We fired, and the volley was answered by a similar force. The fire continued for a few minutes, when the shots were again returned with all the fury of a whirlwind.

Mr. J. B. Bond, of Portland, was riding home yesterday morning from Bird Island, and was shot through the side of the carriage by the sharp-shooting members of the opposition. Mr. Bond is a man of intelligence, and is known as a man of peace. His residence is on the outskirts of the city, and he was on his way to his farm. The shots were fired by the members of the opposition, who were returning from a broadcast meeting. The shooting was a sad commentary on the state of affairs in the city, and it is feared that the continued strife will lead to Federal interference.

The Oregon Legislature has adjourned until March 2, and the people of Oregon are looking for some good legislation. The Oregon Tribune has predicted that the Legislature will pass a bill for the establishment of a school of medicine in the State. The Oregon Tribune has long been a friend of education, and has always been in the forefront of the educational movement. The school of medicine is a matter of great importance, and the people of Oregon are looking forward to its establishment with great interest.
