WILL BUILD NEW BRIDGE.-The Co. udge and Commissioners propose to build new bridge on the Base Line road where t crosses Beaver Creek, and also to cut lown Beaver Hill and reduce the grade me-half. County Surveyor Huriburt has submitted a report in the matter. All of the members of the board are favorable to the project, which would be a decided advantage to the residents of that vicinity The Surveyor has estimated that the cost would be not over $1250. The bridge, in any event, will have to be replaced, as it is worn out. As the new grade can be established at this season advantageously, it is deemed advisable to begin the work soon. There are now two branches of Beaver, and the present bridge is over 200 feet long. It is proposed to dam up one channel and fill it in so that a bridge one channel and fill it in so that a bridge of So feet will be sufficient. By this means the grade can be more readily fixed and the bridge will cost less. The present grade is 11 to 12 per cent. The reduction of 50 per cent will make a comparatively casy haul. At present, the road goes around a gravel pit, but with the change the road will run on a level through the om of the pli

ROSE THIEVES ABROAD.

Chief of Police McLauchlan's Yard Robbed of Its Beauties.

Chief of Police McLauchlan no longer shows up at the police station with a fresh resebud in the buttenhole of his coat. A morning or two age he expecoat. A morning or two ago he experienced a great surprise and a sudden shock. Early in the morning he sailled out, sprinkling can in hand, to water his roses, according to his usual custom. The day was bright and sunny, and the Chlef had set his heart on plucking a beautiful rosebud that he had been cherishing and nursing for weeks. He neared the plot where the roses were planted, He cast an admiring look in that direction. It feil on nothing except a row of large round holes. The blossoming beauties had vanholes. The blossoming beauties had van-ished in the night. Thieves had abandoned the traditional jimmy for the utilitarian spade, and dug up the fine bushes that the Chief had been guarding and protecting for months against the ravages of the festive snall and the deadly rust,

For the sake of their own security, the thieves had doubtless agreed: "What safer place to operate than in the very yard of the guardian of the public safety?"
Chief McLauchlan was thunderstruck at

Chief McLauchlan was thunderstruck at the nudacity of the offense. "To come right here under my own nose, so to speak, and rob me of my lovely La Frances, Gloria Dijons, Marechai Nells, American Beauties, Papa Gontiers, etc.," said the Chief, who is a rose-fancier by inclination. "This will have to be

His detective inclinations led him to ex-amine the ground closely. He found sev-eral clews. He took his magnifying glass, and, on his hands and knees, traced the footsteps of the rascals over the fence, He measured the length of their tread. He made deductions as to their size, shape and appearance that would do credit to the science of Sherlock Holmes,

"Enough of this," then quoth the Chief.
'Delay will allow the guilty to escape."
He hastened to the police station. He called his detectives. He told them of the outrage upon his property and upon the dignity of their Chief. He explained

"Go forth," said he, "and find the villains, and return not till you do." All were seen departing from the sta-tion to work on the case, with melan-choly and contemplative looks. No longer they cast their eyes about to spot the long-lost Pat Crowe, or the escaped convict with the large reward hanging over him on capture. These long-sought crim-laais may go in peace and security. The detectives are after bigger game. The Sleuths are noncommittal as to the progress they are making on the case, but say in a mysterious way that arrests are certain to follow in a few days. Meanwhile other cases of depredations of this sort have come to light. The yard of George Thompson, Fifteenth and Tilia-mook streets, was robbed of a fine lot of rose bushes. The flower garden of J. N. Miller, East Nineteenth and Burnside, was despoiled of 18 rosebushes a few evenings ago. Fourteen were taken from the yard of E. C. Mears, East Twentieth and Tillamook streets. G. E. Wagner, liv-ling on East Burnside, between Twentyfirst and Twenty-second, lost half a dozen roses to the robbers. The latest their reported was that of a fine clematis vine from the garden of Samuel Roome, 46 East Twelfth street, on Tuesday morning. The vine was cut off near the ground, and the root dug up and carried away.

The police suspect some person of going into the gardening and florist business without first purchasing a supply of plants. Since roses have been stolen in most cases, people who have bought plants from other persons than established florists or gardeners are requested to communicate with the Chief of Police.

LAST SYMPHONY CONCERT.

In the suit of Anthony Neppach against the O. & C. R. R. Co., in which Neppach obtained a verdict for $45,000 on a land claim, the defendant has filed a motion for a new trial. The motion is a very long one. It is contended that excessive damages were allowed to Neppach and that he was not entitled to recover, if at all, any more than the first payment on the lands; that the evidence was insuffi-cient to justify the verdict, and that the ourt erred in admitting certain evidence in instructing the jury and in refusing certain instructions asked.

RUMMAGE SALE POPULAR.

Rainy-Day Crowd Buys Up the Wet-Weather Goods.

Interest in the rummage sale continues inabated. Yesterday there was in at-endance a rainy-day crowd. All the um-orelias and mackintoshes on hand were losed out. Two prominent society women called in the afternoon, and before they finished their inspection of the miscellaneous stock of goods the rain was coming down in a steady and dismal drizzle. "What in the world shall we do?" ques-tioned one. "Neither of us has brought an umbrella, and we really must be leaving for home now

"Well," answered one of the ready sales women whose wit has contributed a great deal to the success of the sale, "this is the place where we supply every one's wants," and she led the way triumphantly to the department where rainy-day articles are sold. For a few bits the two women were supplied with a good service-able umbrella, and equipped with protec-tion against the storm by well-fitting pairs of rubbers. "You can't imagine how grateful they were," said one of the managers, describ-ing the incident.

Another woman went into the store yesterday seeking bargains with a vengeance, She wanted to purchase a Tam o' Shanter, she said, for a child of one of her neigh-bors. Her choice narrowed between two, each tagged with the nickel cost mark. She debated for a long time which she should take, the question of fit being bothersome. At last she made a sudden

"I'll take both," said she, "and if they don't fit, they can be unraveled into yarn and they'll be cheap at the price for darning socks."

The women of the sale have had a mer-ry time keeping each other from selling their own wraps at a bargain to some anxious purchaser. A prominent clergy-man dropped into the sale yesterday, and, his fancy being taken by a coat on one of the counters, he stripped off his own min-isterial garment and tried it on. Satis-fied with the fit, he put the coat aside and was straining his back to put on his own coat, when one of the managers of the show hove in sight. She rushed to the rescue, assisted the struggling clergy man on with his coat, smoothed out the creases like a professional second-hand man, and said: "There, now; isn't that a perfectly lovely fit?" "Well," said the minister, "it ought to be. It's my own coat."

The manager acknowledged that the joke was on her, but the minister insisted that part of it fell on him. Chinese and Japanese were among the visitors yesterday, and the Celestials took an especial interest in buying articles to protect them and their families from the
