schubert
Waltzes.....Tales from the Vienna Woods.....Strauss

String orchestra.....Donizetti
Mad scene from "Lucia".....Donizetti
Overture—"Merry Wives of Windsor".....Nicolai
Charles L. Brown, conductor.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.
West's Minstrels.
The appearance of William H. West's big minstrel jubilee at the Marquam Friday and Saturday of this week emphasizes the fact that the genuine negro minstrelsy is very much alive, and from all reports it serves to draw great crowds to the theaters in the various cities visited by this great aggregation of burnt-cork performers. It is natural that one of the foremost minstrels this country has ever had should be at the head of what has been the most prosperous minstrel organization extant. Billy West is a historical figure in the field of blackface endeavor, and his name will be associated with that of the famous men who have amused the people with their quaint portrayals of the Southern negro. The company includes such stars as Carroll Johnson, Richard J. Jose, Fred Warren, the Lukens brothers, the three Marvelles, Tommy Hayes, David Moyer and a host of others.

The sale of seats will begin tomorrow.

Botanizing in Deep Snow.

Forestry Expert Johnson Secured Specimens Under Difficulties.

A. J. Johnson, forestry expert, arrived here yesterday from a short trip to Southern Oregon. He has not made any new discoveries of importance of late, but for the past month has been traveling to all sorts of out-of-the-way places, collecting the roots of rare or curious plants, which he located and marked last Summer, but which could not be removed at that time. In this collecting tour he has experienced many hardships and difficulties in finding the plants he was after, as they were mostly at altitudes of from 4000 to 6000 feet, and most of them were still buried under the snow.

He first went to the Wallowa country, where last Summer he discovered a pure white perennial sunflower—entirely new to botanists—rare, beautiful and valuable commercially on that account. Mr. Johnson collects for nearly all the botanical gardens all over the world, and has orders for any kind of plant which is rare and worthy of cultivation. When he reached the place where he had discovered the plant, after traveling five miles over frozen snow two feet in depth, he found the spot he had marked, and he started to dig for the roots, but the snow he found was so deep that he was unable to dig, and he was forced to return to the Wallowa country, where he was after, as they were mostly at altitudes of from 4000 to 6000 feet, and most of them were still buried under the snow.

There has been considerable said to the effect that snow is no longer on the ground in open places than in the forests, but Mr. Johnson says that this is a mistake, and that as soon as the snow was reached in the same altitude, he found the plants he was after, and he started to dig for the roots, but the snow he found was so deep that he was unable to dig, and he was forced to return to the Wallowa country, where he was after, as they were mostly at altitudes of from 4000 to 6000 feet, and most of them were still buried under the snow.

From the northern part of the Wallowa country he proceeded to the mountains in the southern part, where the Wallowa River has its source, and he collected a lot of young forest trees—yellow pine, tamarack, mountain spruce, Virginia juniper, or lead pencil cedar, as it is often called, also white birch and hawthorn. He also collected plants of the white and yellow flowering currants, belonging to the same order as the red flowering currant, so plentiful around Portland. The forest trees collected form part of a lot of 5000 young forest trees sent by the United States Government to Goat Island, San Francisco Bay, where they have been planted as an experiment in the way of reforesting the island.

On returning from Eastern Oregon Mr. Johnson made a trip to Gray's Harbor and the country along the foot of the Olympic Range in order to familiarize himself with the Spring flora of that region, which he had not before visited at that time. He next proceeded to Southern Oregon, to the foothills of the Siskiyou and Rogue rivers, and Deer Creek. On these streams principally he collected about 20,000 plants, roots and bulbs of various species, including, of which he has nine varieties, pitcher plants, camass, caliche, etc.

About May 1 Mr. Johnson will leave for the mountains of Eastern Oregon, to collect data for compiling his report of the forests of Oregon, for the Geological Survey. This report will be a voluminous and comprehensive affair, containing a description of every forested township in Oregon, with many illustrations.

Symphony Concert.

The fourth concert of the Portland Symphony Orchestra will be given at the Marquam on Thursday evening, April 26. Mme. Jennie Norelli will be the soloist on this occasion, and will sing the famous mad scene from "Lucia." The sale of seats will open Wednesday. Scale of prices: front row, $5; first six rows, $3; last six rows, $2. The gallery will not be opened.

NO MONEY FOR CITY PATHS

Bicyclists Must Pay This Year's Tax to Secure Them.

The County Commissioners have been called upon by a number of bicyclists who are anxious to have bicycle paths built along various streets in the city. They say that if such paths are desired, bicyclists must come to the front and pay the bicycle tax. Paths enough have been constructed and are now under way in the city to absorb all the bicycle funds on hand, and unless the bicycle tax is paid, there will be no money to build paths in the city. When the paths now in hand are completed, about 27 miles of paths will have been built this Spring, and when the fund is exhausted there will be no more paths built.

Building bicycle paths in the city will be much more expensive than building them in the country, as a block in the city will cost as much as a mile some places in the country. It is proposed that a strip along the side of the street shall be granted and are now under way in the city to absorb all the bicycle funds on hand, and unless the bicycle tax is paid, there will be no money to build paths in the city. When the paths now in hand are completed, about 27 miles of paths will have been built this Spring, and when the fund is exhausted there will be no more paths built.

While there is no end to the demand for more bicycle paths, there seems to be but little inclination on the part of bicyclists to pay the tax required to defray the expense of building such paths. The situation now is, no money, no more paths; or, in other words, the bicyclists must put up or shut up.

The Front-Street Franchise.

PORTLAND, April 23.—(To the Editor.)—Permit a few of the residents, living in the south end of Portland, to offer their cordial thanks through your worthy columns to some of the property-owners of the city and the honorable members of the City Council for their great wisdom shown in their act of defeating the petition asking for the franchise for a track along Front street. The benefits of such action are already apparent. Smith's mill has shut down, and the plant is for sale, and other enterprises no doubt will follow the same course. We can now, as before, haul our stuff to and from the terminal grounds by truck or wheelbarrow, thereby greatly improving the streets of the city and the macadam road in particular. For tickets, rates, etc., call at City Ticket Office, 122 Third street.

effing the very people who used their best efforts to kill this franchise, we expected something in return, and we got it. These very men that have already become young again. It is the great one and prevented the great city fathers from hurting the South End. It was the same spirit that fought so bravely for the Morrison-street bridge and Stark-street ferry purchase. It is that same spirit that always co-operates with any part of the city for the benefit of the whole, and that will soon make Portland the largest city on the Coast. Yes, Mr. Editor, Portland needs a drydock, a smelter, a woolen mill, but it also needs an advertisement in some Seattle paper, running like this: To exchange—A job lot of Portland mossbacks, money and all, for a few enterprising, up-to-date Seattle business men. ## SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

Half Holiday Ordered for May 4 to Attend Humane Society Meeting.

There was a full attendance at the meeting of the School Board last night, and every member was in his seat promptly at 7:30, for Chairman Warren has established a reputation for calling these meetings to order on time. Owing to the illness of his wife, School Clerk Allen was absent, and John M. Lewis was asked to act as clerk. On account of Mr. Allen's absence, the numerous bills presented were carried over until the next meeting.
