TALK ABOUT THE TICKET.

How Some Local Republicans View Roosevelt's Nomination.

Less visible interest was manifested in Portland yesterday over the result at Philadelphia than over any other National convention since the first telegraph line was established in Oregon. Advance knowledge of who would be nominated accounts for the apparent unconcern. Announcement of Roosevelt's choice by acclamation was received and hailed here long before noon, and formed a subject for lunch-time speculation.

The majority of Republicans in and out of politics seemed to be pleased with the result of the final labor of the convention. Some freely expressed the opinion that the life of the ticket would be found in the fall. Others feared that there would be little harmony between the President and Vice-President if the ticket nominated yesterday is elected.

Several citizens volunteered the opinion that "Teddy" would not be another of shut off by the Vice-Presidential cloak. Others predicted that, if elected, Roosevelt would be the man who would redeem the Vice-Presidency from oblivion, and that, after he had served a four year term, there would be dozens of men ready to undertake the job.

There seemed to be a difference of opinion, locally, as to what extent will have on Roosevelt's chances for the Presidential nomination four years from now. Some thought it had buried him alive. Others predicted that he would make a record that would tend to increase his popularity, and would make his nomination certain in 1904. Those inclined to the latter opinion say that, inasmuch as McKinley will not be a candidate for re-nomination next time, Roosevelt's hands will be perfectly free for the next four years to lay his wits. This would not have been so had McKinley been eligible to another term, and they think that "Teddy" would never have consented to go on the ticket had he not felt that he was sure of a nomination for first time.

There is no little speculation as to what would happen should McKinley die soon after being elected. Four Presidents have died in office, leaving a place to the Vice-President. If such a thing should occur in this case, all agree that Roosevelt, as President, would make things lively. The many wars and rumors of wars, from most of which Uncle Sam is trying to hold aloof, they think, would give the "scrapping" President an opportunity to show his way of doing business under such circumstances.

OREGON STATE FAIR.

All the Committees Actively at Work Arranging for Exhibits.

The Fall meeting of the Oregon State Fair promises to be a very successful one, and a revival of the interest and sociability of pioneer days. Secretary Wisdom and Chairman of the State Board of Agriculture, who are busy perfecting plans and arrangements. Next week they will make a thorough canvass of the state, looking into the various conditions. Mr. Wisdom is already in receipt of many communications asking for space and premium lists. Eastern Oregon is planning a very fine mineral exhibit, and also from that section of the state will be sent one of the best varieties of fruit ever exhibited in Oregon.

As there is to be no exposition in Portland this year, the State Fair will be the recipient of what Oregon has produced during the past year in the quality of fruits, grains, grasses and vegetables.

The races promise to be far ahead of any that have been witnessed for several seasons.

Many side attractions are being considered which will greatly add to the entertainment of visitors.

The camping ground will be put in good condition and special inducements be extended to those who will camp.

Pioneer day at the fair will no doubt draw a large crowd, and in the evening many stories will be related of early history, around a large campfire.

tendent of the Art Department, will endeavor to have a fine collection of works of art. Special attention will be given to native talent. She will personally look after the hanging of pictures and general arrangement of all contributions to this department. The high schools of the state

Important Improvement.
East Twenty-eighth street will be improved from East Stark to York. The petition asking for this improvement has been granted, and the City Engineer is having the estimates of the cost prepared in his department. These will be completed soon. According to the prayer of the petition, the new street will be carried considerably north of the Sandy place, and down the south side of Sullivan's Gulch, which will give an outlet to the factory people. The street grade has been staked off. There will be quite a cut at some places, and the hedge north from East Burnside will have to be removed. Already the foundations of five cottages have been started along the east side of East Twenty-eighth street, and more are to be put up. There is some talk of an effort to get East Twenty-eighth improved also north of Sullivan's Gulch, and it will probably be undertaken some time this year. The City and Suburban have poles ready to plant along East Twenty-eighth for the new spur when the improvement is made.

Fairview Road.

County Surveyor Hurlburt yesterday was at Fairview and finished the survey of the road extending through that place north and south. There was no change made in the location of the road, as residents feared there might be a change in location would have necessitated moving much fencing and causing much expense, and hence the County Court decided that the new survey should conform to the road as asked for. C. A. Shaw, A. M. Osborn and A. L. Turner were witnesses of the survey. The road was not extended from Fairview to the Columbia River, as had been agitated for some time. It is said that the road should be extended northward from Fairview to the river, and that it will finally be brought about. No one seemed inclined to go on the bond to pay the costs, and the survey could not be made.

Petition in Bankruptcy.
A petition in involuntary bankruptcy against the Beaver Coal Company, of Coos Bay, was filed in the United States Court yesterday by a number of San Francisco corporations, creditors of the defendant. The property of the company has been in litigation for some time, and was to have been sold on execution yesterday, but the creditors petitioned for a restraining order to stop the sale which was granted by Judge Bellingher, and they filed a petition asking that the assets be declared bankrupt, and its assets equally divided.

Closing Exercises at Woodstock.
The commencement exercises of Woodstock public school will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the Woodstock Hall. The Spanish quartet will furnish the music, and Chaplain Gilbert will deliver the class address. The intermediate and primary grades gave an entertainment last night, which reflected great credit upon teachers and pupils.
