What Villard Did.

New York Sun. The death of Henry Villard removes from the scene the last of the conspicuous and interesting figures identified with the great transcontinental railroads.

The creative minds of all these colossal enterprises have passed away, but the vast properties that they called into being remain, and even at the moment challenge the records of the world for their magnitude and the extent of their prosperity.

Villard was a great genius, a born financier and a striking example of what has been possible in this country to the conjunction of natural aptitude with fruitful opportunity. In his earlier days these opportunities were fewer than they are now, and the men who successfully seized upon them became correspondingly more conspicuous. Today they divide public attention. But in his time Villard ploughed a furrow broad and deep, overcame great obstacles, stumbled and plunged headlong in disaster, recovered and went ahead again, undaunted. Nothing could quell that stubborn spirit, nothing repress or restrict that indefatigable soul.

James Burns, a switchman, whose left leg and arm were crushed in the railroad yards at Huntington Saturday evening, died from his injuries.

ROASTED TO DEATH

Engine Wiper Burned in His Clothes.

GREASY GARMENTS TOOK FIRE

Terrible Fate of Ammon Zahner in the Car Barn at St. Johns Station.

Ammon Zahner, aged 21, was burned to death at St. Johns yesterday morning. He has been employed as wiper in the roundhouse of the City & Suburban Railway, and his clothing caught fire while he was in a pit under one of the motors, according to the indications. His body was found burned to a crisp by Conductor Monahan, who reached the scene at 8 o'clock, the accident having occurred about an hour before.

Zahner's clothing was necessarily smeared with oil and was, therefore, very inflammable, and the theory of those conversant with the case is that his jumper caught fire while he was in the pit, and in a moment the young man was in a blaze. He sprang to the floor above and endeavored to reach some water near by, tearing his jumper off his body as he did so. He stumbled and fell within a few feet, however, and was unable to rise. Every particle of clothing was burned off his body, and Zahner himself burned beyond recognition.

The remains were brought to the morgue and an inquest held yesterday afternoon, at which a verdict of accidental death was rendered.

Deceased was a native of Indiana, and resided in St. Johns for the past four years with his brother-in-law, J. H. Duffy, who manages a match factory there. He was known to be quiet and steady, but has been subject to fits of epilepsy until recently. He, however, was not suffering from this complaint on this occasion, as he would not have been able to struggle for his life in the manner he did. The remains will be taken to Eugene today for interment, according to instructions from his father, David Zahner, who lives at that point.

Bishop Cranston and Dr. King.

PORTLAND, Nov. 21.—(To the Editor.)—If you have room, permit me to say in The Oregonian that it seems to me the remark reported made by Bishop Cranston in reply to Dr. King's criticism of the pronunciation of "Phillipine" was playful in character on the part of the bishop, as Dr. King is known to be a stern Methodist as a defender of the republic against Romanism. The applause would then be occasioned by an apt reply. Things in the committee are apt free and easy, and need not be given to the press. I may mistake in this supposition, but I do know that Webster says neither Phillipine nor Phillippen, but "Hilip-in," the accent on first syllable, and short in the last.

Death of Mrs. H. D. Chamberlain.

Mrs. H. D. Chamberlain died at her home, 507 East Grant street, Wednesday night, of typhoid fever. The family formerly lived in Lane County, and made its home in Portland for the past three years. The deceased was 37 years of age. The funeral will take place today from the residence, and Lone Fir cemetery will be the place of interment.

Good News Spreads Fast

Our small announcement in Wednesday's Telegram of a special opportunity to secure an overcoat at a five-dollar saving has spread over town like wild fire. The first man that came and took away was so well pleased that he spread the good news among his friends, and they in turn each sent their friends, and so the buying has continued.

It's unusual just at this season to be able to get such values. These came to us direct from the manufacturer very unexpectedly and we gave the chance to you just as we got it.

Men's new and stylish Oxford Overcoats elegantly made up, fancy inside back, satin-lined sleeves, satin-piped seams, velvet collar, silk sewing throughout. A high-grade garment made up by one of the best overcoat makers to sell at $15. We bought the lot so as to be able to price them to you at $10.

Any man who has an overcoat need and misses this chance might as well light his cigar with a five-dollar bill and call it economy. The chance lasts as long as we have any coats left; but you better come today.

Men's Plain or Fleece-Lined Underwear, 50c a garment.
Men's Fine Jersey Ribbed and Merino Underwear at $1.00.
Men's Natural Wool, Non-Shrinkable Underwear at $1 and $1.50.

MEIER & FRANK CO.

South American Peace. South American diplomatic representatives in Washington foresaw in the exchange of visits between the Presidents of Brazil and Argentina the dawn of a period of amity in Latin America. They assume that these two great powers are approaching a mutual ground on which they can serve as arbiters and the conservators of peace among kindred communities which have been disturbed from time to time by hickering and quarrels. In a word, such an understanding will be of great moment not only to the republics directly concerned, but also to the nations beyond seas which have commercial intercourse with them. Petty disputes exercise an influence outside the limitations of the countries involved, and states which have dealings with them are more or less indirectly affected. If Brazil and Argentina can reach a common ground for the preservation of harmony—and only they as the great powers of South America can thwart aggressions and prevent clashes—they will establish a remarkable condition around them and be assisted by every commercial interest which seeks markets on that continent.

There appears to be no real ground to apprehend the unification of the South American people for the discouragement of trade with this country. Such has been the impression which unfriendly interests have sought to convey, but representatives of those countries in Washington allow no opportunity to escape of showing that there is a cordial feeling in the communities of the South American continent for those to the north of it. It would seem that these reports emanate from foreign sources with the aim of opening a channel for establishing commercial relations with nations which deal largely with the United States. Altogether the possibility of the formation of a Brazilian-Argentine bond for the maintenance of peace and friendship in South America is one of the most promising signs for American trade.
