The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 was a severe and catastrophic event that caused significant damage to the city. The earthquake occurred on the morning of April 18, 1906, and was measured at 7.8 on the Richter scale. The earthquake caused widespread destruction, including the collapse of many buildings and the start of fires that destroyed large parts of the city. The event also caused a tsunami that hit the coast of the city, further exacerbating the damage. The earthquake and subsequent events left an estimated 3,000 people dead and over 100,000 homeless. The city was rebuilt in the following years, and the event is considered one of the most significant earthquakes in the history of the United States.
