Oregon Wool Blankets ... AND ...

Downaline Comforts

The points to be considered in buying bed coverings are quality first, then weight, size and price; satisfaction, good looks and good service always. THERE IS NO RISK IN BUYING

Our Oregon Wool Blankets

Their reputation for solid honesty of materials and workmanship dates back to grandmother's time, and has been held by our keeping far to the front in making of high-grade blankets at the lowest possible prices. ONLY THE BEST SELECTED PURE WOOL IS USED IN THEIR CONSTRUCTION. Our six-pound Oregon wool blankets may cost us much as eight-pound blankets in some makes; but, being pure, fine wool, will be warmer, with the advantage of light weight for handling and laundering. If what you want is not in the following list, we are sure to have it, and in the best of its kind.

Full-Size Oregon Wool Blankets

White at $5.00, $5.50, $6.00, $6.50, $6.90, Plain gray at $4.25 and $5.00 pair. Mottled gray at $4.50, $5.00 to $8.50 pair.

High-Class Fancy Blankets

White, fawn, gray and red, with fancy borders, from $4.60 to $10.00 pair. Fine Wool Crib Blankets

White, with blue or pink borders, full sizes, $2.25 to $7.50 pair. SHEET BLANKETS, white or gray, all grades, from 75c pair up.

Our Genuine Downaline Comforts

Should not be confounded with the many imitations. We are agents for the riginal "GENUINE DOWNALINE" COMFORTS, filled with purest fleecy white fexus upland laminated cotton, all in one piece. Light, clean and odoriess. Not be compared with the many so-called 'downaline' comforts that are flooding he markets. No waste or lumpy cottons or sliding of cotton in our downaline comforts. Prices, $2.50, $2.75, $2.50, $3.50 and $4.00 each. Covering, fine ateen, or slikalines, piain or floral designs.

DROWNED IN BULL RUN.

Fate of a Horseman Who Tried to Shepard Gould, 18 years of age, who lived with his parents near Gresham, was drowned in Bull Run River near its junction with Sandy River, seven miles below the headworks, last Saturday afternoon about 6 o'clock.

He was going on horseback from his home to spend Sunday with his sister, who lives at Bramhail's mill, two miles east of Bull Run River. At the Sandy River bridge, on the pipe line road, he met Mr. Pulien, his brother-in-law, who was going to Gresham, and learned that was feared. Messrs, Phelps and Moulton began a search in the stream, and soon found the lifeless body of the young man in the water, lodged among the rocks of a rapid a short distance below the place where it is supposed he tried to ford the river. It was evident that Gould had ridden his horse into deep water and that he had been thrown from the saddle and drowned.

Fitch is an important feature in the case. They were seen to part at il o'clock. He said he went straight home.

There was evidence at the first trial by Chief McLauchlan that Clay Morse admitted at the police station that the conversation here referred to between him St. Rayner Case to Go to Bar conversation here referred to between nime and McDaniel occurred, but Morse's version of it was that McDaniel asked him if he noticed what time he came home and on his saying, "No," McDaniel said, "Well, never mind, don't say anything about it."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY, COMPLAINANT

Change of Transcript of McDaniel Evidence Will Be Brought Before Grievance Committee.

District Attorney Chamberlain will file charges against Henry St. Rayner, at-torney, with the grievance committee of the Bar Association, because of the change made in the transcript of testi-mony in the Frank E. McDaniel case after it had left the hands of the official court reporter, changes, it is asserted, by which important evidence against Mc-Daniel was omitted.

The McDaniel case was tried for the state by R. E. Sewall, as District Attorney, assisted by R. R. Giltner. Mr. Chamberlain was not familiar with the testimony except in a general way, and upon the receipt of the bill of exceptions, which is a voluminous document, he read the matter through carefully so as to ascertain the points to be presented to River by wading and jumping from rock the Supreme Court by his opponent as grounds for an appeal. This occupied considerable time, and the task was finished without anything occurring to excite suspicion that the record was anything but traveling the longer route by way of the country bridge.

The McDaniel trial was reported by Miss L. M. Morden, and she it was who extended the testimony and objections contained in the bill of exceptions from the stenographic notes taken at the trial. Miss Morden has an office in the Chamber of Commerce building. of Commerce building. Several weeks ago on Monday morning and then the worst she received a call from another young woman stenographer who is employed by a lawyer in the same building, who rested and obtained the loan of a black carbon sheet for a typewriter. The sheet was returned after having been used and Miss Morden upon upon carelessly holding it up to the light noticed the words, "evi-dence of Dr. M. McLauchlan." Examining further she read that the evidence re lated to the statements made by Frank E. McDaniel to Chief of Police McLauchlan. The discovery occasioned surprise as she was certain the carbon sheet when it left her possession was perfectly new, and after thinking things over for a short time. Miss Morden concluded to notify the District Attorney of the discovery and ascertain what it meant,

Mr. Chamberlain, on being shown the carbon sheet, proceeded to compare the testimony of Chief McLauchian in the bill of exceptions with the notes in the possession of Miss Morden with the result that the following question and an gwer were found to be missing:

Part of Transcript Missing. "Q. Please state what he said."
"A. I asked him what time he got up In the morning and he said about & o'clock that when he was dressing Clay (Morse) got up at the same time and when he was dressing he said, 'Clay, do you know what time I got home last night?' and Clay said, 'No,' and McDaniel's answer was, 'Well it don't make any differ Upon discovering this omission, the bill it was seen that two sheets containing part of the evidence of Chief McLauchlan had been removed, and two others substituted in their place, which read the same as the originals, only that this ques-tion and answer were left out. The substituted sheets were spaced the same as the rest of the work, and made to cor-respond in detail in every manner so that nothing unusual would be noticed.

Sheets Written for St. Rayner. The young woman who borrowed the black carbon sheet from Miss Morden freely admitted having written the two sheets for Mr. St. Rayner, contending, however, that she was entirely innocent in the transaction. She explained that Mr. St. Rayner called at the office where she is employed one afternoon late and after stating that Miss Parker, who usually did his work, was sick, requested her to perform some services for him. The further statement was made that as she always used purple paper, and Mr. St. Rayner desired black, she borrowed a black carbon paper and ribbons, and Mr. St. Rayner showed her how the spacing should be, and where the first word should be at the beginning of each sheet, and the last word upon each sheet. Otherwise he read from the sheets which he beld in his hand, what he wished written, and came back several times, upon different days to have the work done over again. The sheets were written four times before they were satisfactory.

St. Rayner Not Here Mr. St. Rayner is not in the city, and therefore could not be seen to obtain his statement concerning the affair. When interogated by the District Attorney concorning the matter, it is said he at first asserted that the bill of exceptions when delivered by him to the District Attorney was just as it was when he received it from the official reporter, but afterwards acknowledged that two new sheets were put in in place of two sheets that were torn by being caught in the top of his roll-top deak, and that the omission of the quustion and answer was inadventent.

Important Facts Omitted. The time when McDaniel reached his Emerson room on the night of the murder of Clara Stanley,

TO GO TO WALLA WALLA Grand Jury Investigated Yesterday-

State of Sailor Controversy.

The grand jury yesterday investigated the charge of criminal libel against Cap-tain S. B. Hearn, of the British ship Genista, preferred by John Grant, the sailor boarding-house man, the case having been sent from Justice Vreeland's court. No return was made yesterday, but it is expected that one will be made today. The Genista is lying at Astoria with a full crew and ready to go to sea as soon as disposition shall be made of Captain Hearn's case. The Orealia is also lying at Astoria, but she lacks a full crew, She is in no hurry to get away, for her captain and some of her crew are needed as witnesses in cases before the courts over seamen here.

"Yes, the ships are still at Astoria," said W. J. Burns, of Balfour, Guthrie & Co., last night, "and they seem likely to stay there some time, as long as present onditions as to obtaining seamen here reach shipping interests generally, and will certainly cause a bad impression of the port. The present condition of the local wheat market is very much aggravated by lack of tonnage, and there is every prospect that warehouses here will be blockaded before relief can be had. It will therefore come home to everyone interested in the wheat industry that everything that is done to hamper the coming and going of ships will soon make itself felt. Every device is worked to harass and delay ships that do not take saliors through a certain channel, and it has effect on the business of the port."

UP TOWARD THE POLE. Phillips Prospected North of

Fred Phillips, who fitted out the schooner General McPherson for Kotzebue Sound in Portland, three years ago, was in the city yesterday, having re-turned from Wardner, Idaho, where he has been engaged in mining. He has probably the honor of prospecting nearer the North Pole than any other adventurer, as he spent one Summer and a Winter among the Jade Mountains, on the Koo Wak River, 250 miles inland from Kotzebue Sound. He and his particular the state of t ty left the General McPherson in charge of Captain Nellsen and made their way up the river with much labor, as the are large and commodious, and make the stream is rapid and the boat had to be hauled over many rapids by the men, who waded to their hips at times, in the ice-cold water. They found colors every-where, but not in paying quantities, and he feels sure that gold abounds in the region and will be discovered some day.

"The only way to prospect that region," he said, "is to go prepared for a three years' siege. Several small boats should be towed by a steam launch, and food should be taken in on the first trip. The provisions should not consist largely of bacon, and very little salt should accompany the outfit, as scurvy should be guarded against. Fruit and grain foods should form the bulk of the supply.

"The region along the Koo Wak is in-habited only by a few Eskimos, who are now rapidly dying off from scurvy. They had plenty of fresh meat so long as they were only armed with bows and arrows, but when they procured long-range rifles from the white traders on the coast they quickly exterminated the moose and the cariboo, not having sense enough to spare the does or the young.
"The General McPherson venture cost me $8500 in cash. I purchased the craft in San Diego, Cal., for $4500, and brought her here to load. The people with whom I left the vessel at Kotzebue Sound sold off the cargo on the Alaskan coast, and never gave me a cent of the proceeds while wages of the crew and other bills accumulated until the vessel was libelled at Seattle. In my absence the schooner was taken to St. Michael, where the goods were exchanged for a cargo of whisky, which was brought across Behring Sea and sold to the Russian
