

WORSE THAN TREASON

ANARCHY MUST BE DRIVEN FOREVER FROM THE COUNTRY.

Words Uttered by Senator Mason at Hyde Park Methodist Church in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—If the assassination of President McKinley has taught no other lesson, it has taught 70,000,000 people that anarchy is worse than treason, and must be driven forever from the country.

These words were uttered by United States Senator Mason, causing the audience that crowded Hyde Park Methodist Church at the memorial services today to burst into a roar of applause. The meeting at which the Senator spoke was but one of many which were held in the city today. There was not a church, Catholic or Protestant, in the city that was not crowded and the death of the President was everywhere made the declaration that there must be an end to anarchy and anarchy in this country from this time on.

IN NEW YORK CHURCHES.

The Death of the President the Theme of All the Sermons.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Naturally the theme of all the sermons preached in New York and its suburbs today was the death of the President. While the majority of the congregations sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," most of the churches were draped in black, and in not a few the American flag mingled its colors with the folds of crape. The congregations were large in every church. Coupled with the words of mourning were expressions of confidence in the stability of the Government and the administration of President Roosevelt. There were few vehement expressions against anarchy.

Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix denounced the crime of Croquet, and assigned anarchy as a danger which would destroy modern civilization, unless suppressed. Archbishop Corrigan occupied the throne during mass at St. Paul's Cathedral, and was much affected during the preaching of the sermon by the Rev. M. J. Lavelle. The preacher said: "Anarchy is as impossible as the sun being cold and the moon being hot."

Rev. W. R. Huntington, preacher at Grace Church, took the late President's words, "Let no one hurt him," as a proverb against lawlessness.

Rev. Dr. Horace Johnson, at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Though dead, President McKinley has his place secure. Not only is he beloved and honored by the whole people, but in the history of the Nation."

Rev. George T. Purvis, of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Our Government remains absolutely intact, and we behold the splendid spectacle of the absolute stability of our institutions, even at the moment when the head of the Republic falls. Emma Goldman and her kind should be imprisoned for life at hard labor, and the murderer should be hanged immediately."

At the President's Church.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Nearer, My God, to Thee," the late President's hymn, formed a feature of the services of homage and tribute held in almost every church in the National Capital today. The Metropolitan Methodist Church, the President's personal church, was crowded. The President's portrait was heavily draped in black. Impressive memorial services were held in all other churches in the city.

ENGLISH COURT IN MOURNING.

Remarkable Outburst of Sympathy in Great Britain.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—It would be almost impossible to record in detail the remarkable outburst of sympathy which Britain and her colonies over the death of President McKinley, proofs of which are continually arriving here. Not only has King Edward commanded the court to go into mourning for one week, but wherever a public meeting of any kind has been held, or wherever a public man has had occasion to speak, expressions of horror and sympathy have been heard.

In every place of public worship yesterday, from St. Paul's Cathedral and Canterbury Cathedral down, the preachers made special reference to the death of President McKinley, and many of the United States Embassy, attended service at St. Paul's Cathedral. In the afternoon, and many other Americans were in the congregation. Canon Scott Holland made a touching allusion to the martyred President and denounced the crime to which he fell a victim.

Many members of the diplomatic corps and a constant stream of visitors inscribed their names at the Embassy. In accordance with a special army order to the guards at the St. James Palace and at all other points where guards are mounted throughout the United Kingdom, honors were rendered to the President in memory of President McKinley such as usually are accorded on the death of royal personages. The troops wore crape and the bands played dirges. Funeral marches were played in every church in the kingdom.

The morning papers again appear with heavily-laden borders and are almost entirely devoted to Mr. McKinley. Such extended tributes of sympathy and respect ever marked the death of any person but a British sovereign. Considerable editorial space is devoted to a discussion of Mr. Roosevelt's probable policy, a question which is exciting the keenest curiosity throughout Europe, and that may be said to border almost upon apprehension.

The Daily Chronicle, discussing the world of sympathy displayed, says: "This sympathy is intensified by a full realization of the calamity, until we are all almost inclined to say that there is no precedent for such a display of emotion and feeling on these particular lines. It is not impossible that the assassination of Mr. McKinley will advance that international comity of governments to which some political students look as the keynote of future peace and harmony."

The Morning Post says: "The American people have been robbed of one of the greatest leaders the Republic ever produced. Many papers highly approve the proposal that the Duke of Cornwall and Devon should attend the funeral, and express a hope that King Edward will see his way clear to adopt the suggestion."

The Times says of the new President: "Mr. Roosevelt has great gifts, which, rightly used, may lead to great issues. The danger his friends feel is in a certain impulsiveness which is undoubtedly a part of his nature. We trust his friends are overanxious."

In the editorial on Mr. Roosevelt, a sense of relief and intense satisfaction is exhibited at his declaration that he will maintain his predecessor's policy unbroken, while his high courage and integrity of character form the subjects of eulogistic comment and of congratulation to the American Nation upon the possession of such a brilliant man to succeed to the Presidency.

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is certain that a man with such a marvelous record will not be a humdrum President. At the same time he is far too level-headed to do anything rash." It predicts that the youngest of the Presidents will prove one of the greatest.

STRIKERS ARE UNCERTAIN

HAVE NOT YET RECEIVED THE ORDER TO RESUME WORK.

Tin Workers Threaten to Withdraw from the Amalgamated Association—Anger at McKeesport.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 15.—Matters pertaining to the settlement of the steel strike are in a very unsatisfactory state tonight. While the telegraphic notice was sent out last night by Secretary Williams declaring the strike at an end, it cannot be learned definitely that the order has been issued by President Shaffer. Some of the local strikers declare they have had no such notice.

President Shaffer arrived home this morning, but denied himself to callers. Tonight his wife said he had received an important letter today, calling him out of the city, and he cannot be located.

The members of the advisory board said tonight that the official order calling the strike off has gone out, and that the men generally will be at work tomorrow or within a few days.

The real conditions of the settlement, though not officially announced, are that the settlement concerns only the three companies in dispute—the American Tinplate, the American Sheet Steel and the American Steel Hoop—and these companies are allowed to retain as nonunion all mills started in any kind of shape since the strike order went into effect; the mills that were completely tied up by the strike are to remain under the Amalgamated scale. Nothing was said concerning the National Tube, the Federal or National Steel companies.

THE DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The death of the President was the theme of all the sermons preached in New York and its suburbs today. While the majority of the congregations sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," most of the churches were draped in black, and in not a few the American flag mingled its colors with the folds of crape. The congregations were large in every church. Coupled with the words of mourning were expressions of confidence in the stability of the Government and the administration of President Roosevelt. There were few vehement expressions against anarchy.

Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix denounced the crime of Croquet, and assigned anarchy as a danger which would destroy modern civilization, unless suppressed. Archbishop Corrigan occupied the throne during mass at St. Paul's Cathedral, and was much affected during the preaching of the sermon by the Rev. M. J. Lavelle. The preacher said: "Anarchy is as impossible as the sun being cold and the moon being hot."

Rev. W. R. Huntington, preacher at Grace Church, took the late President's words, "Let no one hurt him," as a proverb against lawlessness.

Rev. Dr. Horace Johnson, at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Though dead, President McKinley has his place secure. Not only is he beloved and honored by the whole people, but in the history of the Nation."

Rev. George T. Purvis, of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Our Government remains absolutely intact, and we behold the splendid spectacle of the absolute stability of our institutions, even at the moment when the head of the Republic falls. Emma Goldman and her kind should be imprisoned for life at hard labor, and the murderer should be hanged immediately."

At the President's Church.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Nearer, My God, to Thee," the late President's hymn, formed a feature of the services of homage and tribute held in almost every church in the National Capital today. The Metropolitan Methodist Church, the President's personal church, was crowded. The President's portrait was heavily draped in black. Impressive memorial services were held in all other churches in the city.

ENGLISH COURT IN MOURNING.

Remarkable Outburst of Sympathy in Great Britain.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—It would be almost impossible to record in detail the remarkable outburst of sympathy which Britain and her colonies over the death of President McKinley, proofs of which are continually arriving here. Not only has King Edward commanded the court to go into mourning for one week, but wherever a public meeting of any kind has been held, or wherever a public man has had occasion to speak, expressions of horror and sympathy have been heard.

In every place of public worship yesterday, from St. Paul's Cathedral and Canterbury Cathedral down, the preachers made special reference to the death of President McKinley, and many of the United States Embassy, attended service at St. Paul's Cathedral. In the afternoon, and many other Americans were in the congregation. Canon Scott Holland made a touching allusion to the martyred President and denounced the crime to which he fell a victim.

Many members of the diplomatic corps and a constant stream of visitors inscribed their names at the Embassy. In accordance with a special army order to the guards at the St. James Palace and at all other points where guards are mounted throughout the United Kingdom, honors were rendered to the President in memory of President McKinley such as usually are accorded on the death of royal personages. The troops wore crape and the bands played dirges. Funeral marches were played in every church in the kingdom.

The morning papers again appear with heavily-laden borders and are almost entirely devoted to Mr. McKinley. Such extended tributes of sympathy and respect ever marked the death of any person but a British sovereign. Considerable editorial space is devoted to a discussion of Mr. Roosevelt's probable policy, a question which is exciting the keenest curiosity throughout Europe, and that may be said to border almost upon apprehension.

The Daily Chronicle, discussing the world of sympathy displayed, says: "This sympathy is intensified by a full realization of the calamity, until we are all almost inclined to say that there is no precedent for such a display of emotion and feeling on these particular lines. It is not impossible that the assassination of Mr. McKinley will advance that international comity of governments to which some political students look as the keynote of future peace and harmony."

The Morning Post says: "The American people have been robbed of one of the greatest leaders the Republic ever produced. Many papers highly approve the proposal that the Duke of Cornwall and Devon should attend the funeral, and express a hope that King Edward will see his way clear to adopt the suggestion."

The Times says of the new President: "Mr. Roosevelt has great gifts, which, rightly used, may lead to great issues. The danger his friends feel is in a certain impulsiveness which is undoubtedly a part of his nature. We trust his friends are overanxious."

In the editorial on Mr. Roosevelt, a sense of relief and intense satisfaction is exhibited at his declaration that he will maintain his predecessor's policy unbroken, while his high courage and integrity of character form the subjects of eulogistic comment and of congratulation to the American Nation upon the possession of such a brilliant man to succeed to the Presidency.

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is certain that a man with such a marvelous record will not be a humdrum President. At the same time he is far too level-headed to do anything rash." It predicts that the youngest of the Presidents will prove one of the greatest.

MADE A CLEAN SWEEP

PORTLAND WON THE LAST GAME OF THE SERIES.

Easily Defeated Spokane by a Score of 11 to 3—Seattle Took Both Games From Tacoma.

ONCE MORE A FIFTH WHEEL.

Civil Service Commission is Doing Little These Days.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Who, in these days, hears anything of the Civil Service Commission, save when it makes its annual report? There were about six or seven years when the Civil Service Commission was in important figure in Washington and throughout the country. For the past six years the Commission has had little to do, and it has been conducted with the sole view of making the least possible trouble for those who desire to avoid the provisions of the civil service law.

The members of the advisory board said tonight that the official order calling the strike off has gone out, and that the men generally will be at work tomorrow or within a few days.

THE DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The death of the President was the theme of all the sermons preached in New York and its suburbs today. While the majority of the congregations sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," most of the churches were draped in black, and in not a few the American flag mingled its colors with the folds of crape. The congregations were large in every church. Coupled with the words of mourning were expressions of confidence in the stability of the Government and the administration of President Roosevelt. There were few vehement expressions against anarchy.

Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix denounced the crime of Croquet, and assigned anarchy as a danger which would destroy modern civilization, unless suppressed. Archbishop Corrigan occupied the throne during mass at St. Paul's Cathedral, and was much affected during the preaching of the sermon by the Rev. M. J. Lavelle. The preacher said: "Anarchy is as impossible as the sun being cold and the moon being hot."

Rev. W. R. Huntington, preacher at Grace Church, took the late President's words, "Let no one hurt him," as a proverb against lawlessness.

Rev. Dr. Horace Johnson, at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Though dead, President McKinley has his place secure. Not only is he beloved and honored by the whole people, but in the history of the Nation."

Rev. George T. Purvis, of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Our Government remains absolutely intact, and we behold the splendid spectacle of the absolute stability of our institutions, even at the moment when the head of the Republic falls. Emma Goldman and her kind should be imprisoned for life at hard labor, and the murderer should be hanged immediately."

At the President's Church.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Nearer, My God, to Thee," the late President's hymn, formed a feature of the services of homage and tribute held in almost every church in the National Capital today. The Metropolitan Methodist Church, the President's personal church, was crowded. The President's portrait was heavily draped in black. Impressive memorial services were held in all other churches in the city.

ENGLISH COURT IN MOURNING.

Remarkable Outburst of Sympathy in Great Britain.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—It would be almost impossible to record in detail the remarkable outburst of sympathy which Britain and her colonies over the death of President McKinley, proofs of which are continually arriving here. Not only has King Edward commanded the court to go into mourning for one week, but wherever a public meeting of any kind has been held, or wherever a public man has had occasion to speak, expressions of horror and sympathy have been heard.

In every place of public worship yesterday, from St. Paul's Cathedral and Canterbury Cathedral down, the preachers made special reference to the death of President McKinley, and many of the United States Embassy, attended service at St. Paul's Cathedral. In the afternoon, and many other Americans were in the congregation. Canon Scott Holland made a touching allusion to the martyred President and denounced the crime to which he fell a victim.

Many members of the diplomatic corps and a constant stream of visitors inscribed their names at the Embassy. In accordance with a special army order to the guards at the St. James Palace and at all other points where guards are mounted throughout the United Kingdom, honors were rendered to the President in memory of President McKinley such as usually are accorded on the death of royal personages. The troops wore crape and the bands played dirges. Funeral marches were played in every church in the kingdom.

The morning papers again appear with heavily-laden borders and are almost entirely devoted to Mr. McKinley. Such extended tributes of sympathy and respect ever marked the death of any person but a British sovereign. Considerable editorial space is devoted to a discussion of Mr. Roosevelt's probable policy, a question which is exciting the keenest curiosity throughout Europe, and that may be said to border almost upon apprehension.

The Daily Chronicle, discussing the world of sympathy displayed, says: "This sympathy is intensified by a full realization of the calamity, until we are all almost inclined to say that there is no precedent for such a display of emotion and feeling on these particular lines. It is not impossible that the assassination of Mr. McKinley will advance that international comity of governments to which some political students look as the keynote of future peace and harmony."

The Morning Post says: "The American people have been robbed of one of the greatest leaders the Republic ever produced. Many papers highly approve the proposal that the Duke of Cornwall and Devon should attend the funeral, and express a hope that King Edward will see his way clear to adopt the suggestion."

The Times says of the new President: "Mr. Roosevelt has great gifts, which, rightly used, may lead to great issues. The danger his friends feel is in a certain impulsiveness which is undoubtedly a part of his nature. We trust his friends are overanxious."

In the editorial on Mr. Roosevelt, a sense of relief and intense satisfaction is exhibited at his declaration that he will maintain his predecessor's policy unbroken, while his high courage and integrity of character form the subjects of eulogistic comment and of congratulation to the American Nation upon the possession of such a brilliant man to succeed to the Presidency.

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is certain that a man with such a marvelous record will not be a humdrum President. At the same time he is far too level-headed to do anything rash." It predicts that the youngest of the Presidents will prove one of the greatest.

MADE A CLEAN SWEEP

PORTLAND WON THE LAST GAME OF THE SERIES.

Easily Defeated Spokane by a Score of 11 to 3—Seattle Took Both Games From Tacoma.

ONCE MORE A FIFTH WHEEL.

Civil Service Commission is Doing Little These Days.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Who, in these days, hears anything of the Civil Service Commission, save when it makes its annual report? There were about six or seven years when the Civil Service Commission was in important figure in Washington and throughout the country. For the past six years the Commission has had little to do, and it has been conducted with the sole view of making the least possible trouble for those who desire to avoid the provisions of the civil service law.

The members of the advisory board said tonight that the official order calling the strike off has gone out, and that the men generally will be at work tomorrow or within a few days.

THE DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The death of the President was the theme of all the sermons preached in New York and its suburbs today. While the majority of the congregations sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," most of the churches were draped in black, and in not a few the American flag mingled its colors with the folds of crape. The congregations were large in every church. Coupled with the words of mourning were expressions of confidence in the stability of the Government and the administration of President Roosevelt. There were few vehement expressions against anarchy.

Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix denounced the crime of Croquet, and assigned anarchy as a danger which would destroy modern civilization, unless suppressed. Archbishop Corrigan occupied the throne during mass at St. Paul's Cathedral, and was much affected during the preaching of the sermon by the Rev. M. J. Lavelle. The preacher said: "Anarchy is as impossible as the sun being cold and the moon being hot."

Rev. W. R. Huntington, preacher at Grace Church, took the late President's words, "Let no one hurt him," as a proverb against lawlessness.

Rev. Dr. Horace Johnson, at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Though dead, President McKinley has his place secure. Not only is he beloved and honored by the whole people, but in the history of the Nation."

Rev. George T. Purvis, of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Our Government remains absolutely intact, and we behold the splendid spectacle of the absolute stability of our institutions, even at the moment when the head of the Republic falls. Emma Goldman and her kind should be imprisoned for life at hard labor, and the murderer should be hanged immediately."

At the President's Church.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Nearer, My God, to Thee," the late President's hymn, formed a feature of the services of homage and tribute held in almost every church in the National Capital today. The Metropolitan Methodist Church, the President's personal church, was crowded. The President's portrait was heavily draped in black. Impressive memorial services were held in all other churches in the city.

ENGLISH COURT IN MOURNING.

Remarkable Outburst of Sympathy in Great Britain.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—It would be almost impossible to record in detail the remarkable outburst of sympathy which Britain and her colonies over the death of President McKinley, proofs of which are continually arriving here. Not only has King Edward commanded the court to go into mourning for one week, but wherever a public meeting of any kind has been held, or wherever a public man has had occasion to speak, expressions of horror and sympathy have been heard.

In every place of public worship yesterday, from St. Paul's Cathedral and Canterbury Cathedral down, the preachers made special reference to the death of President McKinley, and many of the United States Embassy, attended service at St. Paul's Cathedral. In the afternoon, and many other Americans were in the congregation. Canon Scott Holland made a touching allusion to the martyred President and denounced the crime to which he fell a victim.

Many members of the diplomatic corps and a constant stream of visitors inscribed their names at the Embassy. In accordance with a special army order to the guards at the St. James Palace and at all other points where guards are mounted throughout the United Kingdom, honors were rendered to the President in memory of President McKinley such as usually are accorded on the death of royal personages. The troops wore crape and the bands played dirges. Funeral marches were played in every church in the kingdom.

The morning papers again appear with heavily-laden borders and are almost entirely devoted to Mr. McKinley. Such extended tributes of sympathy and respect ever marked the death of any person but a British sovereign. Considerable editorial space is devoted to a discussion of Mr. Roosevelt's probable policy, a question which is exciting the keenest curiosity throughout Europe, and that may be said to border almost upon apprehension.

The Daily Chronicle, discussing the world of sympathy displayed, says: "This sympathy is intensified by a full realization of the calamity, until we are all almost inclined to say that there is no precedent for such a display of emotion and feeling on these particular lines. It is not impossible that the assassination of Mr. McKinley will advance that international comity of governments to which some political students look as the keynote of future peace and harmony."

The Morning Post says: "The American people have been robbed of one of the greatest leaders the Republic ever produced. Many papers highly approve the proposal that the Duke of Cornwall and Devon should attend the funeral, and express a hope that King Edward will see his way clear to adopt the suggestion."

The Times says of the new President: "Mr. Roosevelt has great gifts, which, rightly used, may lead to great issues. The danger his friends feel is in a certain impulsiveness which is undoubtedly a part of his nature. We trust his friends are overanxious."

In the editorial on Mr. Roosevelt, a sense of relief and intense satisfaction is exhibited at his declaration that he will maintain his predecessor's policy unbroken, while his high courage and integrity of character form the subjects of eulogistic comment and of congratulation to the American Nation upon the possession of such a brilliant man to succeed to the Presidency.

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is certain that a man with such a marvelous record will not be a humdrum President. At the same time he is far too level-headed to do anything rash." It predicts that the youngest of the Presidents will prove one of the greatest.

MADE A CLEAN SWEEP

PORTLAND WON THE LAST GAME OF THE SERIES.

Easily Defeated Spokane by a Score of 11 to 3—Seattle Took Both Games From Tacoma.

ONCE MORE A FIFTH WHEEL.

Civil Service Commission is Doing Little These Days.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Who, in these days, hears anything of the Civil Service Commission, save when it makes its annual report? There were about six or seven years when the Civil Service Commission was in important figure in Washington and throughout the country. For the past six years the Commission has had little to do, and it has been conducted with the sole view of making the least possible trouble for those who desire to avoid the provisions of the civil service law.

The members of the advisory board said tonight that the official order calling the strike off has gone out, and that the men generally will be at work tomorrow or within a few days.

THE DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The death of the President was the theme of all the sermons preached in New York and its suburbs today. While the majority of the congregations sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," most of the churches were draped in black, and in not a few the American flag mingled its colors with the folds of crape. The congregations were large in every church. Coupled with the words of mourning were expressions of confidence in the stability of the Government and the administration of President Roosevelt. There were few vehement expressions against anarchy.

Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix denounced the crime of Croquet, and assigned anarchy as a danger which would destroy modern civilization, unless suppressed. Archbishop Corrigan occupied the throne during mass at St. Paul's Cathedral, and was much affected during the preaching of the sermon by the Rev. M. J. Lavelle. The preacher said: "Anarchy is as impossible as the sun being cold and the moon being hot."

Rev. W. R. Huntington, preacher at Grace Church, took the late President's words, "Let no one hurt him," as a proverb against lawlessness.

Rev. Dr. Horace Johnson, at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Though dead, President McKinley has his place secure. Not only is he beloved and honored by the whole people, but in the history of the Nation."

Rev. George T. Purvis, of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, said: "Our Government remains absolutely intact, and we behold the splendid spectacle of the absolute stability of our institutions, even at the moment when the head of the Republic falls. Emma Goldman and her kind should be imprisoned for life at hard labor, and the murderer should be hanged immediately."

At the President's Church.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Nearer, My God, to Thee," the late President's hymn, formed a feature of the services of homage and tribute held in almost every church in the National Capital today. The Metropolitan Methodist Church, the President's personal church, was crowded. The President's portrait was heavily draped in black. Impressive memorial services were held in all other churches in the city.

ENGLISH COURT IN MOURNING.

Remarkable Outburst of Sympathy in Great Britain.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—It would be almost impossible to record in detail the remarkable outburst of sympathy which Britain and her colonies over the death of President McKinley, proofs of which are continually arriving here. Not only has King Edward commanded the court to go into mourning for one week, but wherever a public meeting of any kind has been held, or wherever a public man has had occasion to speak, expressions of horror and sympathy have been heard.

In every place of public worship yesterday, from St. Paul's Cathedral and Canterbury Cathedral down, the preachers made special reference to the death of President McKinley, and many of the United States Embassy, attended service at St. Paul's Cathedral. In the afternoon, and many other Americans were in the congregation. Canon Scott Holland made a touching allusion to the martyred President and denounced the crime to which he fell a victim.

Many members of the diplomatic corps and a constant stream of visitors inscribed their names at the Embassy. In accordance with a special army order to the guards at the St. James Palace and at all other points where guards are mounted throughout the United Kingdom, honors were rendered to the President in memory of President McKinley such as usually are accorded on the death of royal personages. The troops wore crape and the bands played dirges. Funeral marches were played in every church in the kingdom.

The morning papers again appear with heavily-laden borders and are almost entirely devoted to Mr. McKinley. Such extended tributes of sympathy and respect ever marked the death of any person but a British sovereign. Considerable editorial space is devoted to a discussion of Mr. Roosevelt's probable policy, a question which is exciting the keenest curiosity throughout Europe, and that may be said to border almost upon apprehension.

The Daily Chronicle, discussing the world of sympathy displayed, says: "This sympathy is intensified by a full realization of the calamity, until we are all almost inclined to say that there is no precedent for such a display of emotion and feeling on these particular lines. It is not impossible that the assassination of Mr. McKinley will advance that international comity of governments to which some political students look as the keynote of future peace and harmony."

The Morning Post says: "The American people have been robbed of one of the greatest leaders the Republic ever produced. Many papers highly approve the proposal that the Duke of Cornwall and Devon should attend the funeral, and express a hope that King Edward will see his way clear to adopt the suggestion."

The Times says of the new President: "Mr. Roosevelt has great gifts, which, rightly used, may lead to great issues. The danger his friends feel is in a certain impulsiveness which is undoubtedly a part of his nature. We trust his friends are overanxious."

In the editorial on Mr. Roosevelt, a sense of relief and intense satisfaction is exhibited at his declaration that he will maintain his predecessor's policy unbroken, while his high courage and integrity of character form the subjects of eulogistic comment and of congratulation to the American Nation upon the possession of such a brilliant man to succeed to the Presidency.

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is certain that a man with such a marvelous record will not be a humdrum President. At the same time he is far too level-headed to do anything rash." It predicts that the youngest of the Presidents will prove one of the greatest.

MADE A CLEAN SWEEP

PORTLAND WON THE LAST GAME OF THE SERIES.

Easily Defeated Spokane by a Score of 11 to 3—Seattle Took Both Games From Tacoma.

ONCE MORE A FIFTH WHEEL.

Civil Service Commission is Doing Little These Days.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Who, in these days, hears anything of the Civil Service Commission, save when it makes its annual report? There were about six or seven years when the Civil Service Commission was in important figure in Washington and throughout the country. For the past six years the Commission has had little to do, and it has been conducted with the sole view of making the least possible trouble for those who desire to avoid the provisions of the civil service law.

The members of the advisory board said tonight that the official order calling the strike off has gone out, and that the men generally will be at work tomorrow or within a few days.

THE DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The death of the President was the theme of all the sermons preached in New York and its suburbs today. While the majority of the congregations sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," most of the churches were draped in black, and in not a few the American flag mingled its colors with the folds of crape. The congregations were large in every church. Coupled with the words of mourning were expressions of confidence in the stability of the Government and the administration of President Roosevelt. There were few vehement expressions against anarchy.

Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix denounced the crime of Croquet, and assigned anarchy as a danger which