Shortly after 10 o'clock tonight, with his face plainly betraying his agitation, Dr. Jamieson, the physician in charge, left the residence of General Harris to go to his office to prepare some additional medicines which the gravity of the case demanded. When he returned said that the condition of General Harrison was extremely critical, and that it was impossible to say how long in his weakened condition the patient might be enabled to resist the deepening of the congestion.

During the afternoon the physicians resorted to the oxygen treatment in an endeavor to furnish relief from the con-stant pain and labor of breathing with which the General contended. It cou-sisted in supplying the lungs with pure oxygen. By this means, the ability of the parts of the lungs not congested and inflamed to purify the blood was greatly increased. The congested and inflamed parts are permitted to rest by means of the oxygen treatment, while the parts still unaffected work double. It was this treatment which saved the life of Rudyard Kipling when he suffered his severe illness from pneumonia. Dr. Jamieson, in giving out the public bulletins, has been conservative, and it was thought by some that General Harrison's condition was even more alarming than these bulletins would indicate It was stated this morning that a prominent member of the Harrison family had telephoned from the residence that all hope had been abandoned.

Messages of Inquiry. The widespread interest in the ex-President is shown by the hundreds of messages from all parts of the country which poured into the newspaper offices and the Harrison home during the day. There was not a state or territory that did not make inquiry by wire, and many were the expressions hoping that there might be a turn for the better. Among the many telegrams of inquiry received today by Private Secretary Tibbetts was the following, from the White House: "Washington, March 12.-Will you b good enough to advise me of General Harrison's condition? The President is very much pained to learn by the latest

It is a well-known fact that Lleutenant-Governor McBride is very strongly opposed to any Congressional apportionment at this session. He has so declared publicly, and refuses to recede from his osition. That he wields a great deal of power in the Senate has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of every peron familiar with affairs of the present Senate. The sifting committee having in charge all bills that will in the future he passed upon in the Senate will, in all probability, abide by any expressed wish of the Lieutenant-Governor. Furthermore, Senator Hamilton, of Pierce, is chairman of the committee having charge of Congressional apportionment matters. He is opposed to any change in the districts as now constituted, and will use his influence to prevent the pas-sage of any measure to the contrary. He believes, he says, that it will be better to delay the matter for two years. His opposition was further based on the fact that Congressman Jones is likely, in his judgment, to suffer politically by the passage of the House bill,

WORK OF THE HOUSE.

Statemnt of Bills Introduced and Passed During the Two Sessions

WASHINGTON, March 12.-Charles F. Wakefield, tally clerk of the House of Representatives, has produced a detailed statement of the work of the House dur-ing the two sessions of the 56th Congress. House pased during the two sessions 1411 Houe bills and resolutions, and 793 Senate bills and resolutions, making a grand total of 204 bills and resolutions acted upon. It left upon its calendar un-acted upon 254 House bills and resolutions and 89 Senate bills and resolutions. The House passed a total of 158 bills and resolutions which failed to become laws and 17 Senate bills and resolutions which also failed to become laws. Twenty-nine of these legislative acts failed of signa-ture, two were vetoed and a few recalled, In the 56th Congress the House passed 1475 bills and resolutions, while 641 reported from committees remained undisturbed. The House was in session 197 days during the 56th Congress, while the average num-ber of days in session for the past eight Congresses was 331.

A total of 6050 Senate acts were dissed, of which but 1070 reached the House and on these the House committees favorably reported SI3. The total number of bills introduced in the House during the last Congress was 14,329, and reports from committees were made on 2132.
