MURDERED A CHINAMAN.

Refuses Shoot One Celestial and Bent Another.

The police were busy yesterday running out clues in trying to find the man who shot and killed Jo Way Sow, a Chinese hop-gatherer, in his cabin at Raleigh, Washington County, last Monday night, and also the men who assaulted Loo How, a man with Jo Way Sow at the time of the murder. The motive for the crime was revenge, because Jo Way Sow and Loo How gathered hops at 5 cents less than their white competitors.

About 11 o'clock Monday night E. R. Welch, a farmer, who lives at Raleigh, was awakened by Loo How knocking at his door. The Chinaman was badly battered about the head, and he was nearly speechless with fright, but he managed to gasp out: "Man kill Jo Way Sow." Convinced that some tragedy had taken place, Welch aroused his farm hands, and the party proceeded to the Chinaman's hut, where they found Jo Way Sow dead. He had been shot. The hut bore marks of a furious struggle, and three sticks stained with blood were on the floor. Loo How said that he and Jo Way Sow gathered hops, and so far as he knew they had no enemy in the place. Four men broke into the hut, and one man shot at Jo Way Sow, saying he did so "that settles you, anyhow." Then the men cubbed How and he remembered no more.

The Sheriff of Washington County was communicated with, and seeing that Loo How required surgical attention, Mr. Welch hitched up his horse and drove the wounded man to police headquarters in this city. Here Loo How lay in bed, being taken to a Chinese lodging house at Second and Taylor streets, and became hysterical when the police suggested that he be taken to a hospital. "Me want Chinese doctor," the wounded man pleaded, and he had his way. Later Dr. Rand examined Loo How, and stated that he would recover in a short time. Then the Chinaman's mind got clearer, and he told the police that he recognized the voice of the man who shot his friend, and he named a tradesman at Raleigh. Armed with this information, Deputy District Attorney Spencer, County Sheriffs Meyers and Frazier and Detectives Snow and Kerrigan started for the scene of the murder.

The man mentioned by Loo How as having fired the fatal shot was found by the police and detained, but as he proved a clear all right, he was afterward released. Jo Way Sow's body reached this city last night, and it was found he had been shot in the neck with a 45-caliber bullet. His jacket, containing $7.05, was found outside the hut, about 100 yards away.

GAME DECLARED OFF.

Multnomah Will Not Play the Salem Club Next Saturday.

The Salem-Multnomah football game for Saturday was declared off last evening. Sheriff Durbin, manager of the Salem team, was in Portland yesterday endeavoring to bring matters to a final issue between the two teams. The game had originally been scheduled for Friday in Salem. When several of their players were found who could not make the Salem trip, the Multnomah Club officials made a counter proposition to play in Portland Saturday.

Last evening, at the conference between Sheriff Durbin and George McMillan, acting manager of the Multnomah team, the latter made a proposition to play the Salem team games in Portland December 15 and January 1, urging that Saturday's game be postponed for the reason that there would be insufficient time in which to advertise it, and make it a success. Sheriff Durbin refused to consider this counter proposition. "Either," said he, "play Saturday or not at all. With that ultimatum he left the club. Consequently, the game is off, since the Multnomah Club officials in charge of the team in President Calk's absence will refuse to accept the responsibility of pulling off the match Saturday, as the city without sufficient notice or advertising."

One Adjective Omitted.

PORTLAND, Or., Dec. 3.—(To the Editor.)—Permit me to make a slight correction in the report of my sermon of yesterday morning. I am quoted as saying that evolution, "as a scheme for dispensing with God and Christianity, was not only publicly repudiated over their own names by more than 90 of the leading scientists of Great Britain a few years ago, but probably is repudiated today by the great mass of scientists and scholars in all countries." The quotation is correct, excepting that it should have been "natural evolution," and the statement credited to E. F. Barr, D. D., LL. D., author of "Ecco Coelum." I am aware that there is a theory of the evolution of man that is called "Christian Evolution," but it is the same old thing, only it has been repudiated. In treating of anything so exact as the so-called Christian evolution, I do not want to even leave out an adjective.

OREGON IN 1830

First Book Descriptive of the Pacific Northwest.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION HAS IT

It Contains Two Maps, With Odd Names of Rivers—Written by Hall J. Kelly, A. M., and Published in Boston.

Librarian D. P. Leach has just secured for the Portland Library Association a copy of what is believed to be the first book about Oregon ever printed, of which he has been advertising for three years. It is entitled "A Geographical Sketch of That Part of North America Called Oregon, Containing an Account of the Indian Title, the Nature of a Right of Sovereignty, the First Discoveries, Climate and Seasons, Face of the Country and Mountains, Natural Divisions, Physical Appearance and Soil of Each; Forests and Vegetable Productions; Rivers, Bays, etc.; Islands, etc.; Animals, the Disposition of the Indians and the Number and Situation of Their Tribes. Together With an Essay on the Advantage Resulting from a Settlement of the Territory."

In the preface it is stated that "the sketch has been prepared for the benefit of the friends of the Oregon Colonization Society, as well as of those of mankind in general." The book, which consists of 80 pages, was written by Hall J. Kelly, A. M., was printed in Boston in 1830, and has attached two maps, an old outline map of the country between the Pacific and the headwaters of the Missouri, drawn by H. T. Kelly, showing the Columbia River with its main branches, Lewis River (Snake), and Clark's River, and the Multnomah River (Willamette), and an outline of the Coast and Cascade Ranges, with Mounts Baker, "Regnier," Hood and Jefferson located. The names of the lakes and harbors along the coast are given, and Deer Island and Wyppah Island (now Sauvie's Island), are marked, but no town or settlement appears on the map, but the locations of a number of Indian villages are marked. The second map is much more complete, and gives a representation of Oregon, from the best authorities," but is neither dated nor signed.

There are a number of forts marked on this map, as Fort Union, Fort Vancouver, Nisqually, etc., and the names of many rivers, etc., are very different from those now in use, as "Walla Walla" for Willamette, "Columbia" for Sandy, "Killmoun" for Tillamook, "Rogue" for Clackam, "Sapin" or Lewis for Great Snake, for Snake, and many more of the same kind.

The author was evidently an expansionist, as the book concludes with the following paragraph: "These hastily-written observations must be concluded with the remark that all nations who have planted colonies have been enriched by them. England acquired a supremacy of the ocean and her national influence by it. America has a better opportunity and fairer prospects of success to emulate such examples. She can set up in business her full-grown and more affectionate children nearer home, and on a richer inheritance, and can receive to herself greater benefits. The present period is propitious to the experiment. The free governments of the world are fast progressing to the consummation of moral excellence, and embracing within the scope of their policies the benevolent and meliorating principles of humanity and reform. Convinced of the utility and happy consequences of establishing the Oregon colony, the American Republic will protect and cherish it, and thus enlarge the sphere of human felicity and extend the peculiar blessings of civil polity, and of the Christian religion to destitute and destitute nations."

BOTH EXPERT BOXERS.

Promise of a Close, Lively Contest Between Denny and Riley.

Martin Denny, who is matched to box Jimmy Riley at the Exposition Building Friday evening will leave his training quarters tomorrow evening for the baths. There he will pass his time until the eve of the contest, talking light exercise, so as to keep below 125 pounds, the weight at which he will enter the ring. Speaking of his chances last evening, Denny said: "I am a sure winner, but I hate to be made heavy favorite over Riley, who is a strong, aggressive boxer, with a fine show to win from any one of his weight. His contests with Cocker Tweedie, 15 rounds; Jimmie Lawler, 15 rounds; Young Corbett, 10 rounds; Doc Flyn, 8 rounds, and other men of less note too numerous to mention, have demonstrated this. I like to best men, however, with good reputations and records, as it always assists a fellow to get other matches. You can bet that I will win."

Riley, when told of his opponent's confident statements, laughed and said: "Wait until Friday, and he will get the biggest surprise he ever ran up against. That is all I have to say."

MORE OLD RELICS.

Brought Across the Plains by a Thrifty Housewife.

TURNER, Or., Dec. 2.—(To the Editor.)—Reading in The Weekly Oregonian of October 2 an article "Recent Accessions to Historical Collection," mention is made of a "rolling pin made by Fleming Byars, father of W. H. Byars of Salem, in Indiana in 1838, and brought to Oregon in 1838." We can "see" the Historical Society's rolling pin relic and go them one better.

Mrs. M. has now in everyday use a rolling pin made in 1832 by an old negro slave, then owned by Robert Officer of Clay County Missouri, brother of the late James Officer, who formerly lived on the Molalla River in Clackamas County, Oregon in 1836. This company attempted the so-called Meek's cutoff route.

Mrs. M. has also a "flat-iron" (saddle, smoothing iron), given to Miss Nancy Officer before her marriage to C. C. Cooley, in 1834, by her aunt, Vina Casey, which iron accompanied the rolling pin to Oregon.

She has also a spinning wheel, made by "Uncle" Charles Craft, in Salem, about the year 1836. Mr. Craft was one of the 1846 Meek's cutoff company. The wheel is in running order and Mrs. M. understands its manipulation. For the information of young people of today I will say that this sort of wheel was not used to "spin around a corner" on, and run down pedestrians. It was used to spin yarn, stocking yarn, such as stockings and socks were knit of in those ancient and unfashionable days. In those days, now about obsolete, there were the sort of women Solomon had in mind when he said, "She weareth wool and flax, and worketh willing with her hands."

She has also a Bible, printed in 1839, a "companion de voyage" with the fiction and the rolling pin. This Bible shows that the word "trespasses" in the Lord's Prayer, in the sixth chapter of Matthew, was changed to "debts" prior to 1838. In older Testaments it reads: "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." The words "debts" and "debtors" were not used. Many people of today deny this, but investigation will prove it true. And among some other relics we have a hunter's knife and a wooden sugar bowl, made on the Coquille River, by the first white man who was ever in Coos County.

There is much of historical interest in old relics, and we have taken some care to preserve a few of such as have fallen into our hands. But most people, especially young people, fail to appreciate and preserve such things, and many interesting and valuable specimens are thereby lost; and even when relics are preserved, their history, which adds very materially to their interest and value, is often lost. Many are lost in the frequent moving and migrations of the restless, roving Americans. Families seldom stay long enough in one place to accumulate interesting relics. In moving from place to place, these things are inconvenient to carry and care for, and are left, sold or given away and pass into unappreciative hands.

The average American rocks little for his family history. His great-grandfather may have been an anthropoloid ape teetering on the topmost limb of his "family tree," or a job of proto-plasmic mud on the Devonian shore, for aught he cares.
