DIED IN A JURY BOX

Frederick H. Kinsey Stricken With Apoplexy.

JUROR IN THE KUETEMEYER TRIAL Was Being Questioned by an Attorney When He Fell Over in His Seat.

Frederick H. Kinsey was stricken with apoplexy in Judge George's courtroom shortly before 10 o'clock yesterday morning, and died within a few minutes. He was one of the regular panel of jurors and had just taken his seat in the jury-box with 11 others in the Kuetemeyer murder case, and had answered a few questions propounded by Ed Mendenhall, attorney for the defense, when his head suddenly fell back, and at the same moment he felt himself being held tightly by the arm and uttered a groan. By direction of Judge George, Mr. Kinsey was carried into the room of the clerk adjoining the courtroom, and Drs. S. Whiting and E. H. Thornton were telephoned for, but the end came so quickly that Mr. Kinsey was dead when they arrived.

Several of the jurors, M. J. MacLachan and Mr. Bartel assisted in carrying the stricken man into the office of the clerk and placed him on the couch. He breathed heavily and was unable to speak. Word was sent to Coroner Rand, who also responded with haste, and the body was removed to the morgue, but it was decided not to hold an inquest.

Mr. Kinsey resided with his family at 624 East Ankeny street, and to Judge George was assigned the task of informing his wife of the fatal occurrence. He summoned her by telephone and as gentlemanly as possible told her that something of a very serious nature had happened to her husband. Mrs. Kinsey came at once to the Court House, and arrived just as the body of her husband was being carried out of the building, but she was interrupted just as she had ascended the steps by Dr. Rand, and ushered into County Judge Calk's office, so that she would not be shocked by the scene. She asked if she could see her husband, and Dr. Rand answered in the negative, telling her he was very sick, and by degrees prepared her for the worst. Mrs. Kinsey, on realizing the truth, uttered a shriek of despair. She appeared dazed, and for a time refused to be comforted.

In the meantime Cord Semplake, Deputy County Clerk, who is a neighbor of the family, heard of the occurrence, and, thinking it would not be well for Mrs. Kinsey to come over alone, he telephoned to her daughter, who is a teacher in Stephens School, advising her that something had taken place, and that her presence was required. She was met at the car by Mr. Semplake, and with her mother proceeded to the undertaking parlor of Edward Holman, whence they were sent home in a carriage. The whole affair was an impressive and sad one, and for a time cast a gloom in Court House circles.

It is not known Mr. Kinsey was subject to such attacks, and for that reason his sudden death was all the more surprising. Mr. Kinsey visited the residence of Semplake Monday evening, and appeared to be in good health and spirits. Yesterday morning, before court convened, he chatted pleasantly with acquaintances. After stepping to his seat with the jury, he went for his overcoat, and it was on his return that he clutched the bellie by whom he was seated, as if he was seeking help. Court was adjourned for a time. Frederick H. Kinsey was about 50 years of age, and is well known in Portland, having resided here for about 25 years. He was employed in the O. R. & N. Co.

MOTHER AGAINST HER SON

FEATURE OF TRIAL OF W. A. KUETEMEYER.

She Has Hired an Attorney to Assist in the Prosecution of the Young Man—Jury Secured.

The spectacle of a mother assisting the prosecution of her own son is the feature of the trial of W. A. Kuetemeyer for the murder of his stepfather, William Linn Robertson, who, with her husband, was in attendance in court, sitting near him. His attorneys are Ed and A. R. Mendenhall. The time yesterday was principally consumed in selecting a jury, as follows: John A. Palmquist, F. M. Sutford, George Spring, Patrick Lynch, John R. Shaver, Fred Sautz, S. Upham, F. J. Streibig, Philip Jenkins, Charles Fremeder, J. G. Gruner and W. E. Peacher.

The defense accused L. Russell, George Robertson, E. H. Virgil, E. Hallingby, C. H. Hill, S. A. Walter, J. R. N. Sellwood, L. J. Kelly. The District Attorney accused J. E. Smith, Chauncey Ball, E. M. Faget, E. Ogden, Mitchell, George U. Sherwood, and the court excused Paul Van Fridagh, C. C. Smith, Owen Caraher and William Eckles.

The jury was sworn. Judge George informed them that they would probably be kept together during the trial, and told any juror whose health might be affected by being confined, or who had any good reason to be excused to inform the court of the fact. Mr. Fremeder said it was impossible for him to be away from his business that length of time, and stated that his wife was not very well; they were business men, and had given their word of honor, and ought not to be deprived of their liberty.

The jury was sworn and killed by Kuetemeyer on the evening of September 27, on Sauvie's Island. H. J. and F. V. E. Epperson, who accompanied him, were jointly indicted with him for the shooting, although they took no part in the shooting. They were afterward released on their own recognizance, although the indictment against them still stands.

Mr. Manning made the opening statement to the jury for the prosecution. He said the state would show that Kuetemeyer, accompanied by the Epperson boys, went out in the nature of a hunt, and that Kuetemeyer was the one who shot and killed Robertson. He said that Kuetemeyer was the one who shot and killed Robertson, and that he was the one who shot and killed Robertson.

In his opening statement for the defense, Ed Mendenhall began by saying: "I never believed until now that the prosecution thought there was anything in the case." Counsel next referred to the parties whom he saw in the background in the case, and said they had unsuccessfully ransacked the island for witnesses. Getting down to the merits of the case, he stated that Lucretia was a vicious desperado and an ex-convict, who had been in the state prison for a long time, and that he was the one who shot and killed Robertson.

He told how the ill feeling grew, and stated that Lucretia constantly paraded around the island with a pistol and threatened to take Kuetemeyer's life. He told how Lucretia persisted in trespassing on Mrs. Greenman's land, leaving the gate open and allowing strange horses and cattle to enter. It was to warn him of cattle to enter, it was to warn him of cattle to enter, it was to warn him of cattle to enter.

He stated that Kuetemeyer went to meet him and took the Eppersons along as witnesses, when, counsel said, Lucretia pulled his revolver and tried to kill Kuetemeyer, who shot him in self-defense.

exposed to the rain, which, falling on this level surface soon forms a little hollow in the center. The water accumulating there, showing the line of least resistance, soon reaches the heart of the tree, destroying it. Now, if these men would use a little common sense, they would make a slanting cut at an angle of about 45 degrees. The rain would then strike the cut obliquely, and the water would run off. This requires only a little more work, but would save many beautiful shade trees, the pride of this city.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

"A Divorce Colony" by the Frawleys Tomorrow Night.
The play to be presented by Mr. Frawley tomorrow night is "A Divorce Colony," by Sidney Rosenfeld, which was written especially for Mr. Frawley. It was recently produced for the first time on any stage at San Francisco and scored an unequivocal success. The author calls it a farcical romance of South Dakota, and this, together with the title, affords a clue to its theme, though it might with almost equal propriety have been called "A Case of Soap," as that useful toilet article has a very important bearing in the trend of the story.

The principal characters in the comedy are people who are eager to dissolve matrimonial bonds which are galling, and the renewal of old acquaintances and the discovery of long-lying alliances leads to a series of incidents which are enough to perplex the keenest of divorce procurers. Everything turns out all right in the end, however, and the audience goes away delighted.

"Uncle Josh Spruceby."
The old-time favorite, "Uncle Josh Spruceby," will be at the Metropolitan Theater a week, commencing Sunday, November 25, with special Thursday matinee. This popular play is now in its tenth successful season. The charm of the play is in its rustic simplicity. The scenes are taken from Vermont rural life, and the character of Uncle Josh as the honest old farmer is true to life. The story is told in a manner that is irresistible. Mr. Lewis has staged the piece in splendid shape, and it affords ample opportunity for displaying the startling mechanical effects which are introduced. Thirty-five people are in the company. A big parade and band concert is given daily at noon by the concert band which is carried by the company.

"At the White Horse Tavern."
The Marquon Grand is to have "At the White Horse Tavern" next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. This is considered one of the most successful comedies, and the company which has been selected for its presentation is said to be one of the best and most evenly balanced. Some of the prominent people are Minerva Dorr, Frank M. Norcross, Fred Mower, Bernice Norcross and about 15 others.

A Correction.
ROBEUR, Or. Nov. 19.—(To the Editor.)—I notice in your Salem dispatch, published in Sunday's Oregonian, that "A. J. Wyand, aged 65 years, and an inmate of the Oregon Soldiers' Home, was received at the Asylum," etc. So far as his being an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, the dispatch is in error. Mr. Wy-
