DROPPING FRENCH PRUNES FOR ITALIAN, -Prunegrowing has not been a very lucra-tive business for the past two years, as a general thing, though growers in favored locality. localities have had no cause to complain. There is a general belief that there is a successful future for the business, and many persons are putting out more prune trees, and others would do so if trees could be obtained, but most of the nurserymen have let their stock of prune trees run down of late. Albert Hawkins, of Helena, Mont., who owns a prune ranch in Clark County, Washington, came down this Spring and superintended the setting out of about 1000 more prune trees on the place. Many prinegrowers are preparing to have all the French prine trees on their places grafted and changed to Italish prunes, and will not any longer bother with the little French prunes. There is a style of drying prunes which, when it be-comes general, will add greatly to the value of the prune crop. The prunes prepared by this process are known as "pro-cess" prunes, and are steamed or slightly cooked, apparently, in their own juices. Some person is endeavoring to patent this process, and so far but few of the prune, and its growers in this region have prepared their Hirsch prunes for market in this way, but more will do so this season. The prunes pre-pared by this process look as if they had been dipped in some sweet solution, and are soft and tender and retain all their natural sweetness and flavor, and are de-More Charter Members.—At the meet.—Wise, the Rev. FOOLING THEMSELVES ON EGGS .- E. C. Van Wagenen, a Seattle produce dealer, who was in Portland yesterday, says Oregon eggs sell for a cent less on the dozen in Seattle than those laid on the Puget Sound ranches, although the latter are in-"The Oregon eggs," he said, "are usually larger, just as fresh, and, being the product of grain-fed poultry, are in every way superior to the eggs laid by the island hens, which are fed nearly alto-gether on fish. The brand, 'fresh-laid ranch eggs,' however, takes the eye, and so Oregon eggs are considered 'imported,' though they may be just as newly laid as those from the shores of Puget Sound. There is as much difference between eggs that come from the wheat ranches and those from the fisheries as there is be-tween corn-fed pork and that which has been fattened on swill. If there is anything in which people prefer the home product to the imported article, it is the

PAID THE LICENSE.-The Western Union Telegraph Company yesterday paid to the Jones, the pioneer coffee and spice man of City Treasurer their business license for the two quarters ending March 31, amount-from the effects of a surgical operation. He ing to $150. This was very gratifying to the city officials, as the company's agent since childhood. He was a member of the here, William Dumars, had demurred to paying the license and had talked of taking the matter into the courts and conson, aged 10 years, his wife having died testing the validity of the business-license law. The general manager of the com-pany, however, decided that this would be useless, and even if it were probable that the law could be defeated, he would not desire to contest it, as his company was scalded to was doing a good business here and had received liberal treatment from the city, and was willing to pay any just tax that might be imposed. It is not probable that any one will now offer to contest the business-license law.

NEW LUMBER YARD,-E. K. Jones & Co. sawmill men, who have been renting a lot on Fourth street, near the old reservoir, for a lumber yard, at a cost of $100 per month, have purchased two lots at the northwest corner of Fourth and Columbia streets from Mrs. Clarke, paying for them $11,00. The interest on the investment will be covered by the sum which has been paid for rent and the rent from the building, so the investment cannot fall to be a profitable one. > Splendid Work of R. D. MacLean, Barry Johnstone and Odette Tyler-Magnificent Scenery.

GREAT ACTRESS IN FINE PRODUC-

TION OF "KING JOHN."

Madame Modjeska and Wagenhals & Kemper's splendid company gave a pro-duction of "King John" at the Marquam last night so artistic in every detail, so complete in cast and so elaborate in accnery that it is really beyond criticism. Wagenhals & Kemper in their highly commendable efforts to give to the theaarrow-heads found at The Dalles, which are probably the finest in the United States, were largely made from this material, and the obsidiace was doubtless obtained from the John Day Basin. ter-going public the best of the drama have brought many fine productions to Portland, but none of their companies have been so thoroughly capable and so perfectly balanced as this one, which has been enlisted for the support of the great mon Hirsch, president of Temple Beth Israel, the members of the congregation gathered at his residence, Fifth and Jeractress. Doubtless Modjeska's wonderful personality, which never fails to inspire the best work of those who surround ferson streets, and surprised him by the presentation of a handsome silver lov-ing-cup. This was inscribed as follows: her, is responsible in a large measure for the smoothness and beauty of the performance, but even a Modjeska could "The members of Temple Beth Israel, Portland, Or., to their honored and be-loved president, Solomon Hirsch, March ever arouse any but fine actors to such efforts as were put forth last night.
For once the audience was completely aroused. Curtain call followed curtain call as one splendld scene after another was unfolded. Madame Modjeska was compelled to appear three times after the conclusion of the great scene in which Lady Constance's grief for her lost son almost drives her mad. Mr. MacLean was tendered an ovation such as was never given a tragedian on the Marquam stage before. Barry Johnstone, as Faulcon-bridge, was awarded the recognition he so richly deserved, and Odette Tyler was enthusiastically recalled after her beau-tiful scene with Hubert, in which the Prince pleads that his sight may not be The opportunity to become a charter member of the association will be exestroyed. The interest was never abated or an instant, a breathless house was ready to drink in every line, and not a rustle marred the quiet intensity of the final scene, that of the death of the amount to any one of the following persons: Miss Gage, at the store of J. K. King, the house remaining so still that bell for the curtain sounded like a

The play was mounted with all the sumptuousness that characterizes Wag-enhals & Kemper's pr. ductions, the seenes being works of art, and the costumes marvels of elegance and beauty. The final scene in the Abbey garden is one whose beauty has never been surpassed by scene painter, and the others were all in perfect keeping with the general excellence of the production.

Probably nothing Modjeska ever did surpasses her Lady Constance. While the part is not the central figure of the play, like Rosalind or Juliet, its requirements are such that only a great artisf could meet them, and no one who has ever seen Modjeska will question her right to the title of a great artist. Her work in every scene in which she appeared was such as to excite the highest admiration, while on her final appearance, when, with a floor of passionate tears she gives way to her despair as she recalls the memory of her lost son, it is indeed a dry eye which does not moisten at her magic art. The de-lightful accent which is so familiar a characteristic of Modjeska's reading only heightens the beauty of the lines and lends to them an indescribable charm. Of course, as King John, R. D. MacLean had by far the most severe duty imposed upon any member of the company, and as was to be expected, he was fully equal to it. His picture of the crafty, am-bitious, heartless ruler was striking in its originality and wonderfully effective. The cold brutality, the utter lack of human sympathy, which made John so terrible a monrch was brought to the attention of the audience so forcibly as to make them feel that John was before them in the flesh. Mr. MacLean's splendid physique, resonant voice and wonderful power of communicating feeling by facial expression eminently qualify him as a tragedian, and it is not surprising that a host of admirers look upon him as the greatest American actor of Shakespearean roles.

In the part of Paulconbridge, Barry Johnstone had perhaps the best opportunity ever afforded him to show his full strength, and he improved it fully. He imparted to the role a dash and energy. miced with a quaint, shrewd humor, and his clear and beautiful voice gave lines an emphasis that brought t strength out clearly and foreibly.

MacLean and Johnstone are clearly students of the master dramatist, their work has been the result of long and patient endeavor to interpret the charac-ters as they were meant to be interpreted. It was indeed a charming little Prince Arthur that Odette Tyler made. Her scene with Hubert, in which she pleads that her sight might be spared, was enough to melt the heart of that stern old courtier, and her dainty acting throughcut was as enjoyable as it was novel, for Miss Tyler has heretofore been known to Portland audiences only in comedy and

WHY IS IT?

Why is what? It is, why don't the peo ple of Portland appreciate the attractions put on lately at the Fredericksburg? For this week there are bookings direct from New York City, from San Francisco and from Melbourne, Australia. And while the attendance is good, if only the surpassing excellence of the performance were fully appreciated the house would be crowded to overflowing. Some time ago the management made arrangements by which the very best talent of one of the best circuits in the world was secured. Last night, in their first appearance, Billy McKay and Amy Laurance, the Scotch pickaninny, and the lady athlete, in their original burlesque, to use the language of the crowd. 'fairly tore down the curtain,' They are superb. Kalgratus, the master of hoops, the greatest juggler ever ap-pearing on the Coast, drave the house ictually wild. His dexterity, grace and beauty in action has never been equaled here, or anywhere else, for that matter The Dulcie sisters are the sweetest and most engaging singers conceivable. If a good, round admission were charged, they would all bring crowds anywhere. As ! is, the greatest free house in America has for this week altogether the finest and best bill it has ever set before a Portland public, and that is saying a great deal.

Only One Genuine Chickering and That Is Made in Boston-Beware of Imitations.

The best plane that has ever been produced, just as it is the first to be manufactured in America, is the Chickering, of Boston. This world-renowned instrument is father of all American planes, and all other makes are more or less imitations of the mechanical devices first used by Messra. Chickering & Sons.

Ever since the days of Thomas Jefferson the Chickering plane has won highest henors wherever exhibited. Indeed, for the last half-century it has been known the world over as the most exquisitely toned plane made. Not only in America, but in the various musical centers of the civilized world, it has made a reputation for itself unparalleled in the industry. The great interesting fact for the plane-purchaser is that the Chickering tone is the nearest to the ideal that it has been possible to reach. This tone is the one that all other makers have vainly tried to duplicate. In buying a Chickering plane, you procure the best and most costly plane it is possible to purchase.
