GOING RIGHT AHEAD

No End to Building Season This Year.

WORK IS ACTIVE ON ALL SIDES

Many Business Blocks and Residences Now Building or in Contemplation—On the East Side.

The large number of buildings completed within the past year in Portland are fully occupied, and those to which the closing of the regular building season has not deterred property-owners from going right on and building more houses. The sound of the hammer and saw will, therefore, be heard in Portland all winter, and yet both architects and contractors agree that the summer and fall of 1901 will be still busier in the building line.

A ride on any of the street-car lines will disclose a large number of new residences in various stages of completion, and many of these structures are both costly and imposing.

In the downtown section of the city new-comers notice many fine edifices which are building or have been built within the past year, although Portland people accustomed to improvement, may overlook them. The changes which have occurred within the past two years ago only apparent to those who have been absent during that time, and these returning ones are astonished at the improvements. Standing in front of the Hotel Perkins yesterday, a returned Portlander expressed his astonishment at the changes within his range of vision. There was the elegant five-story block of the Meier & Frank Co., on Fifth, extending from Alder to Morrison. The four-story block recently constructed by Senator Corbett met his gaze at the southwest corner of Fifth and Stark, while the three-story King block, just being completed on the southeast corner of East Third and Washington, the elegant four-story brick of the Falling estate had taken the place of a quarter block full of frame business houses, and on looking up Washington street, the new Peckham brick met his eye; while at the northeast corner of Washington and Park streets, a brick block full of music stores had superseded the frame dwellings, forced away by the inexorable tide of progress. Such things would not be noticed by the every-day pedestrian, who feels annoyed at the way the sidewalks and streets are blocked by the busy builders on his path.

On the East Side.

The building season on the East Side is not completed, several new contracts having been let and new dwellings having just been started. At Sunnyside, Chester Wood has completed two attractive dwellings on the corner of East Thirty-fourth and East Yamhill streets at a cost of nearly $4000. In that locality also several more dwellings are talked of. Nine lots are being filled upon either side of Belmont street for building purposes. In Brooklyn, where improvements have been very tardy, O. Bly has started work on the foundation of a dwelling on East Eighth street which will cost $2000. Alongside this cottage a lot has been sold and a $2500 dwelling will be erected in a short time. W. Wetzel is finishing a cottage on East Eighth street, costing $1000. Anna M. Anderson is having a two-story cottage put up on Milwaukee street, between Beason and last week. He had prepared to retire and had donned his night shirt. He sat down in front of the fire and lighted his pipe and prepared to have a smoke before retiring. He was soon aroused by a flame of fire creeping up on one side of his night shirt. He tried to extinguish it, but before he could do anything the garment was enveloped in flames. He tore at the garment madly in an effort to extinguish the fire, and finally his wife, rushing in the room, discovered her husband's peril. She knew in a minute what to do. She seized a bucket of water and doused it over him, extinguishing the fire instantly. The change from the heat of the burning garment to the cold water was very sudden, but Mr. Shetterly had to stand it. He escaped without serious burns.

Joint Meeting.

An interesting joint meeting of Summer Post and Summer Women's Relief Corps, G. A. R., was held Saturday night at the hall of the former on Union avenue. The post had invited the corps to spend the evening in the hall. It was a most interesting and profitable meeting. The members of the Relief Corps, and then called on different members of the post for addresses, beginning with some of the veterans of the Civil War who were not respected in Oregon as they were in the Eastern States, and observed that the Soldiers' Home at Roseburg was maintained by the government. Professor Pool Sick.

Professor C. H. Pool, who was teacher of district No. 8, was compelled to give up the school temporarily on account of illness. He has gone to Eugene, Ore., to recuperate under the medical care of his brother, Dr. Pool. He has been absent now about three weeks, but word has been received from him that there was no improvement in his case. His friends are much concerned over his condition. Ralph Johnson is supplying his place in the school during his absence.

No Application Made.

No application was made by Postmistress Collins of the Woodstock postoffice, for the office to be made a money-order office, but she received the necessary blanks from the department and was notified to furnish bonds. A great many money orders were sent to people at Woodstock through the Portland postoffice, and it was recommended that it be made a regular money-order office. This, no doubt, will be done in a short time.

East Side Notes.

G. J. Ross, the well-known resident of the East Side, is in Washington with his daughter, Carrie. The latter is employed in the Census Department. Mr. Ross expects to remain in the city for some time. The funeral of Clark Lyons, who was killed by an elevator accident last week, took place yesterday afternoon from his late home at 4 East Ninth street. The services were under the auspices of the relief committee of the Odd Fellows lodge. Policeman Parker was called out to East Thirtieth and East Taylor streets yesterday by a complaint that the intersection was in a dangerous condition and no light was left there to warn people. He found the street impassable and no one would venture to cross it. Mr. Taylor is being improved and the graders have been at work at this point.

TEN YEARS IN ALASKA

J. G. OSUMUND TELLS OF EARLY MINING THERE.

Believes Big Money Can Be Made in Putting Stock on the Lowland Ranges.

A 10 years' residence in Alaska is what James G. Osumund, who is now at the Perkins, can look back to. He went up there in the summer of 1890, and has prospered greatly much all over the territory since that time. He thinks the Yukon and tributaries possess the most inducements for the fortune-hunter, but the man who goes into that country must be prepared for at least a three years' absence from civilization, in order to accomplish anything.

"All the streams emptying into the Yukon," he said, "contain gold, and paying placers can be found all over their banks, but it costs money to get the gold out of the earth in any part of Alaska. In Oregon, or California, 5 cents to the pan will enable a man to make good wages, but the man who goes into that country must be prepared for at least a three years' absence from civilization, in order to accomplish anything.

"When I came down here yesterday," he said, "I was very much surprised to find that the miners had attained a depth of 300 feet on a ledge of quartz ore that runs as high as 50 to the ton in gold, which also carries some silver."

He thinks the Alaska Indians always enjoyed better health before the whites came, as they lived in huts, which were closed tight and devoid of fire. They were very clad in the fur of animals slain in the chase, and seemed to enjoy the cold, rather than shirk from it. Now they have begun to live in houses built after the civilized fashion, and have fire made to keep them warm, while their clothing has also changed from skins to the fabric of the white man. The new mode of life does not agree with them, and as fully 25 per cent of the coast Indians died last year. An epidemic of measles broke out among them, first, and then pneumonia set in. Last year was especially fatal to the Eskimos, and if the three or four epidemics of measles will have been well-nigh exterminated.

"I believe the Ketchikan country will come to be known as a gold-producer, and also the region back of Valdez. In this latter locality mining can be pursued nearly the year around, as the coast breezes keep the air moist and comparatively free from extreme cold."

"I also believe that the south coast of the peninsula will one day become a great grazing ground for horses and cattle, as there are thousands of square miles of low level country, where the redtop grass grows waist high, and cattle can do no thrive in this region, as they soon begin to suffer from footrot, but the horses and cattle keep fat the year around. Several hundred head of cattle are kept in that vicinity, and the owners are making big money, finding a ready market among the adjacent mines for their beef, at 15 to 25 cents a pound. The cattle men of this region within the next 20 years will make heavy profits on their investment, as the stock can be kept with little or no expense, and the range is practically unlimited."

RAN INTO BRICK WAGON.

Two Stylish Turnouts Slightly Shattered.

Scraps of harness, bits of buggy timber and patches of hair scattered over a small space on the Section Line road, a few hundred yards east of the "Seven Corners," a few mornings ago, created much wonderment among passers. There had evidently been a collision there, but who had been to blame, and for what reason, called the Chicago on the Alaskan peninsula, and will arrange to take a stamp mill back with me when I return north in March. I consider the Chicago such a valuable property that I have no desire whatever to place it, or any part of it, on the market. There are many thousands of dollars' worth of rich ore in sight, and the miners have attained a depth of 300 feet on a ledge of quartz ore that runs as high as 50 to the ton in gold, which also carries some silver."

TRAIN WRECK IN WASHINGTON

One Man Killed and Two Others Sustained Serious Injuries.

SPOKANE, Nov. 15.—A fatal wreck occurred on the Spokane Falls & Northern Railway at 4 P. M. yesterday, two miles south of Dream Station. One man was killed and two others sustained serious injuries. The train, the regular south-bound freight, consisted of eight cars and a caboose. When at the point where the tragedy occurred the rails spread because of the action of the snow and rain under the ties, and four cars were thrown from the track and raced down a rather steep grade. The engine and tender were left on top of the grade, and the remaining four cars, the four cars which were wrecked were loaded with lime.

German Soldiers Must Be Frugal.

McClure's Magazine.
Small as is the wage received by the German soldier, yet the army regulations forbid him to squander it. Frugality is part of the training. Each soldier places his money in a little bag suspended from a string around his neck. At any time during inspection the officer may demand to have the bags opened, and if it is found that any soldier spends his 5 cents a day wages too rapidly—think of the small amount of money which he has for 5 cents a day—he is reprimanded and punished. He must make his wages, small as they are, cover his expenses; he must not spend them instantly for beer.

November Flower Talk.
Eben E. Rexford, in Harper's Bazar.
I have found dry earth a very good covering for roses, and it is more easily obtained than either of the other coverings I have named. I should advise bending the bushes down in such a manner that they may be covered all over with the dry earth. Then you may economize with covering material. Then bank them with the dried soil you can get. Sand is excellent. Cover them to the depth of four or five inches. Then give each bush a roof of boards to turn rain. If this is not done water often soaks into the covering and is retained there until severe injury is done to the plant. If one cannot cover plants with earth, hay, cornstalks or evergreen branches will do very well. Be sure to see that every portion of the bushes is covered, for if they are exposed at one place they will be injured quite as much as that part as they would be if exposed. If the bushes are large, old, and stiff, it is a good plan to heap a considerable amount of earth about the base of the plant, over which it will be an easy matter to curve the branches without breaking them, as is often done when they are abruptly bent.

The ideal covering for tea-roses is composed entirely of peat-bark, mixed with evergreen branches. Make a pen of boards about the plants eight or ten inches deep, and fill with leaves. If rainy weather sets in after this covering is put on, put
