DEFEAT FOR U. S. SENATORSHIP

One of the Enricest Methodist Missionaries and Founder of the Pacific Christian Advocate -An Able Man.

The Rev. Thomas H. Pearne, whose death at Cincinnati Sunday night was announced yesterday, was one of the plo-neer missionaries to Oregon, and also deserves a place in the early history of the state for the vigorous and pronounced stand that he took during the Civil War. for the Union and the Administration of Abraham Lincoin. He is also well known for his connection with the political history of the state, having been so active candidate for the United States Senate in 1864 against ex-Senator George H. Willlams, the latter having been elected after lams, the latter having been elected after a close contest. The Rev. Mr. Pearne was one of the most active missionaries of the Methodist Church, and for 64 years of his life he served the church in vari-ous capacities, as well as occupying a political position during the first Adm tration of President Grant as United States Consul to Kingston, Jamaica. Defeated for United States Senator

Recalling reminiscences of Mr. Pearne, his one-time political opponent, Judge George H. Williams, said yesterday: 'The Rev. Thomas H. Pearne was an able and an honorable man, and to my mind the abiest minister and the best speaker that the Methodicts ever sent to Pregon. He was an active and vigorous man, full of energy, and he took a bold and determined stand in favor of the Union and the Administration of President Lincoln during the war. He was recognized as a force in politics before ever he became a candidate for the Sena. torship. In the campaign of 1884 we were both avowed candidates for that office. The campaign was conducted in a perfect. ly fair and friendly fashion. Neither one of us spent any money, as neither one of us had any, and if the choice had fallen on Mr. Pearne, the state would have had an able man in the office. We took the stump during the campaign for the reelection of President Lincoln, and our relations were always friendly.

"There was no political divergence between us. We were both Republicans, and had taken part in the formation of the Union party. The only difference be-tween us was that he had come into that party from the Whigs, and I from the Democrats, and naturally he expected to draw the votes of the old-line Whigs and I to do the same from the Democrats.

Pearne was, of course, strongly supported by the clergy of the Methodist Church, although there were others who advised him not to run. When the Legislature met we left it all to them, and the members finally subsected me for the nonline. bers finally selected me for the position, for one reason because my training had been legal and because I had more familiarity with political affairs.

"Personally he was affable and genial, and made friends easily, and was a man of great force of character. He left Ore-gon in 1864 to take a vacation, as I resmber it, going to Tennessee, then to Jamaica, and later to Ohio. My relations with him were always most pleasant, and, as I say, I always had the highest pinion of his ability."

The election for the United States Sena. torship decided in favor of Judge Will-lams occurred September 15, 1864, an account of which appears in The Morning Oregonian of September 16. Judge Williams was elected on the third ballot. The first ballot stood: For Williams, 27; for Pearne, 20; scattering, 5. The second

His Political Career.

Those were the stirring days of politics in Oregon, as well as the Nation. Com. ing to Oregon in October, 1851, as a mis-sionary, he entered quickly into the spirit of the vigorous ploneer days. Mr. Pearne himself describes the work of the mis-

In 1854 it was determined by the preach. ers and laymen of Methodism in Oregon to Issue a weekly religious paper. Mr. Pearne was selected as its first editor, and the paper made its first appearance September 5, 1855, in Salem. The paper fulfilled a high and important mission. It ably espoused the free-state cause when the constitution of Oregon was formed and adopted. Then, when the secession spirit was rife and a faction of the Democratic party tried to swing California and Oregon into the movement, Editor Pearne was vigorous in his espousal of the Union cause. He not only wrote editorials, but in pulpit and on the tump he made his influence felt.

Because of the stand he took in favor of the free-state party he was sent as chairman of the Oregon delegation to the Republican National Convention, which met in Baltimore in 1884, and renominated Lincoln. Mr. Pearne tells of his part in the stampede of the convention for Andrew Johnson for Vice-President:

"Before the chair announced the result of the vote for Vice-President, I said to our delegation, who had voted for Schuyler Colfax. If we change our vote to Johnson or to Dickinson, other states well," said Rev. J. W. Miller, a pioneer minister at 629 East Ankeny street. "He

"After a brief moment, they said, 'Let us vote for Johnson.' "I arose and said, 'Oregon changes her ote from Schuyler Colfax to Andrew

"The example was contagious. In a few inutes Johnson was nominated." Mr. Pearne was one of the committee to notify Mr. Lincoln of his renomina-tion, on which occasion President Lin-coin told his visitors the story of the Irishman who refused to swap horses while crossing a stream.

Fight for the Union Cause.

Mr. Pearne, in his book, "Sixty-one Years of Itinerant Christian Life," refers as follows to his fight for the Union

When South Carolina seceded, and state after state was falling into line and swinging out of the Union, I took a very prominent and determined position in fa vor of the Union. There were a large number of persons who were opposed to

He had publican to the first lamp all his life-beld Federal offices nearly all his life-time. I made the Advocate ring out for the Union, and I took the stump in favor of the Union. The politicians recovered the use of their tongues when they saw the tide setting in for the flag and the

"It was doubtless owing to my activity in this behalf that attention was turned to me as a proper person to be elected United States Senator; and that induced the people to elect a majority in favor of my selection for that high office. It was a great blessing for me that the movement did not succeed. My life has been happier, and probably more useful, as a minister, than it could have been in another line."

He closed one of his sermons with the following peroration: "We may and we should unite as a people to render praise to God that we live to mingle in such a strife; that we are permitted to feel the impulses of this divine patriotism, and to share in the glory of that inexpressible victory, when, not in theory only, but in deed and truth we, as a nation, shall have wrought truth we, as a nation, shall have wrought against the city and county last month amounted to but $2.40, according to Dr. blessing upon our patriotism and our arms, that glorious truth, 'Liberty and Union, one and inseparable, now and for-ever.'" This was in his Thanksgiving sermon of November 27, 1882.

Mr. Pearne left Oregon April 1, 1884, to attend the General Conference at Philadelphia. He had obtained a year's leave of absence, primarily to do some work a the front in ministering to the sick and wounded soldiers. His nine years' term as editor of the Advocate had expired and he had declined re-election. In 1865 he made his way to the front as a delegate of the Christian Commission. Two months he spent in ministering to the spiritual and often physical comfort of the wounded in the field hospitals and on the battle-field.

In Tennessee.

At the close of the war he attended the celebrated Holston conference of th Methodist church in which the seceded branch of the church was reconstructed Mr. Pearne was afterwards stationed at Knoxville, Tenn., where he found the bitter Southern feeling toward Northerners and abolitionists such as to make his career there full of excitement and danger. He was fired at, and waylaid and beaten by roughs. On one occasion he was informed that an attempt was to be made to break up his meeting, and that if he attempted to hold a meeting he would be killed. Mr. Pearne describe the incident:

"I entered the church and kneeled down as usual, to offer a brief prayer; and then I stated to the large audience that I had been informed that I would not be allowed to hold a religious meeting there, but that I hoped that the information was not true. I had no other purpose than kindfor Pearne, 20; scattering, s. The second ballot was the same. "On the third vote," ness in coming: and that freedom of speech was a right I was not willing to speech was a right I was not willing to surrender. I should hold the meeting, I should hold the meeting, I should hold the meeting, I defend myself. I displayed my revolver and laid it down before me. After five years' vigorous work in the South he became enfeebled in health, and his appointment as United States Consul at Kingston, Jamaica, was designed to give him recreation. He served there until 1873, and a year later became a mem-ber of the Cincinnati Conference, serving in various large churches in Ohio. He was 81 years old and had been a minister since 1837, when as a 15-year-old boy he felt called to the service.

Estimates of Contemporaries. Rev. O. N. Doane, D. D., who came to

Oregon before Dr. Pearne, was stationed at Oregon City when the latter arrived. Dr. Doane lives in retirement at Portsmouth, and is the second oldest minister in the state. In speaking of Dr. Pearne yesterday he said:

"Dr. Pearne was a highly educated and cultured man. He had been sent out to Oregon by the New York mission without definite mission and waited the ac-He was made presiding elder of a large district, which extended from Puget Sound to Southern Oregon, and also included Walla Walla. All this district was under the general charge of William Roberts as superintendent. He was a prominent and very ambitious man. He was also very frank about his ambition. For a long time he wanted to be elected to the Senate. He traveled over the and made speeches. Also he frankly said he was a candidate for the election of bishop, but he never reached any of these positions. Governor Abernethy once re-marked to me that he regarded Pearne as one of the ablest and most prominent men in the state. Pearne was an im-portant factor in the early history of Methodism in this state, and its record would be incomplete without his name. As first editor of the Advocate he ex-

At one time Oregon and Washington and California were one conference district, but it was found too large for one man, and Mr. Pearne was sent out to take part of the district. He was prominent in the af-fairs of the church and was the first edfairs of the church and was the first editor of the Pacific Christian Advocate.

Mr. Pearne was an effective platform speaker and considerable of a politician, and very ambitious. His style of addressing audiences was very taking with the Westerners. He was full of action on the platform. While speaking he would rise on his tip-toes and then come down on his heesis with a crash. His gestures were full of energy and action. number of persons who were opposed to coercion to retain states in the Union; others were in favor of the secession of the states. The politicians were afraid to strike out for the Union. I took the ground that every true man and true patriot must stand by the Union, even if it came to war. I preached a sermon in Portiand on the duty of Christian loyalty, from the words of Jesus: 'Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's.' An immense crowd heard it. The house was crowded and hundreds could not get in; but they thronged the doors and windows. One man, a neighbor and an old A Living Testimonial.

Informal Report of Large Savings by Sending Every Patient to the County Hospital.

MULTNOMAH COUNTY FOOTS ALL

The City of Portland has turned over to Multnomah County all of its indigent sick, and the patients are being well taken care of at much less expense than formerly. When the present County Physician, Dr. McKay, took office, he was notified by the County Commissioners that the expense of caring for the sick poor must be cut down materially. Previous to that time, many of the indigent sick were sent amounted to but $2 40, according to Dr. McKay, who was spoken to on the subject yesterday afternoon.

"There are at present 69 patients at the County Hospital, which is a separate in-stitution from the Poor Farm," Dr. Mc-Kay said, "and they are given the best possible care, although the buildings are not those of a first-class hospital, and additional room is needed. City police cases, which were formerly taken to the private hospitals, are now taken to the county institution, the county standing all the expense. An ambulance is an adjunct of the County Hospital, and is always within telephone call. State cases, which are those of strangers from Washington or California, are taken care of at the expense of the state, which pays 60 cents a day for their keep. There are several of these cases now at the hospital, and the sum paid for their maintenance just about pays for their care.

"One result of all indigent sick being sent to the County Hospital is the dis-covery that a certain proportion of the patients have means, or have friends, who will pay their way in the private hospitals of the city, rather than have them sent to the County Hospital. Quite a material saving to the taxpayers has been effected in this way. One bill of $3 60 from a private hospital last month I shall de-cline to 'O. K.,' as the patient was an expressman, whose borse ran away with im, and who is financially able to pay his

There were 430 cases taken care of at the County Hospital during the 12 months ending June 1, 1901, and I think this num-ber will be materially increased during the present fiscal year, as the city author-ities have recently declined to handle any but contagious diseases, declaring there was no money available for the care of the indigent sick. This adds considerable to my work at the County Hospital, and I am almost constantly employed there.

"The hospital is divided into wards for the better classification of the inmates. There is a fever ward, a ward for surgical cases, a woman's ward, a maternity ward, a baby ward. In this latter connection there are several likely babies ready for adoption by responsible parties

"The hospital obtains its milk, eggs, vegetables, etc., from the County Poo Farm, which produces an abundance of these essentials, and thus cuts down the provision bills considerably, besides as-suring the sick ones the advantage of a fresh and wholesome diet." Dr. Mc-Kay's annual report will be presented the County Commissioners within a few days.

Mr. Chamberlain, speaking upon the subject, said: "I thought it would be advisable to call a grand jury to look into things a little. There has been considerable talk by mistate the conwant, the grand jury to investigate the Von Gruenigen case carefully. There have been some complaints concerning persons selling liquor at Gresham with out license. I have cases all pretty well up to date, but the grand jury may make

The District Attorney afterwards consented to the release of Dr. Von Gruenigen on bonds, and has since made every effort to obtain all the facts throwing any light upon the case. Mr. Chamberlain to think the best plan is to permit the grand jury to hear the evidence and decide what course is best to pursue dismiss the case or return an indictment.

The case of Ida M. Duntley against Inman, Poulsen & Co. to recover $5000 damages because of the death by accident of her husband, Marcus H. Duntley, at defendant's sawmill, was on trial before Judge Sears yesterday. In the afternoon a motion of defendant for a nonsuit was argued, and will be passed upon this morning. Duntley was working at the planing machine and on August 25, 1900, was caught on a belt and whirled through the machinery at a rapid rate. He was badly bruised and torn, and died from the effects of his injuries within a few hours. The evidence disclosed that Duntley was moving a loose belt to a tight pulley, and the force of the ma-chinery broke a defective pulley and the belt became wrapped around him. The defense is that there was no negligence on the part of the defendants; that Duntley was familiar with his employment. having been in the mill for two years, and assumed the ordinary risks, and it was an unavoidable accident so far as Inman, Poulsen & Co. were concerned, for which they are not liable. Henry E. McGinn and V. K. Strode appear for the plaintiff and Rufus Mallory and John M. Charin for the defense.

Jurors Getting Scarcer.

The difficulty in obtaining regular panel jurors for the State Circuit Court still continues to exist. At the beginning of the May term 43 citizens were subpensed to act as jurces, and most of them were excused by request for various reasons Last week a special venire for 25 tax-payers was issued to fill up the jury panel, and still excepting the grand jury of seven persons, there remain but 22 names on the jury list. Of the special venire the following were excused for the term by Judge-Frazer yesterday, on making good excuses: George W. Law-rence, C. W. Nottingham, Fred New-bauer, George L. Barton, Fred T. Boody, Louis Sauer and William O'Malley. The following were not served. The following were not served: Henry Jennings, E. E. Laycock, J. E. Griffin, Alex Anderson, J. O. Leary, T. J. granted a voluntary nonsuit by Judge George yesterday. At a trial of the case about a year ago a verdict for the full amount was returned and the Supremo Court set the judgment aside. The Supreme Court as part of its decision heid that Daniel Montour signed an applica-tion for a medical examination, which tion for a medical examination, which amounted to an application for reinstatement into the lodge, notwithstanding it was contended that Monour was at that time a member in good standing. This supported the contention of the defendant that Montour was out of the lodge, and asked to be reinstated, and further that he was not reinstated, and accordingly the lodge was not liable for any insurance. It was also contended that insurance. It was also contended that the claimants should exhaust their rem-edy in the order before going into court. Judge George could not do otherwise than uphold the decision of the Supreme Court, and the attorney could do nothing but dismiss the suit. He may try to bring the case anew if he can find any way to overcome this point.

Magnificent Opportunity TO OWN HOMES

Houses on the installment plan 10% to 15% cash, balance monthly during 10 years, 5% interest.

We offer these terms to purchasers and suilders of houses on Willamette Heights. Best erms and lowest interest ever offered in Portland in a first-class locality.

We are now building four houses for sale, and will follow them with more when sold, our only restriction being that the houses must cost not less than $2000.

It is the intention to make this the most attractive locality in Portland, and only con-crete walks will be put down. Now is the time, if ever, for parties of mod-erate means to buy and build while our prices are low, for with large expenditure intended to be spent in grading and improvements, as per surveys now being made, we intend to steadily increase prices, according to benefits accruing to the property.

We invite inquiry, and full information will be furnished to bona fide purchasers.
