LOST: A SCHOOL OF SALMON

Who Knows the Whereabouts of Those Who Escaped.

The miraculous school of salmon which paralyzed the canneries, pickling and cold storage industries on the Lower Columbia a few days ago seem to have disappeared as suddenly as they came. No large number of salmon has been reported anywhere above Skamokawa. The wheels at the Cascades and at The Dalles and all along the river between those places have turned to but little purpose so far. It may be that the school are making their way slowly up the river, keeping to the channel, and that they will yet be reckoned with above. It is certain that the fish were not all caught, although the will of the fishermen was good enough, but there were so many fish that they could not be handled in any way, and in the height of the run the fishermen had to limit their catches, and all fishing was suspended a considerable part of the time. So the bulk of the school was not caught and must be somewhere.

Sunday last large catches were made down about Sand Island, and even up to Tongue Point, and everybody is looking for another great school today or tomorrow. A few days' more fishing like that of a week ago will satisfy canners and everybody else. It is not worth while to pack so many as to run the price down, but the Columbia River salmon being so much superior to the Puget Sound, or Alaska pack, will always command a better price.

Central W. C. T. U.

The Central W. C. T. U. will hold its regular weekly meeting Wednesday at 2:30 P. M., at headquarters, 167½ Third street. The topic for consideration will be of special interest, as it has to do with the live question of labor reform. The subject will be intelligently handled, and will have special reference to the relation between the temperance and labor movements. A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested in this phase of the great problem.
