FIRE BOAT NEEDED.
Lack of Protection on Water Front Surprises a Canadian Chief.
James Smart chief of the Calgary, N. W. T. fire department, is the guest of Chief Campbell, of the Portland department. Mr. Smart talked entertainingly last night about firemen and their work. He has been 21 years in different fire departments, and he was born in Forfarshire, Scotland. He said that he had just attended the sessions of the fire chiefs' convention recently held at Tacoma, and was pleased to renew his acquaintance with Chief Campbell.
"With the immense timber interests in and around Portland and its large water front, I am surprised that there is not a fireboat here," said Chief Smart. "Suppose a fire should start in one of the lumber mills along the river front; it would be next to impossible to extinguish the blaze without the help of a fireboat. At present, when a fire breaks out, the greater portion of the water front would be burned out, and then the taxpayers would want to know why the fire was not extinguished. It is just a matter of luck that the mills along your river front have escaped destruction, when small fires started there recently."
"I have been out more than once with parts of the Portland fire apparatus since my arrival in the city, and I must say that I have been very favorably impressed with the smart, workmanlike appearance of the men. They are quick and correct, and their work bears the stamp of discipline. But I am astonished to hear that the department is not a fully paid one. Portland is rich enough to pay every one of her firemen. It is not a modern system which has a few paid men to take the apparatus to a fire and have the call men run to the fire from their own homes, or from places where they are at work. Time is everything at a fire, and the quicker the firemen arrive the better chance there is to save property and life.

"A number of interesting papers were read at the fire chiefs' convention, one of the best being by Chief Campbell. He was offered the presidency of the convention, but declined, and nominated the man who is now president. The convention of fire chiefs will be held in this city before long, and Chief Campbell will be made president. He cannot refuse the office next time.
"Calgary has a population of about 6000. We have 33 men in the fire department, composed of paid and call men. I have been chief of Calgary's fire department for six years, and have worked in different fire departments in Ontario and the Northwest Territory."

SONGBIRDS FROM GERMANY
Fifty Pairs of Nightingales Will Be Received in October.
Another effort is to be made to introduce the German nightingale into Oregon, and arrangements have been completed which it is hoped will assure the success of the undertaking. The birds have been ordered through a New York dealer, and are already on their way to this country, and will probably arrive here about October 1. The matter was originated by A. Saling, of Juba & Saling, who raised over 200, principally among citizens of German descent, for the purchase of the birds. Fifty pairs have been ordered and every precaution has been taken to secure their arrival at New York in good condition, and extra precautions will be taken to see that they receive every possible attention during their transit from New York here by express, this being the most trying part of the long journey on the little songsters. On their arrival here they will be housed for the winter in a greenhouse in City View Cemetery, where they will be carefully attended to and supplied with such food as they are accustomed to. In the Spring, sections of the roof will be opened and the birds allowed to go out by degrees, a plentiful supply of food being kept in the house for them, so that they may become accustomed to the place and their liberty by degrees, and will run no danger of suffering for food, which may not be plentiful at that season.

It will be remembered that this Association for the introduction of German songbirds, organized here something over a dozen years ago, imported some nightingales in 1888 and again in 1892, but only a few of the original number shipped arrived here, and they were not in good condition after the journey, and although a few of them were seen and heard for a time after they were turned loose they finally disappeared. The skylarks, starlings, song thrushes and some of the other birds imported by the association thrived and increased and are now widely spread in this and adjoining states, but the nightingale appears to be less hardy than these.
It is unnecessary to say anything about the beauty of the nightingale's song, as all have heard of it—even if they have not heard it. It is to be hoped that the present experiment may successfully be carried out, and the sweetest of all songsters added to the sweet songbirds of Oregon. Mr. Saling is contemplating the introduction next Spring of a lot of mockingbirds, which he thinks will thrive here, but his plans are not yet matured.

East Eleventh-Street Tracks.
The double tracks on East Eleventh street, between Hawthorne avenue and Division street, for the Portland City & Oregon Railway, will be completed in 10 days. There is much complaint from property-owners on account of the way the tracks are laid. It is said that in places the tracks are lower than the established grade, and that the street will be seriously damaged. The tracks appear to be rather low, but City Engineer Chase assures the property-owners that when the work is finished there will be no ground for complaint. The intention, as soon as the double tracks are finished, is to give the street a thoroughly overhauling. The gutters will be cleaned out and water given a way to run off.
