MAYOR-ELECT ROWE ON HIS FUTURE PLANS.

Will Appoint Capable Business Men to All Offices Within His Gift.

H. S. Rowe, Mayor-elect of the city, was found yesterday afternoon receiving the congratulations of his friends in the office of the Fire Commissioners. In the same quiet and genial manner that always characterizes his business and social intercourse, Mr. Rowe is a fine type of the American business man, and his entire life has been spent in business pursuits, and along administrative lines that peculiarly fit him for the high position he will assume next July, when the city administration is placed in his charge.

When asked to define his municipal policy, Mr. Rowe said: "There are many points connected with the municipal government of Portland upon which I have not yet formulated my policy, but the platform upon which I was elected contained one chief plank, and that was a pledge to give the city an honest, efficient and business-like administration. My idea of a city government is that it is only another form of business corporation, and that its affairs should be conducted as strictly as the business of any corporation, with the chief end in view of fostering economy, efficiency and honesty in every department. I believe that it is the duty of the Mayor to supervise the workings of all departments, to be familiar with all the details of the city government, and watchful at every point for the city's interests. In my appointments for the Board of Public Works I shall appoint representative business men, of large property interests, who will be able to serve the city without salary, and who will have at heart the city's welfare. The Board of Public Works is one of the most important bodies ever constituted in the city government of Portland, and I intend to take special care in making up its membership.

"The same care I shall endeavor to give to all the other appointments I shall make, for the Police Commission and the Fire Commission, and the other minor offices for which the Mayor is given the appointing power by the charter, which, from the fact that the next Legislature is Republican, will probably be safe from tinkering. Economy is a practical necessity in the city government, and it will be my aim, through keeping a careful watch over every department, to guard against any waste of public funds through carelessness, inefficiency or dishonesty.

"The personnel of the new Council is very satisfactory to me, as it is composed of men of business ability and public spirit, and I anticipate that it will develop into one of the most capable and efficient bodies that has ever served the city. Until July I shall hold my office as Fire Commissioner, when I shall resign and fill my own vacancy, and appoint the successor to Commissioner Fiedler. I have not given any thought nor made up my mind as to any specific appointment, be-

WILL PULL FOR PORTLAND

Delegates to the N. E. A. Will Try to Get the Convention Next Year.

The National Educational Association, the great convention of teachers, will be held at Charleston, S. C., July 9 to 15, and a strong effort will be made at that time to bring it to Portland next year. Professor E. B. McElroy, of Eugene, is in the city in council with School Superintendent Rigler, relative to the organization of plans to advance the effort to secure the convention.

Professor McElroy is vice-president, while Professor Rigler is Pacific Coast member of the executive council, and these gentlemen, together with the rest of the Oregon delegation, expect to leave Portland for Charleston about July 1, and do all they can towards furthering Portland's interests. There will be 35,000 teachers in attendance, and it will take a majority of these to bring the convention here.

Two years ago Oregon's delegation attended the convention at Washington, D. C., and sought at that time to get the body to meet here, but Los Angeles was chosen after a hard fight. Last year the Oregon delegation went to the Southern California city and secured the promise from several hundred Eastern delegates to vote for Portland this year. The support of the Washington and California delegations is also expected. From the fact that the convention was held in a Pacific Coast city last year, there is a possibility that a New England or a Middle West town may be chosen as the meeting place, in which case the Oregon delegation feel certain that it will be Portland in 1902.

PROTECTING THE BALLOTS

MULTNOMAH'S ELECTION RETURNS IN STEEL VAULTS.

As Additional Precaution, Guards Are on Watch at the County Clerk's Office.

The Citizens Legislative ticket managers seem to be apprehensive that the election returns will be tampered with, and a number of large property owners in the County Clerk's office to watch the ballots until the official count takes place. There is, of course, no reason whatever for the exercise of such precautionary measures, as the ballots are safely stored in the vault under double lock and key, and as a matter of fact it would be impossible to alter the ballots and tally sheets, even if a person could get enough to undertake such work could be secured.

County Clerk Holmes, however, was perfectly willing that as many guards as desired be stationed in the office, and is endeavoring to make their stay as agreeable and comfortable as he can.

Judge Calk, although he has of late posed as a regular Republican, and leader of the so-called Republican Bar, has shown himself very solicitous for the welfare of the Citizens ticket, and does not seem to have forgotten that he thrice ruled in favor of the irregulars.

The Judge, if he ever wavered, has returned to his old love, as he was one of the first callers at the County Clerk's office to inquire how the returns were being kept.

Mr. Holmes ushered His Honor into the vault and showed him the steel furniture with which the vault was furnished about a year ago. The boxes were not divided into compartments with a door to each, and a lock and key, and into these the Clerk informed Judge Calk the ballots, etc., would be placed and locked.

But Judge Calk was not satisfied with this arrangement. He said the ballot boxes should not be opened, and their contents removed, but instead the boxes ought to be sealed and then put into the vault.

Clerk Holmes contended that there was no room in the vault for 80 ballot boxes, and that the law does not provide that the method advocated by Judge Calk should be pursued. He explained that formerly the election returns and ballots were kept in large wooden boxes and locked up, and the boxes were placed in the vault. Judge Shattuck had ordered this done. Prior to that time, any sort of boxes were used. The new closets, with the steel doors, were much of an improvement.

"But," insisted Judge Calk, "you have the key, and what is to prevent the ballots from being taken out and changed?" While I know you would not do that, I think you owe it to yourself to seal the boxes, and I do not think they should be opened."

Mr. Holmes answered that he was willing to do whatever was right and proper, and would follow the practice of removing the contents from the boxes and putting them away. There was nothing in the law to the contrary. The packages were sealed and in envelopes. "As far as the boxes are concerned," said the Clerk, "I have the key to the boxes, and any one can open one of these boxes; it is easy enough to get a duplicate key."

The Clerk finally suggested that he would send the steel doors to the closets, and this has been done.

The returns are all in, and the official count will be commenced Friday morning. Justice Kraemer and Vresland will canvass the returns with the County Clerk.

Mr. Holmes, in taking the steps he has had no idea in mind other than to make

ROUGH ON "EASY" STRANGERS

Hackmen at Union Depot Mark Them for Their Own.

Occasionally a stranger from the interior gets bewildered on emerging from the Grand Central station in Portland, and hearing the cries of "Free bus," "Carriage," etc., from the long line of runners he has to pass through, and he sometimes pays for his experience, as the carriages will charge him then your, would have to wait to carry him free. A few days ago a rural couple were about to enter a free bus when a rustling hackdriver said: "Take you right along with me, Uncle. I'll take you to the depot."

"Well, Matilda, let's go with this gentleman; he's got a nice rig," said the stranger, and so they rode in the carriage to the depot. Then they concluded they would return by the same vehicle to the station to see about their baggage, and after that they rode out to the City Park, as the driver seemed so friendly. The old gentleman was "knocked off the Christmas tree," as it were, when a bill for $10 was presented in the evening.

"Yesterday an Eastern Oregon man, who had 'been there before,' emerged from the station and asked an expressman how far it was to Arthur street, in South Portland, and where he should board a street car to get there. "Oh, you'd have to walk a mile and a half before you could strike the right car," the expressman said. "Then you'd have to walk to Arthur street four times. I'll take you right up." The traveler was not so green as he looked, however, and he boarded the right car anything of the kind. The old man and Strangers run the same risk in Portland that they do in all large cities, and they should make inquiries of the depot officials or of the nearest police officer when in doubt.

MUST PAY BY SATURDAY.

Bicycle Tax Becomes Delinquent June 10—Collection Will Be Forced.

On June 10 the bicycle tax will be delinquent, and thereafter Deputy Sheriffs will be sent out to enforce collections. Saturday is the last day to pay. The penalty imposed upon delinquents is $1. The County Commissioners extended the time several weeks ago, and at that date stated that there would be no further extension. As many wheelmen have not yet paid, they will have to come in with a rush to get in before the week closes. The report of County Treasurer Hoyt for the month

SHEEP WAR THREATENED.

Farmer Reports a Grave Situation at Long Creek.

James Leach, a Lexington, Or., farmer, was in Portland yesterday on his way to visit his old home at Harrisburg. He has just made a trip through the John Day and Long Creek localities, and says grass was never so abundant in the Blue Mountains as now. Sheep shearing is just being brought to a close in the Six-Shooter region of Grant County, and the flocks of unprecedented size and weight, no breaks or weak spots being detected in the long, clean fiber. Sheepshearers, although getting 7 cents a head and board for their work this Spring, are not making as good wages as when the fleeces were lighter and the pay was 5 or 6 cents, as there is so much more wool to handle. A crew of 20 men now will hardly shear 1000 head per day, while if the fleeces were lighter they would easily overrun this figure.

He looks for trouble between the Long Creek stockmen and the Morrow County sheepshearers, if the latter persist in bringing their flocks into that portion of the John Day Valley this Summer or Fall. The Long Creek men, he says, are organized and have given notice in their local papers that outside sheep will be kept out at all hazards.

"And I hardly blame them," he continued, "as some of the prairie sheepshearers have fenced in a lot of Government land for winter range, and they keep out all other stock. Of course, they own a good deal of desirable land, but in fencing this in they include a lot that still belongs to the Government."

"The Blue Mountains are settling up rapidly, and every little flat that can be fenced and made to raise a garden now sports its cabin and barn. Many of the new settlers have a little live-stock of their own which they expect to pasture on the distant mountain sides, so every long settler will add his influence to the opposition that is being organized against the incursions of traveling sheep."

"The Long Creek men have been shooting into the air, but in fencing this in they intend to kill herders as well as sheep. They reason that if herders are killed the sheep will be withdrawn, as men could not be hostile to accompany the hands into a hostile country."
