

THE POETRY OF AN AGE OF REVOLUTION

THE OREGONIAN'S HOME STUDY CIRCLE DIRECTED BY PROF. SEYMOUR EATON

XXII—GOLDEN AGE OF ENGLISH POETRY.

BY THOMAS MARC PATRICK, PH.D.

The poetry of the age of revolution and Byron is the poetry of an age of revolution. It does not, to be sure, spring directly from the political upheaval in France, but it is closely associated with it, a product and the result of the movement for liberty of thought and action.

Forerunners: Cowper and Burns.

The new note is first struck in "Table Talk" and its companion poems in 1792. Cowper owned little or nothing to the poets of the preceding generation. His revolt against the accepted conventionalities of his time, his close observation of Nature, his delight in the simple human affections, all mark him as the poet of a new day.

Had Burns lived in France he would have been a poet of the revolution.

In 1792, the year of the September massacre, he sent a pair of guns tied from a smuggler as a personal gift to the French convention. At a public dinner he proposed the toast of the "last chapter of the last book of Kings."

There were some things, narrow and Phillips-like about Southey's later work that particularly exposed him to the onslaught of Byron. He lauded "Ode during the Negotiations for Peace" as in substance a "cry for the blood of Napoleon."

Coleridge was inspired above his fellows by the spirit of the Revolution. As a poet he was not only a poet of his age, but a poet of the age of the Revolution. At Cambridge he was the associate of Wordsworth and Coleridge.

PHILIPPINE DRESS FABRICS

Rare and Rich Weavings by the Women of Luzon.

Only those who have lived a long time in the Philippines have any conception of where and how the exquisite pinafore-fiber fabrics are manufactured. It seems incredible that they are actually hand-spun goods which rival in texture the products of the marvelous looms of civilized Europe.

Then there is the Pina (pronounced peen-ah), made entirely of pineapple fiber, either natural or dyed in brilliant colors. It is this fabric which is used for the marvelous embroideries produced during the spare moments of the Philippine housewives.

Paris has taken the entire output of these skillful weavers and embroiderers for years. The Free Kindergarten Association of the city has been organized in the short time since this school was opened.

GHOSTS THAT ARE LAID.

A Grandson of Senator Henderson Speaks of the Death of Crittenden.

HOOD RIVER, Or., May 14.—(To the Editor)—Your touching and thrilling editorial in the daily of yesterday, entitled "Ghosts That Are Laid," is peculiarly interesting to me because in my infancy among some of the incidents of the Cuban rebellion of 1893 that you mention, my grandfather, John Henderson, was the only "ghost" in the Senate.
