BUILDING THE DEFENDER

HOW THE ACTUAL WORK ON THE VACHT WILL BE DONE.

Laylug-Down Process Is Being Prosecuted in a Loft Where Prying Eyes Cannot Penetrate.

Secure from the prying eyes of the public and in the most isolated place in the hig boutshops in Bristol, the job of laying down the new cup defender that is to meet Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock II next August on the Sandy Hook course is being prosecuted with dispatch, says the New York Times. The spot where the laying-down process is going on is in a loft directly over the north boatshop, which gives a clear floor space deftly to ply the long battens in laying out the work in sections, as is the customary proedure preliminary to building large racing It is a system of proving the plans of the design, and if any errors are noted they can be corrected before the actual bending of the frames is put in operation, which frames must conform xactly to the lines laid down. The rooms not only adapted to such work as regards space, but it is also the most isolated of any of the rooms about the boat-building establishment, giving a free hand without interruption to a few of the older nechanics to carry on the job without being disturbed by any one passing in and out. This is the place where sails were made formerly, but, owing to the fact of the quarters being rather narrow for such work, a new sall loft was con-structed near by. While there is no one actually on guard at the door leading to this place of secrets, there is a quiet un-derstanding among the men at work on the laying-down process that their approach to the room is to be cautiously made, while a messenger from the depths

"wide berth," presumably having busi-The real beginning of the work of laying down the new yacht in section lines was commenced in exruest early last week. From reliable sources it is said that this work will be completed in the loft about December E, in order to allow a sufficient margin of time for beginning the construction of the cup defender on the floor of the south shop.

Mold for the Lend Keel.

The lines of the big mold to contain the hot lead of the defender were also laid down in the old sail loft, the job being finished on them Priday morning. Some of the frames for the mold are shaped. In very many particulars the south boatshop, where the defender will take shape, oday presents similar scenes to those that were in evidence there two years ago. Preparations were then going on in the south shop for the contest for the Amer-ica's cup in 1899. Two years ago the yacht Defender, the victor over Valkyrie III in the races sailed in 1896, was resting on the cradie in this shop, having part of her aluminum topsides, which had become corroded, removed, and new plates of the same metal put on to place the craft in condition for a trial horse for the Columbia during the racing season of 1899. The Rainbow, at present undergo-ing tinkering to her bull, does not take up quite as much space in the shop as did the Defender, the craft being 20 feet The same activity is being dis-Played by the riveters and fitters on the Rainbow as was observable on the De-fender; there is just as much raffle about the floor of the shop as there was when the champion of 1865 was being improved, and the rush to get the Rainbow out of the shop is just as great. The Rain-bow's steel plates are fast being set up and riveted, while in the interior of the hull many of the temporary bracings have

In the Other Departments.

In the various other departments of the boatbuilding establishment things have just begun to take on energetic appearances, denoting at once the importance of the work to be done in constructing new cup defender. The heada of these departments have had conferences with the designer relative to plans in working out the various details of construction. In some instances it has been decided to have some of the work done outside of Bristol, yet it may seem to be the policy of the management for some time to have all boat work concentrated in and about the shops. It is only within a few years that marine railways, a sail loft, and a foundry were introduced in Bristol. Some of the small work for the Columbia is well under way in these departments. For instance, in the blacksmith's shop the new sloop's chain plates and many strappings have been turned out, while two large anchors about the size the Columbia had in use were finished the past week. the same shop the heavy section bending tables upon which the new frames will be bent are lined up and ready for use. In the pattern shop wood material for molds to be used in the foundry are piled on benches, while work has already begun on the mold to be used in the casting for the collision bulkhead, which is to be of ordnance metal. Many of the heavy cast-ings are to be of Tobin bronze. The heavier pieces of castings will probably be is not so sure about the sections of keel plates being cast in the Herrshoft foundry, as on Friday it was understood there was a discussion at the office about the matter. For the present the question is held in reserve. The gtermpost and rudder stock will probably be cast at Dridgeout. Bridgeport.

The salimakers are perhaps the busiest mechanics at the boat establishment at present. Some of the head salis are completed, a mainsail has been cut, and the work of making it has begun. The mainwork of making it has begun. The main-sails will have to be finished in sections and put together, owing later to a scar-city of room for sails of such extent. When the 70-footers were built this year number of steel-bulbed angle frames were left over, and now may be put to use in the construction of the cup de fender, but whether or not this will be Putting the Money to Good Use. HELENA Mont. Dec. 24.—The $30,900 that played such a complicatus part in the Senatorial Legislative session two years ago, and which is still in the State Treasurer, Vani Treasurer's vault, may be put to use by the Legislature this week. Members of the Montana Pan-American Commission believe the money could be made availa-ble for an exhibit of Montana's resources at the Buffalo exposition next Summet It is suggested that the money be puid into the state treasury and an appropria-tion of $30,000 additional be made to defray the expenses of an exhibit.
