FOR THE FIRST TIME.

Beethoven's C Major Symphony Heard Last Night.

Society was out in force last night for the symphony concert, and evinced more heartiness of enthusiasm in its applause of the work of the orchestra than on any previous occasion. Heretofore the audience has been in the habit of listening attentively and exchanging pleasant comments on the orchestra sotto voce between numbers, but as these could not possibly be heard across the footlights, the orchestra was often left in ignorance as to the real state of feeling that existed in parquette and dress circle. A more demonstrative mood took possession of the audience last night, and the result was seen immediately in the more spirited work of the orchestra. This was in a measure due to the beauty of the second number, the andante cantabile from Tscholkowsky's string quartet op. 11, which completely charmed the audience. It was new in the sense that it had not been given before by the Portland symphony orchestra; but not unfamiliar to those who enjoyed the privilege of hearing the Kneisels play it on one of their visits to the city.

The programme on the whole was, from the popular standpoint, one of the most successful in make-up of any yet attempted by the orchestra. There was a more skillful arrangement of contrasts; and the introduction of the Treble Clef Club under Mrs. Walter Reed was a very pleasant innovation. Their singing of Chamberlain's "The Soldiers' Christmas," Strong's "Now in the Month of May," and Beach's Shakespeare song, "Through the House Give Glimmering Light," quite captivated the audience.

The Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 was given in the spirit of bright and genial optimism in which it was written. The mood of noble self-assertion of his own individuality that marked Beethoven's advance into a new and unexplored province was felt more or less strongly throughout the four movements. The minstrel, with its touches of daring originality and its contagious humor, was rendered with real zest. So much human interest invariably attaches itself to the interpretation of any one of Beethoven's symphonies that an occasion of first presentation, such as this, becomes an event of great significance to local musicians.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATION.

Twenty-one Applicants for State Certificates and Diplomas.

Teachers' examinations for state certificates and state diplomas are in progress in room 21, Park School. The examination to be conducted by County School Superintendent R. F. Robinson, assisted by other members of the County Examining Board, Principals D. A. Groat, of the Park School, and F. Glafke, of the Harrison School. A state certificate is good in any public school in Oregon for five years, and a state diploma for life, unless revoked for unprofessional conduct.

Far state certificates applicants are required by law to have 20 months' teaching experience, at least 15 of which shall have been in the schools of Oregon, and to answer correctly 15 per cent of the questions asked on reading, writing, spelling, written arithmetic, mental arithmetic, geography, United States history, grammar, theory of teaching, civil government, physiology, school law, algebra, book-keeping, composition, physical geography, physics and psychology. To obtain a state diploma they must have had 60 months experience, at least 15 of which shall have been in the schools of Oregon, and write on botany, plane geometry, general history and English literature, in addition to the studies written for a state certificate. Under the present law teachers may take these studies in three successive examinations, taking part at one time and part at another. Yesterday 21 applicants were registered, the majority of whom were completing examinations which were begun last February or August. Others will register tomorrow, when studies are called, which they have not written. The examination will continue until Saturday afternoon.

Hislop's Pure Spices

On guard for such specious terms on your spice tins as "strictly pure," "guaranteed pure," "absolutely pure." Such terms are most commonly a lie. Educate your grocer to give you the best in spices.
