

EDUCATIONAL TRENDS IN 25 YEARS

COMPARATIVE STUDIES OF TWO CENTURIES

BY PRESIDENT G. STANLEY HALL.

At the beginning of this century education was well established in the minds and convictions of the American people. There were three colleges in the country...

In turning from this general condition of things a century ago to the present, the change is almost startling. The first of all is the growth in number, size and material equipment. Now there are 400,000 teachers and 15,000,000 pupils in school...

One of the earliest movements which marked the advent of the century was the development of centralizing tendencies, the dangers of which had been discussed in the constitutional debates...

At the beginning of the century teachers were isolated, but under the influence of Horace Mann, in the '60s and '70s, associations, state and national, began to bring teachers together for exchange of ideas...

This necessarily involved more careful scrutiny of different tastes and gifts and the wisest individual diversity has been modified and reduced to type. The work of work are usually deficient in others...

talent, and all these tendencies lead to and eliminate in child study, which is a definite survey of habits and aptitudes. The greater the talent the earlier it appears, and it is well that the elective system is a worthy way of sorting downward to lower grades...

When I went to see Judge Deady, in the Spring of 1884, to get his opinion on the subject, I carried with me as a memorandum, a copy of the code, so compiled and annotated by myself. The great jurist took the volume from my hand, and, turning to article II, under the heading 'after providing for the substance of amendments, then it shall be the duty of the Legislative Assembly to submit a proposal to the people...

The constitution of Idaho and Colorado are similar to ours, for, rather, yours, dear woman, is a quiet, unobtrusive, unassuming creature, who is not a show-off, but a man of substance...

On the whole, probably no aspect of our National life can present a record of progress greater or more impressive than that of education. More important than the individual changes enumerated is the growing desire everywhere to secure and wield the power of knowledge...

CHANGES IN CONSTITUTION. The Question What Vote is Necessary to Carry Them. PORTLAND, June 23.—(To the Editor.)—As you are not content with your temporary victory over the equal suffrage amendment, in spite of the most unfair, uncanonid and unscrupulous tactics of the opposition...

When our equal suffrage amendment was voted on in 1899, I was obedient to the suggestion of our noble advocate, the late lamented Senator Dolph, to see Judge M. P. Deady, father of the constitution, for which you profess so much reverence and sought his opinion upon the very point you now raise...

gnie, E. D. Shattuck, J. R. McElrath, R. V. Short, R. C. Kinser and W. Oida. A number of these makers of fundamental law are still in the body, and can speak for themselves, though many have crossed to the silent shore, and can no longer raise their voices in behalf of liberty, equality and justice for the mothers of men...

A HOPEFUL VIEW

The Crisis Believed to Be Nearly Passed. NEW YORK, June 23.—A dispatch to the Tribune from London says: The situation in China is clearing slowly but surely. The losses and dangers of the foreigners in Tien Tsin are now known to have been grossly exaggerated by the rumor-mongers who have been so much in vogue since the outbreak of the massacre of foreigners...

The safety of the foreign legations is assured. The foreigners with their own guards were conducted out of the capital and placed under the protection of Seymour's force, which retired slowly toward Tien Tsin with its sick and wounded. The column was harassed by Chinese mobs and compelled to move slowly, but it was only three hours' march from the capital when the danger of the force by a relief column 3000 strong are still lacking, but the return of the entire body to Tien Tsin is a foregone conclusion...

HAIR A FOOT IN DEPTH

STORY OF A REMARKABLE WASCO COUNTY STORM. A cloud burst, preceded by a storm of wind that almost rose to the proportions of a cyclone, visited last Saturday afternoon a strip of country lying between Elsie and Eight Mile Creeks and extended from there in a northeasterly direction to the Columbia River, says The Daily Chronicle. The amount of damage done is not yet fully known, but it must be considerable...

The warehouse of the Dufur Flouring and Elevator Co. at Elsie, Wash., was completely destroyed. It contained a large quantity of flour and feed, which, happily, was not materially injured. Half fell to a depth of more than three feet on the ridge between Dufur and Eight Mile Creeks. Hundreds of acres of standing grain, and cutting off the heads of wheat and barley as if with a knife. The hail in places had not melted 24 hours after the storm. In some places rocks were moved and piled up in heaps that weighed from a ton down. The fruit trees in one orchard on the ridge were blown down by the roots. Johnstone Bros. of Dufur, estimate the damage done to their crop at $1500. Other crops were damaged to a lesser extent. Water flowed through the street at Dufur a foot deep...

At Dry Hollow, between Boyd and Dufur, the storm struck a six-horse team, driven by a Warm Springs Indian. The leader was killed and the others were broken the reach of the lead wagon and piled the entire team and front wheels of the wagon in a ditch some 10 feet deep. The horses and mules were barely out of the ditch when a flood of water came rushing along that would have drowned the whole outfit...

The peculiar thing about the storm was that it followed so well-defined path. It was worst in the draws and hollow places. The amount of rain that fell was not so much as in the surrounding country. The ridge country suffered no injury that we have heard of, but had a rainfall that was highly beneficial.
