THE MORNING OREGONIAN, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1869.

ASSOCIATION DISCUSSION.

From the New York Herald.

The discussion now in progress of the question of protective tariffs is having some interesting results. The members of the American Protective Association, who, as we said yesterday, recently passed resolutions embracing a comprehensive scheme of national protection, have called a convention of the Republican party of three or four states. It is understood that among the resolutions to be submitted to the convention will be one to the effect that the American Protective Association shall be recognized in the state of New York as the representative of the United States in the future of the American Protective Association.

The American Protective Association was formed last year by a number of persons who, through the agency of the late Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, were associated in the interests of the American Protective Association. The Association was formed for the purpose of promoting the welfare of the manufacturing interests of the United States, and of protecting the same from foreign competition. The Federation of Associations, which is the nearest approach to a national association of this kind in the United States, is, it is understood, to be formed on the same principles.

The Federation of Associations is to be composed of the members of the American Protective Association, who, among other purposes, will be to promote the interests of the manufacturing interests of the United States, and of protecting the same from foreign competition.

The Federation of Associations is to be composed of the members of the American Protective Association, who, among other purposes, will be to promote the interests of the manufacturing interests of the United States, and of protecting the same from foreign competition.

The Federation of Associations is to be composed of the members of the American Protective Association, who, among other purposes, will be to promote the interests of the manufacturing interests of the United States, and of protecting the same from foreign competition.

The Federation of Associations is to be composed of the members of the American Protective Association, who, among other purposes, will be to promote the interests of the manufacturing interests of the United States, and of protecting the same from foreign competition.

The Federation of Associations is to be composed of the members of the American Protective Association, who, among other purposes, will be to promote the interests of the manufacturing interests of the United States, and of protecting the same from foreign competition.