THE DAY OF AIONEMENT

SERVICES BEGUN AT TEMPLE BETH ISRAEL.

Rubbi Stephen Wise Prenches an Eloquent Sermon to a Great Congregation.

The services of the Atonement Day were begun inst evening at the Temple Beth Israel. The services are named and Nidre, after the opening song, which dates from the time when the Jews of medieval Europe were compelled to practice the rites of other religions outwardly, while at heart they remained loyal and law-abiding members of the House of Israel. The services were marked by a number of exquisite poetical passages, which have been handed down by Hearew tradition for many conturies. Some of the greatest of the Jewish poets, like Kalir and Solomon Ibu Geliral, have chhanced the beauty of the atonement service with the music of their soul-stirring

Dr. Stephen S. Wise preached the ser Con before a crowded congregation, which included a large number of the non-Jew-ish residents of the city, and his eloquence and broad liberality cres ed a deep

In opening Dr. Wise referred to the "cities of refuge," which the biblical law provided for a man who had slain his sighbor, in order that he might escape the fury of a mob or the passion of an

"This night's service," said Dr. Wise, "provides such cities of refuge for the soul, which files away from the deadly consequences of its shortcomings and transgressions. What these cities of refare we learn from the oft-rep ated maxim of the rabbia, 'Penitence, prayer and charity avert the evil decree.' By decree of a higher power, but the de re !ing and determining of evil as the ruling moran and principle of our lives; meant that by prayer, penitence and char-ity we may bring it to pass that goodness, purity and holiness be enthroned as the signing principles of our existence

Penitence tokens a return to self-not ruckkehr, but einkehr-a return to one's higher, truer seif. Man hath a dual nature, for God hath formed him out of the dust of the earth, and has likewise made im in his own image. Tonight we are bidden to put away the earthy, fieshly aspect of life, to return and cleave unto the Godlike, which dwells within us.

"Prayer, the second of the cities of ref-uge, is an attitude of the soul, and has reference to the constant recognition of God's rule of the world. Prayer should find tokens of thankfulness in days of prosperity and enlargement, resignation in hours of adversity and affliction, begetting strength and heroism from amidst pain and suffering, and translating talents and blessings and riches into opportunities for doing good unto another.

"Charity, the third of the cities of ref-age, signifies not the mere giving of alms to the needy, the succoring of the widow, the helping of the distressed, but is rather in the Hebraic sense charitableness in thought, in speech and in deed. That who leaves this house of God tolight hating his brother in his heart, cherishing an enmity against any man, hath not found peace and atonement with God. As we would that God pardon us on this day of forgiveness, so let us be forbearing, tolerant, charitable, loving toward one another.

"An Eastern legend hath it, when the first of men sinned, he no longer saw the angels who had rejoiced his heart and blessed his vision before his fall. When we sin we shut out the visions of heavenly things before our eyes—nay, more, the things of heaven cease to be. Evil sees evil. May we tonight be as the piotured Queen on an olden canvas, typify-ing faith. Before her marched a messenger tokening penitence, and in her train here followed a host of angels, symboling wood works. So may the soul of every one of us hasten onward and upward to the cities of refuge, the spirit of contrite-ness going before, touching all that is past, a host of good works following prophetic of a future crowned with high

Dr. Wise will preach this morning, and also in the course of the memorial services of the afternoon
