GREAT TEACHERS MAKE A UNI-VERSITY GREAT.

One of Significant Remarks by David Starr Jordan in an Address to Students.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., May 28.—At the tenth annual commencement of the university today, a notable feature was the address of President David Starr Jordan. It had added significance, owing to the controversy over the question of "Academic Freedom," which has raged in the university the past school year.
The subject of President Jordan's address was "Leland Stanford's Vews on Higher Education." President Jordan said: "Mr. Stanford would leave the univer sity free to grow with the coming ages. He would extend no dead hand from the grave to limit its activities or to control its movements. Mr. Stanford insisted, as a vital principle, that the university exists for the benefit of its students, past, present and future. It has no existence or function save as an instrument of eduor function save as an instrument of edu-cation. The greatest need of the student is the teacher. Mr. Stanford said. 'Am-pie endowment may have been provided. Intelligent management may secure a large income, students may present them-selves in numbers, but, in the end, the faculty makes or mars the university.'

"Compared with the character of the faculty, every other element in the univer-sity is of relatively little importance. Great teachers make a university great. Great teachers make a university great. The chief duty of the college president is the choice of teachers. In its public rela-tions the university stands for infinite pathe choice of teachers. In its public rela-tions the university stands for infinite pa-tience, the calm testing of ideas and ideals. It conducts no propagands, it controls no affairs of business, or of public action. Mrs. J Morris, Astoria Arbitration Conference LAKE MOHONK, N. Y., May 29,-The seventh annual Lake Mohonk conference on international arbitration was begun here today. More than 200 delegates, representing many sections of the country, were present. Albert K. Smiley, the founder of these yearly conventions, delivered an address of welcome; J. H.

Stines, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island, was elected chairman; Clinton Rogers Woodruff, of Philadelphia, and W. J. Roper, of Boston, were named secretaries, and Alex C. Wood, treasurer. The chairman's introductory address was an exhaustive resume of what had been accomplished in the cause of arbitration and an earnest pies that, as nations were in favor of settling disputes without war, those present should offer suggestions of a practical character for such settlements. Dr. Edward E. Hale emphasized the brotherhood of nations and rejoiced that all the great industries favored peace. He cared less for idealism and more for practicable means. racticable means.
