Proprietary Tax Decision.

Froprietary Tax Decision.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 14.—Judge Howe, in the United States District Court here today, rendered an important decision in the case of the Rochester Brewing Company vs. the United States, havolving the taxing of a proprietary medicinal preparation. The court sustained the complainant's contention that the article was not subject to taxation, and rendered a decision against the Govand rendered a decision against the Gov compared a decision against the Gov-erament for $130, the amount paid by the brewing company under protest. The complainant company had sold what they termed a "tonic" put up in bottles, on which had already been paid the reg-ular it per barrel. The revenue de-partment at Washington held that it was taxable as a proprietary medicinal artaxable as a proprietary medicinal article, while the company contended that
