PORTLAND ACADEMY GRADUATES.

MISS BOYD CAPTURES PORTLAND ACADEMY HONORS.

WON FOUR FIRST PRIZES

Fourteen Graduates Awarded Diplomas at the Annual Commencement Exercises.

Fourteen students received diplomas at the graduation exercise of the Portland Academy, which were held at the First Baptist Church last evening. Filling the large auditorium were the friends and relatives of the graduates and the patrons of the academy, who were eager listeners to the orations delivered in the Wilcox to the orations delivered in the Wilcox prime speaking contest, and whose expec-tations were aroused to a high pitch by the decision of the judges, which was given at the close of the contest. W. W. Cotton announced the decision of the judges, who were Professor H. L. Bates, W. E. Parker, R. L. Sabin, R. T. Platt and Dr. E. P. Hill, The winner of the first prize of $30 was Robert Norris Mc. Lean, who delivered an oration on "The Lean, who delivered an oration on "The Power of Sentiment," written by his father, Rev. Robert McLean, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church. The sec-ond prize of $20 was awarded to Miss Helen Boyd, daughter of Rev. Thomas Band formethy of the Fourth Profile Boyd, formerly of the Fourth Presby-terian Church, Miss Boyd recited clever. ly Zorbaugh's oration, "Napoleon at St. Helena

First prize of $25 for excellence in Greak during academic course; the Nichols first prize of $25 for highest scholarship in the mathematics of the course, given by Dr. A. S. Nichols; the Corbett first prize of $30 for highest scholarship in the course, given by Mrs. Helen Ladd Corbett; the Selling prize of $25 for the highest schol-arship in the English of the last two years' course, given by Philip Selling. Edwin Laurence McKinlay carried off the second prize of $25 in Greek, and the second Corbett prize of $20 for highest scholarship.

ond Nichols prize of $15 for proficiency in Dr. Wilson also announced the donation of a prize for next year, given by the Rev. William O. Forbes and Mrs. Forbes, in memory of their daughter, to be known as the Edith Emily Forbes memorial prize, of $15, to be awarded to the student of the third-year class who shall attain the highest standing in the first year's work in the Greek course. In view of the fact that Miss Forbes was a member of the present third-year class, this prize in 1962 will be awarded to the student of the fourth-year class who shall attain the highest standing in Greek for that year. The interest of the audience in the ora. tions was sustained throughout, and as the speakers followed each other, little difference could be detected in the uniform excellence of the speakers. The first to appear on the programme, Miss Genevieve Thompson, made a marked impression on Thompson, made a marked impression on the audience by the graceful way in which she handled a difficult recitation, Boyesen's "Brier Rose," bringing out all the fine expression contained in that poetic composition. Kenneth Beebe had a strong oration, "Ulysses S, Grant," by Clark Howell, which he handled clearly, with a rapid and forcible delivery. Robert N. McLean had an oration, "The Power of Sentiment," that was well suited to his strong delivery, and which also gave him an opportunity to display a well-trained voice and his native oratorical ability. He was the favorite of the audience for first prize. Otis Chamberlain Morrill followed McLean, and his scathing volcing of "Grattan's Reply to Mr. Corry," in which hitter references were made to the preceding speaker, caused just a ripple of laughter in the audience. Morrill's speech was different in style and exceedingly well given. The closing speaker, Miss Helen Boyd, had the most trying place on the programme, but quickly won the attention of her hearers by her easy delivery of Zorbaugh's "Napoleon at St. Helena," winning a well-merited bestowal of second prize.

It is beginning to be believed that F. Rehorst, the retired barber, who disap-peared from his lodgings in the Hotel Bemond early Thursday morning, has committed suicide by jumping into the river. About 1 o'clock Thursday morn-ing, while the night clerk of the Es-mond and Special Officer Nash were seatthis year. ed in the office of the hotel, Rehorst came down stairs in a hurry, and walked out of the hotel. His actions aroused the night clerk's suspicions, and Nash, at his request, went out in a few moments to see what had become of Rehorst. He could see nothing of him, nor has he been seen since.

He has never be-fore absented himself even for a full day from the hotel without first notifying the proprietor or one of the clerks.
