WAR IN BROWNSVILLE.

Lively Fracas Over a Water-Ditch Strife Up a Peaceful Town. From all accounts Brownsville was quite lively during the past week. Two citizens of that place, named Roberts and Crabtree, together with one of their wives, a couple of shovels, a hoe and a shotgun, were the fun-makers. The story runs something like this: Roberts was obstructing a small water ditch and turning the flow in another direction. Crabtree, pointing out the future advancement of truck gardening, fruitgrowing and like industries, and the consequent stamping out of a part of the wheatgrowing industry. He lashed this objection, and the fact that when the lands now devoted to wheat are properly irrigated, they will produce crops yielding a greater return to the grower.
