WORK OF CONGRESS

Record of Fifty-Sixth Session, Which Ends Soon.

EVENTFUL IN MANY RESPECTS

Probably Most Important Legislation Was Not Regaining Area and Changing in Conservative Basis.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. The record of the Fifty-Sixth Congress is a mixed report, being far from complete in the legislative work finished. The press of legislation was continued throughout the house, but few measures were passed which will live in the history of the country as important developments. The work of the Senate was described by some newspapers as one of the most successful in the history of the na-country, while the House was accused of inefficiency.

The report of the Senate showed that the body was more successful in legislation than the House. The Senate passed a number of important bills, including the Freedom of the Press Act, the Homestead Act, and the Reconstruction Act. The House, on the other hand, was accused of inefficiency in passing legislation.
