TACOMA WAS SHUT OUT

BUT THE TEAM PUT UP GILT-EDGE BASEBALL.

Portlands Scored One in First Inning, and Thus Got a Stronger Hold on the Pennant.

Portland shut out Tacoma in the best-played baseball game of the season yesterday afternoon, 1-0.

The Tacomas came on the field in a sharp, snappy fashion, in neat gray suits, with red stockings, and the ball that they put us was as sharp and quick as the rooting and jollying that the team did on the coacher's lines. The men on the team look like ballplayers, and the game did not diminish in the least the luster of the reputation that McCloskey's men have won. The Portlands celebrated the arrival of their new white stockings by putting up an errorless game, fielding and playing like the veterans that they are. Before the game opened the crowd that numbered about 2000 was treated to a speech by Spieler Copeland, of the Tacoma team, who presented a handsome blue club emblem and a National flag to the Portland nine, the gift of several of their local admirers. Copeland was at one time connected with Barnum's circus, and the ginger and snap that he puts in a speech could have been acquired in no other schooling. Today the nines will play off the postponed game of Wednesday.

In the first inning Portland did its work, and made the four straight that Manager McCloskey was planning to take diminish by a tleast one digit. Muller, the first man up, tapped the ball to McIntyre for an easy out. Sammie Vigneux stepped up to the plate and connected with the flying sphere for a single to right. He was given second by Umpire McDermott on a balk by Pitcher Corter, who hated to let go of the ball. He was wise, too, for when the next one came over Anderson met it for a nice drive to center, scoring Vigneux, the only ruh of the game.

The rest of the game was made up of sharp, snappy fielding by both sides. Pitcher Engle was in fine form, as was also Carter. Engle struck out six men and resolutely refused to pass any of the ambitious batsmen to the first bag. Engle was found for five hits, one a long, high two-bagger, which Shelton sent to right field, and which Weed misjudged, and then got mixed up in a bad piece of ground near the right field fence. He redeemed himself for his error in judgment by taking a desperate chance at Carter's high foul to right in the fifth, when he made a long run and a difficult catch.

Tacoma made things look interesting in the second. Lynch met one of Engel's paraboles for a hit. McCloskey sent him to second on a sacrifice. Shelton's two-bagger advanced him to third. Engel then pitched desperately, and the next two batsmen, Menefee and the heavy-hitting Flannery, sent hot grounders right into his hands, retiring the side. All of the other Tacoma baserunners died easy deaths before they reached second. They sent out a few scattered hits, and then were left to wait for others that never came. Deisel and Anderson and Mahaffey nipped two baserunners' chances in the eighth by a neat double play.

With Mahaffey out in the eighth, Engel made a desperate effort to score a run. His bat met the ball for a clean hit to center, and he took second on McCarthy's juggling of Muller's hot grounder. He stole third on the attempt to retire Muller at first. Attempting to score on Vigneux' grounder to McCloskey, he was thrown out at the plate.

Zearfoss, the Tacoma catcher, made an excellent impression on the fans. Not a man tried to steal second on him, and he was assisted materially in cutting off stolen bases by the hawk-like watchfulness of Carter and McCloskey.

Toward the end of the game the spectators were keyed up to a high tension. When Tacoma went to the bat in the last inning, the fate of every ball pitched by Engle was eagerly watched. When McCarthy dipped an easy one to Engel, and McIntyre swatted three mighty swats through the air, and Lynch sent a hard one to Deisel that he handled neatly—when all three were out, and the game won for Portland, up went a mighty cheer from the bleachers, and the crowd collectively heaved in unison a sigh of relief and then filed slowly out of the grounds.

It was certainly a first-class article of ball.

Feature Was Bottenus' Three-Bagger When Bases Were Full.

SEATTLE, June 6.—The second game of the Seattle-Spokane series, played today, resulted in another victory for Spokane by a score of 13 to 5. Seattle's work generally was very poor. Bottenus' three-bagger in the sixth inning, with the bases full, was one of the features of the game. Glendon, in the sixth inning, gave two bases on balls, sent another man to first by hitting him with a pitched ball, and followed by giving another base on balls, forcing Stulz to score. A PESSIMISTIC JUDGE.

Address of Moses Hallett to Colorado University Graduates.

BOULDER, Colo., June 6.—Before the graduating class of the law school of the University of Colorado, Hon. Moses Hallett, dean of the law faculty, and Federal Judge at Denver, delivered an address in which he criticised the present attitude of the Government with regard to the Philippines, closing with these words:

"And so it appears that the powers of earth and air are again arrayed, as they have always been arrayed, against the cause of civil liberty. The spectacle presented is that of a nation in rebellion against absolute power and achieving its independence of such power by force of arms; afterward a government established in protest against absolute power and professing to rule only by the consent of the people and according to their will, an autonomous government, which claimed only the right of self-rule for the people and disclaimed authority in other lands and over other people. Such was the United States of America at the end of the 18th century. One hundred years later, the same nation and government, in total disregard of the principle on which it was established, repudiating every declaration of authority on which it came into power, with shameless perfidy takes into its possession other lands and peoples, with intent to rule them absolutely and with the power of the sword.

So fleet the works of men
Back to earth again.

"This Nation, baptized in the blood of free men a short century back, and dedicated to the cause of liberty for men, now crumbles into the slough of despotism, another ruin on the sands of time to mark the course of man's inhumanity to man."

SCOTCH GOLF CHAMPION

BRAID DEFEATED VARDON IN A FINE MATCH.

A Thousand Spectators Followed Him, and Their Enthusiasm Was Great—Other News.

GULLANE, Scotland, June 6.—The concluding day's play in the open golf championship started with ideal weather. Yesterday's weeding-out process practically left Harry Vardon and James Braid to fight for first place, as they were seven strokes ahead of the next players, Taylor and Laige. The spectators, who included some well-known members of Parliament and a few Americans, almost neglected the other matches to watch the favorites. The bad putting noticeable was attributed to the spongy green. Vardon drew with J. H. Taylor, so he had every incentive to play his best. Scotland's prospects of winning the championship had not been so bright in many years, as when James Braid accomplished the remarkable feat of going around Mulrfield links in 74 and completed the third round five strokes ahead of Harry Vardon. The latter got bunkered several times and his play was generally weak. In the third round, Braid scored 74, making a total of 229. Vardon scored 79, making a total of 234, and Taylor scored 74, making a total of 236. Finally Braid won with a total of 309. Vardon was second with a total of 312, and Taylor third with a total of 313.

Taylor rivalled Braid's capital work, going round in 74. The features of Braid's play were perfect driving and deadly putting. Nearly 1000 spectators followed him and their enthusiasm was great. The amateur, Hilton, played a fine round for 75 and took the lead of the amateure. The enthusiasm over Braid was unbounded. He was carried shoulder-high around the green and then into the clubhouse. Harry Vardon experienced hard lines several times. When he and Taylor began to play for the last hole, the interest was intense and Vardon's success was cheered. H. H. Hilton, the amateur champion, had a total score of 329.

A VICTORY FOR CHILE.

Pan-American Congress Will Not Consider Boundary Dispute.

NEW YORK, June 6.—A special to the Herald from Washington says:

Chile is distinctly the victor in the discussion which has arisen over the question of arbitration to be considered by the coming Pan-American Congress. The Administration has virtually decided not to agree to any suggestion put forward by Peru or her allies removing the limitation placed by the executive committee of the Bureau of American Republics on the subject of arbitration. That principle, under the decision of the committee, can only apply to future questions. Furthermore, even if Peru and Bolivia decline to participate, the congress will be held without them.

It is the earnest wish of the President that all the republics be represented at the congress. It has been pointed out to Peru that it is distinctly to her interest to take part, that to stay away would be to deprive her of the sympathy which some of her sister states have extended to her. While the United States would like to see an early settlement of the Tacna-Arica controversy, it cannot take sides, and it cannot afford to permit the question to be dragged into the congress and perhaps wreck the meeting.

WILL PLEAD INSANITY

TRIAL OF LULU PRINCE-KENNEDY BEGINS AT KANSAS CITY.

Story of the Murder as Told by Several Witnesses—Cool Behavior of the Prisoner.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 6.—When Lulu Prince-Kennedy entered court this morning it was to hear the outline of her case in the trial for murdering her husband made by Attorney Nearing, for the defense. The prisoner had enjoyed a good sleep last night, and appeared bright and cheerful. She was, perhaps, more at ease than any of the large number of spectators.

Attorney Nearing, after tracing the attentions paid by Kennedy, the murdered man, to the defendant, declared that they had become engaged to be married, and the date of the wedding set. Kennedy, he asserted, postponed the wedding, and finally, under guise of the engagement, seduced her. Then, when her condition became delicate, he paid her expenses to leave the city. On this visit, Mr. Nearing said, she met Case Patten, the baseball player whose name later became mentioned with that of the prisoner. Kennedy had, he said, been familiar with all her actions during this time. In securing the advice of a physician she had, he asserted, been persuaded by Kennedy to represent to the doctor that she was the wife of Patten. Her condition became dangerous and her parents compelled her to make known the cause. The courthouse wedding, at which Kennedy later, in his suit for annulment, asserted he was compelled by threats on his life from Miss Prince's father and brother, followed. Kennedy's refusal to live with her, her broodings over her condition, his ill-treatment, brought her to a condition of hysteria bordering on insanity. Insanity is prevalent in the woman's family, and the prisoner partook of this disease, which finally affected her mind, causing her to threaten to committ suicide. The final act of Kennedy of bringing suit to have their marriage set aside was the motive and the only motive that prompted the act of murder. The defense will attempt to show positively that the woman's father and brothers had absolutely no part in the murder, knowing of the act only after it had been committed.

The taking of testimony was begun at noon.

The state's first witnesses proved important. Frederick Jullene, reporter, and Captain Ward Munford, assistant city editor of the Star, told of Mrs. Kennedy and her brother, Will Prince, coming to the office of that paper and requesting the publication of a certain story regarding her marriage to Kennedy. Both admitted that the marriage had been forced on the dead man. Will Prince going so far as to say that Kennedy had been given the alternate of marrying or being killed. He requested this fact be not published, as it would annul the marriage.

Roland Butler, a stenographer in Kennedy's office, told of the prisoner's father and brother Will demanding that he pay her board bill and when he refused, threatening and chasing him from his office, and of Kennedy's seeking the protection of a policeman. Then he described minutely the scene at the office on the day of the murder, when Mrs. Kennedy appeared, and after receiving his refusal to live with her, shot him five times. She had kicked Kennedy's face as he lay prostrate, and appeared perfectly cool the while. Butler said Will Prince struck Kennedy's brother down as the latter tried to disarm the woman.

During the examination of witnesses, even in the recital of the thrilling scene of the murder, the prisoner looked carelessly from jury to witness and hardly moved a muscle. She displayed impatience at the tedium of the proceedings rather than interest in the outcome of the case.

Several witnesses examined corroborated the scene at Kennedy's office at the time of the killing, each testifying to the fact that Mrs. Kennedy appeared perfectly cool as she fired at her husband. She told one man who was holding her brother, "Let him go, I did the shooting," and when a policeman arrived and was holding her hand, she exclaimed, according to a witness, "Let go my hands, I want to fix my hair," which she did in a matter-of-fact way. Another witness said that the defendant's two brothers and her father were in different parts of the building at the time.

R. J. Costello, a county employe, told of meeting C. W. Prince, the father, at the entrance of the building a moment after the shooting took place and of remarking to the latter: "Your daughter upstairs is shooting her husband. You could have prevented this if you had wanted to."

In a previous conversation with C. W. Prince, Costello testified the former had said: "Kennedy won't get a divorce. He's not dealing with the girl now, he's dealing with me." Prince had said that Kennedy had better do the right thing or "the papers would have something to write about it."

"BLOOMINGTON RED" CONVICTED.

Given an Indeterminate Sentence for Burglary.

QUINCY, Ill., June 6.—William Davis, alias "Bloomington Red," was convicted of simple burglary today, and will go to prison under the indeterminate act. Hard effort was made to convict him under the habitual criminal act, and sentence him for a twenty-year limit without hope of parole, but the defendant made a desperate legal fight and succeeded in securing a simple burglary conviction. Two of the jurors were in favor of acquittal. "Red" was convicted of robbing the Kespohl-Mohrenstecher store here Christmas eve. of $4000 worth of silks. His partner was George Heiss, who pleaded guilty after arrest and came from Chester prison to testify against Davis. Davis was the leader of a band of silk thieves who plundered stores of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property all over the country. He was convicted in Decatur in 1892 under the name of Frank Smith. He broke jail, but was recaptured and served 6 years at Joliet.

Thought He Was Unjustly Fined.

UHRICHVILLE, O., June 6.—Because he thought he had been unjustly fined, J. P. Carey, a prominent business man of this place, tried to kill Mayor G. W. Reed and Health Officer J. A. McCoom. Failing in his purpose, he committed suicide. Carey was fined by the Mayor for violating an ordinance. He became incensed and was fined for contempt. Given permission to go after the money to pay his fines, he returned with a revolver, which he drew on the officials at the Mayor's office. They made their escape and Carey killed himself.

Crime of Dime-Novel Reader.

TOLEDO, O., June 6.—LeRoy Grove, the 16-year-old son of a prosperous farmer living near Napoleon, stabbed his sister, aged 24, to the heart, killing her instantly. He then strangled his 13-year-old brother to death, and, firing the barn, ran in and shot himself through the temple. The tragedy occurred just after midnight. His charred body was recovered today. It is supposed he was insane, made so by reading dime novels.

Unger Conspiracy Trial.

CHICAGO, June 6.—Arguments of counsel in the Unger insurance conspiracy case began today. But one witness in rebuttal, Dr. Frank Webster Jay, associate professor of surgery at Rush Medical College, was heard. The court refused the defense permission to introduce expert testimony to disprove Dr. Jay's assertion that Marie Defenbach could not have died of dysentery, as was asserted by the previous witness, and the defense unexpectedly announced that its testimony was all in.

NEGRO QNESTION IN GEORGIA

Congressman Livingston Opposed to Wholesale Disfranchisement.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Congressman Livingston, of Georgia, is quoted in a special from Washington to the Tribune as saying that he does not believe in wholesale disfranchisement as a remedy for the evils of negro suffrage. He said:

"I think the people of Georgia are against any disfranchise amendments to our state constitution. We are getting along nicely with the negro in Georgia. The states which adopt the amendments which have been already adopted by Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina may see the time when Congress will take the matter up with a view to affecting the representation in Congress. If such action should be taken it would bring turmoil and strife and reopen the issues of the Civil War.

"I do not think it best for the Southern States to adopt such constitutional amendments. The number of negroes in our state is not so large as it was formerly. Very many of them are moving away where agricultural conditions are better than they are in Georgia."

After He Comes

he has a hard enough time. Everything that the expectant mother can do to help her child she should do. One of the greatest blessings she can give him is health, but to do this, she must have health herself. She should use every means to improve her physical condition. She should, by all means, supply herself with Mother's Friend.

It will take her through the crisis easily and quickly. It is a liniment which gives strength and vigor to the muscles. Common sense will show you that the stronger the muscles are, which bear the strain, the less pain there will be.

A woman living in Fort Wayne, Ind., says: "Mother's Friend did wonders for me. Praise God for your liniment."

Read this from Hunel, Cal. "Mother's Friend is a blessing to all women who undergo nature's ordeal of childbirth."

Get Mother's Friend at the drug store. $1 per bottle.
