Miner Tells of Natural Wonders at Head of Grande Ronde River.

G. H. Beck, a prospector, who has spent the past Summer and Fall in the Blue Mountains, about the head of the Grande Ronde River, was in the city yesterday on his way to San Francisco. He reported having put in a very pleasant season, as the climate was delightful, the hunting and fishing excellent, while "float" and other evidences of the presence of gold were abundant. He and his partner found a 10-foot ledge of quartz which assays prove worth $4 per ton, so he is satisfied with the financial results of his efforts. They found time to tunnel in a distance of 50 feet, and are therefore confident of a permanent ledge. "There is lots of gold about the head of the Grande Ronde," he said, "but there is very little show for a poor man in the placers, as the water has long since been taken up and the gold is of the flour order, being very fine." He mentions one large placer mine, the Camp Carsonn, which has 27 claims in connection. Ten giants were in operation on these diggings last season, and as many as 100 men were employed. The mines belonged to a French company, which has recently been bought out by a local firm who will probably run them next Summer.

A visit to these diggings he thinks would be an interesting one for a geologist, as the bank has been torn away in places to a depth of 200 feet, and the granite bedrock is scooped out as though by long action of the waters of some prehistoric river. The remaining bank shows seams of coal and of petrified woods, the latter as if they were grown in a tropical clime. Palm leaves, the product of the tropics, have been imbedded in the formation in many places and the shape of the leaves can be distinctly traced in the face of the rock, although the leaves themselves have long since passed out of existence. These indications Mr. Beck thinks prove that what is now a range of mountains in the temperate zone, was once a sluggish river in a tropical clime, and he favors the opinion that the earth at one time of its existence, took a sudden lurch that placed the poles where the tropics now are, and vice versa.
