FUNDS FOR JULY FOURTH

FINANCE COMMITTEE WILL GATHER THEM TODAY.

Will Begin an Active Campaign for the Money Needed to Give a Great Celebration.

Today begins the active campaign for the greatest Fourth of July celebration that Portland has yet seen. With the election over and all the excitement incident thereto, the Finance Committee, composed of leading business men of the community, will begin an active canvass for funds that will be organized like a political campaign, and which should prove just as effective. The work has been well divided among sub-committees, and every business man and firm in the city will be given an opportunity to respond, as they should, largely and generously.

Already the members of the committee are evolving new plans and ideas to make the celebration an even greater success than last year's demonstration.

A novel suggestion, made by General Summers, for an evening parade in the heart of the city in meeting with universal approval among business men, and they are responding even more liberally than usual for this reason. This evening parade, with illuminated floats and brilliant pyrotechnic displays, will be an unusual feature of the celebration that will attract universal attention and provide a spectacle of surprising beauty. Such a parade of flashing lights in varying colors, with the accompanying blaze of rockets and fiery showers of Roman candles, with beautiful emerald green, winding through the city on a calm summer evening presents a picture that will appeal to any imagination. The efforts of the committee this year will be directed along unique and original lines and the programme of events will be such as to vary the usual character of the National celebration.

"The eagle will scream," said Mr. Steinbach, yesterday, "but it will scream in a dozen different ways."

Patriotism will be stimulated by a military parade, general interest by spectacular displays, athletic, aquatic and other miscellaneous events.

A good start has already been made by effecting a good organization of energetic business men and the co-operation of the public should follow naturally, especially since a strenuous effort is to be made to introduce originality in the programme. Today the Finance Committee, every one approached by the committee should respond promptly so as not to increase the labor of the men who are sacrificing their time for the success of this year's demonstration.

This evening the committee and others interested will meet in the City Hall to discuss further their plans.

CONFESSED ONCE BEFORE.

Smithie Admitted Committing Murder Twice.

Louis Smithie, who has just surrendered himself to the Sheriff at Condon, Or., for the murder of George Young at Soda Springs, Siskiyou county, California, made a similar confession five years ago in Portland to George C. Sears, who was then Sheriff of Multnomah county. Smithie then, as now, told all of the alleged shocking details of the crime, and insisted with all positiveness in the truth of his story, and his confession backed, as it was at that time, with other apparently reliable evidence, was convincing. But true or false, the man is secure from prosecution, because the body of his victim can never be recovered.

Smithie when he confessed to Sheriff Sears was a prisoner in the county jail awaiting trial on a charge of stealing a cow. The fine impression of Mr. Sears naturally was, that the man who was endeavoring to escape punishment for the larceny case, thinking that if he was taken to California to answer to a murder charge and it felt through that it would not be worth while for the Oregon authorities to have him brought back here to answer for the lesser offense. But this idea was soon dispelled when Smithie stated that the wife of the murdered man came to Oregon with him and her children, and that they lived together in a cabin in the woods south of the city. The place was visited, and a woman answering to the name of Mrs. Young was discovered, together with the children, and she corroborated Smithie in many things, but denied that she killed her husband, stating that the last time she saw her husband he rode away from their California home on horseback. The children were going young, and seemed to know nothing about the affair. As they had been badly neglected, the attention of Superintendent Gardner, of the Girls' and Girls' Aid Society, was directed to them.

Smithie related to Sheriff Sears the manner in which he waylaid Young and shot him down, and stated that he had previously worked for him. He also fully explained the location of the place where he had hidden the remains. All of this information was conveyed by Sheriff Sears to the District Attorney and Sheriff of Siskiyou county, California, and several letters passed between them. The California officials finally sent word that they were unable to obtain any very satisfactory information about the case at their end, and that the place where Smithie said he had buried the body had been filled in by the railroad company with tons of rock and gravel, and if there was any corpse there it would have to remain there, and could not be by any possibility ever unearthed.

As a corpus delicti is necessary to establish a case of murder, there was nothing left to do but to drop the case. Smithie was convicted of the larceny of the cow, and was sent to the Penitentiary.

SAYS HE IS INNOCENT.

Statement of J. T. Cox, Arrested for Alleged Mail Robbery.

J. T. Cox, who was arrested here on Sunday by Deputy United States Marshal Roberts, on a charge of robbing a post-office, admits that he is Cox, but denies that he is the mailrobber wanted by authorities. An officer will arrive here in a day or two provided with papers for securing possession of Cox, and prepared to identify him.

Cox is charged with having robbed the postoffice at Boulder, Colo., of a lot of stamps, etc. He was arrested there, but succeeded in making his escape and went to Montana. He left orders at a postoffice there for his mail to be forwarded to Portland, and through this the Postal Inspector got track of him and telephoned to United States Marshal Houser to look out for him and arrest him when he called for his mail. Cox put in his appearance in a long spring at the delivery window, and Deputy Marshal Roberts, who had been the lookout for him for several days, promptly arrested him. He was found to have quite an amount in postal stamps in his possession, more than he usually carries about, and also a package of gold foil such as is used by dentists. He gave conflicting statements in regard to his arrival here, saying at one time that he came from San Francisco, on the steamer Potto, and at another time that he came by rail from Astoria, and landed on the East Side. The authorities are confident that they have the right man, but are not certain of this until the man who can identify him arrives.

TELEPHONE TO NEHALEM.

Cutting Poles for Oregon Company's New Line.

Messrs. Joplin and Elsholtz passed through the city yesterday with five horse teams, a dozen men and a coupling outfit, on their way to North Yamhill, to begin work on a contract to get out poles for the extension of the Oregon Telephone Company's line to Nehalem. Their contract is to get out the poles and string them along the old toll road, from North Yamhill to Nehalem, and thence to Tillamook. The poles are to be of cedar, round-barked, or split, and the timber will be found along the coast, and the poles placed at the place where they are to be set, which have been marked by stakes. As soon as the poles are in place, a gang of about 20 men will be put at work setting them, and stringing the wire.

The line will be a first-class, copper loop. The company will continue the line from Nehalem to Tillamook, over which part of the line all transportation of stores and material will have to be done by pack-horses. When the whole is completed there will be communication by telephone between Portland and Tillamook by way of North Yamhill, and by Astoria, both.

The principal purpose of extending the line from Nehalem to Seaside is to furnish the telephone service to the Tillamook and Astoria. With such telephone facilities and a railroad to follow in the near future, Portland and the Willamette Valley will no longer be "the outside" to the people of Tillamook.

WHEELMEN HEADED OFF.

One Place Where They Must Keep the Road.

The builders of the new sidewalk on Macdonald street for several blocks north of the Powers furniture factory, have headed off bicycle riders most effectively, and no policeman will be required to keep scorchers in the road. At the street crossing the new walks have an abrupt ending, as a plank a foot wide makes a step just that high. The road proper is now dry and dusty, and a goodly portion of the new walks have been treated to a covering of broken rock, which makes for comfortable driving, even for teamsters.

Wheelmen therefore have a good deal of trouble in going to the new walks, and in going to or coming from the beginning of the path, just south of the new improvement. A good many workmen ride along these morning and evening, and various plans are projected by them to utilize the walks. One man said yesterday that he would procure wide slabs from an adjacent sawmill and with these make an incline for wheelmen at the various street crossings.

REDUCED RATES.

TALKED ABOUT HIS CRIME

STRANGE STORY THAT MOSS TOLD E. E. HOWES.

He Revels the Scene of the Murder Before He Killed Himself — Ford on His Trail.

Riley Moss evidently visited the spot where he killed his wife, Saturday afternoon, shortly before taking his own life. The police officers think he did, and they have good ground for this belief. Moss was seen about a half mile from the place where the murder occurred late Saturday afternoon. He was coming toward the city. He took a car near Twenty-third street, and the officers think stopped off near the place where he killed himself. Detective Ford was on his track from the time he left Twenty-third street, and arrived down town about the time that Moss ended his life.

It is a well-known fact that murderers usually have a desire to go back and view the spot where they committed the crime, and it is more than likely that Moss, who left the bicycle repair shop on Taylor street before 5 o'clock, went to Willamette Heights, viewed the scene of the tragedy and then returned to the city and killed himself.

In the Bicycle Repair Shop.

E. E. Howes, who keeps a bicycle repair shop at 471 Taylor street, the man to whom Moss, under the assumed name of Williams, told of the murder, says that Moss left his place between 4 and 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Howes now thinks that Moss was arranging to end his troubles while in his shop. He says that the murderer, after talking for two or three hours, mainly upon the subject of the murder of Naomi, wrote a note on a leaf torn from a memorandum. He then went into a plunder room in the rear of the shop and remained for a time. Mr. Howes thinks that the note was the one found in his pocket after death, and that he went into that plunder room to commit suicide, but that his nerve failed him.

From the time Moss first appeared at the bicycle shop Friday evening until he left there Saturday afternoon, Mr. Howes says he must have spent six or seven hours there. He is known to have sat in the doorway smoking, and saw more than one officer pass alone. All of this time he was passing as the intimate friend of the murderer. Saturday afternoon an employee of J. P. Finley & Son dropped in at the bicycle shop, and while there gave both Howes and Moss cigars, and others who were in from time to time talked to Moss without even suspecting that he was the man for whom the entire police force was searching.

"I never once suspected the fellow of being Moss," said Mr. Howes. "In fact, I first took him for a gigantic liar. Afterward I became interested in him. The stories that he told of his friend's family troubles were truthful."

"He said that his friend (Moss) had fallen in love with the woman, and after marrying her had taken her to Tacoma to get her away from him. During this time there he had been very happy. There they were happy for a time, but soon the man Mason appeared on the scene, and all was over."

He then told of his wife's coming here and how she had been taken to Tacoma by her father. He then came here and found Mason and his wife together. The poor fellow declared that he had been killed. He was the next day, he said, when he bought a pistol and determined to kill both Mason and the woman, and then himself.

"He declared that Moss was raised in a country where the man who interfered with another's family relations must surely die, and that Moss would live up to the traditions of his people. He said that as soon as Moss killed Mason he would kill himself. He then remarked that he didn't blame Moss for killing the woman. Said that Moss could not bear to see a woman he had loved become a common street walker, and decided she would be better off out of the way."

Watched Her Die.

Moss first tried to get his wife to go to the Morrison street bridge with him. This she refused to do, evidently fearing he would try to pitch her in the river. He then induced her to go to Willamette Heights, where after pleading with her to return home with him, he shot her when she refused. He said that he knelt down by her and talked to her as her life blood oozed out, and that he did not leave her until frightened away.

Wanted More Cartridges.

"I am satisfied that Moss was only waiting to kill Mason, but his mind gave way and he killed himself first," continued Mr. Howes. "He laid all the blame on Mason. He said his friend had asked him to buy some cartridges for him, and requested him to go and get them, as he didn't care to become mixed up in the matter. This he refused to do."

"The fellow was jovial all the time. He was anxious to see what the papers said about the affair, and insisted all the time that Moss was not a bad man, and that he came of a good family."

Moss told Mr. Howes that he had seen the dead woman at the morgue. Mr. Howes thinks this is true, as he saw him go by there Saturday, and from his indifferent manner is sure he would not have hesitated to go in.

MCKINLEY AND TRIPP.

Oregon Electors Want Dakota Man for Vice-President.

The Oregon delegates to the Republican National Convention, at Philadelphia, are beginning to pack their grips, and the main body expects to leave Portland, over the O. R. & N. next Sunday. John D. Daly, of Benton county, however, will have the start of the rest, as he will leave today. Joseph Simpson, of Portland, is back in Washington City now, and so will have only 130 miles to ride when the time for the assembling of the delegates in the Quaker city arrives.

The Oregon delegation consists of eight citizens: John D. Daly, of Corvallis; George A. Steel, of Portland; J. D. David, of Newberg; H. L. Kuck, of The Dalles; F. S. Stanley, of Perry, Union county; H. E. Ankeny, of Jacksonville; Joseph Simon, and Wallace McCamant, of Portland.

Although the delegation cannot be said to be instructed, its members concede the nomination of McKinley, by acclamation. For Vice-President, the Oregonians have decided to pull together for Judge Bartley Trripp, against the nomination of William Howard Taft.

It is thought, will be the strongest candidate the West will have for second place.

A leading member of the delegation said yesterday that Judge Trripp was sure of both Dakota and that Governor Roosevelt, of New York, was pronounced in his favor. The Judge has long been known as an eminent jurist, this gentleman said yesterday, "and his opinions on weighty matters have been recognized by the legal fraternity of the nation as profound and correct interpretations of the law."

The Judge was President Cleveland's Minister to Austria and President McKinley's Commissioner to Samoa, in both of which capacities he acquitted himself with credit to his country. As Supreme Judge of South Dakota, he has made a splendid record, and his fame has reached far beyond the confines of his own state.

At present he is simply a practicing attorney of considerable wealth, though by no means so rich as many of the recent aspirants to the Vice-Presidency.

"Judge Trripp is not a life-long Republican, however. He is known as a Gold Democrat, and came over to the Republicans when the rank and file of the Western Democracy went over in 1896. He is known as a Republican, and a recognition of the growing West which now demands it. Mr. McKinley's home is 500 miles from the Atlantic coast, and 2000 from the Pacific, and so we do not consider it unreasonable to demand the support of a man of recognized ability from a point west of the Mississippi River."

"Judge Trripp's name will not be presented in the convention simply as a compromise to that gentleman's worthiness but with the intention of standing by him until his name is placed on the ticket alongside of Mr. McKinley's. We certainly expect the nomination."

The route of the delegation will follow the line of the O. R. & N., Oregon Short Line, Union Pacific and North-western to Chicago. From Chicago the Big Four and Chesapeake & Ohio will be followed eastward. A day will be spent at Washington City on the journey. At Philadelphia the delegation will have its headquarters at the Bingham House.

JOHN DREW TONIGHT.

"Tyranny of Tears" at the Marquam — Nat Goodwin Coming.

The demand for seats for the engagement of John Drew and his clever company at the Marquam Grand for tonight and tomorrow night has been exceptionally strong.

There is scarcely a city in the United States where this polished actor would not be warmly received by the most representative of playgoers, and yet, because of his prolonged engagements in New York, comparatively few places are included in his tour. He will bring with him what is considered the greatest success of his career, "The Tyranny of Tears," written by Haddon Chambers, who classified it as "a comedy of temperament." It is a clean, wholesome, refreshing play, written in the purest form of verse, and much praised for its admirable construction. The play has been very successful. In London it ran a season. In New York it was staged when the present season opened, to remain for 10 weeks only, but so great was its triumph that it ran for several months. Mr. Drew is said never to have had a better part than that of the tear-tyrannized husband, and that is saying a great deal. He will be supported by such noted artists as Misses Isabel Irving, Ida Conquest, Georgia Mendum, and Messrs. Arthur Byron, Harry Harwood and Frank E. Lamb. Cast and production will be exactly the same as in New York.

Nat Goodwin Coming.

The event of the season will be the appearance of Mr. N. C. Goodwin and Miss

HOOD VS. HOOD.

C. I. Hood & Co. Victorious in Important Cases—Injunction Against Dr. J. C. Hood.

Important suits have just been decided in the United States Circuit Court at Louisville, Ky., in favor of C. I. Hood & Co., of Lowell, Mass., proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla, against Dr. J. C. Hood, of Louisville, Ky., who was putting up what he called "Dr. Hood's Sarsaparilla." After a hearing in the United States Circuit Court at Louisville, Judge Evans, April 12, granted a temporary injunction in favor of C. I. Hood & Co., and restraining Dr. J. C. Hood from using the word Hood in any way or form on any preparation of sarsaparilla.

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co. also began suit against a retail druggist in Indianapolis, Louis H. Renkert, who was selling Dr. C. Hood's Sarsaparilla. Dr. J. C. Hood employed counsel and made a defense, but Judge Baker, of the United States Circuit Court, granted an injunction, which on April 22 became perpetual.

These two decrees establish the exclusive right of C. I. Hood & Co. to the word "Hood's," and decide in effect that no other person can put up a Hood's Sarsaparilla, even if his name be Hood, nor can any retail druggist sell or offer for sale any sarsaparilla bearing the name Hood or Hood's, other than that prepared by C. I. Hood & Co.

These decisions will be gratifying to every fair-minded person. No manufacturer should object to fair competition, but when an attempt is made to steal the trade of a business which has been established by great skill, labor and expenditure, justice cannot be dealt out too quickly. Nor should "substitution" be allowed, when a standard article is called for. Therefore, when you go to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla, you should be sure to get "only Hood's."

Strange Railroad Accident.

A most peculiar and unusual accident occurred on the Southern Pacific Railroad near the town of Steinman, Saturday morning, June 3, 1899, which was pulling the south-bound passenger train, broke both of its main driving wheels close to the axle and the train had to wait until the broken wheels were replaced. The same day the two broken driving wheels were placed on a flatcar to bring them to Ashland, and as the car was being coupled the brake chains severed and the flatcar started on a mad downward run to Ash-
