

CARNIVAL NOW OPEN

Inaugurated Last Night With Due Ceremonies.

ELECTRIC ILLUMINATION GRAND

Two Full Military Bands Enlivened Occasion—Addresses by General Summers and Mayor Rowe.

The great carnival and exposition opened last evening.

Thus the unceasing committee work done for many months by representative business men has borne fruit.

This exposition is truly representative of the entire Northwest, for it presents representative exhibits of all the products of every part of the Northwest, and all are displayed in a most interesting and attractive manner.

Presently at 7 o'clock the doors of that immense structure, the Exposition building, were thrown open to the public, and what seemed like an endless stream of people filed in and took time to promenade and view the interminable rows of exhibits so conveniently arranged for their inspection, and many exclamations of admiration and amazement were caused by the tasteful decorations and the brilliant illuminating.

The thousands of electric light bulbs and glowing arc lights made a very brilliant scene.

On the spacious stage at the members of the carnival committee, and on the walls above them were appropriately suspended the large portraits of Lewis and Clark, the pioneer explorers.

The address of General O. Summers, the efficient chairman of the carnival committee, was brief and pointed.

Ladies and Gentlemen: Engraved upon the base of the Skidmore fountain of this city is the following inscription: "Good citizens are the riches of a city."

Last April a goodly number of public-spirited citizens of this city decided that Portland should not be backward as to enterprise to build up a modern city and keep in touch with the latest public enterprises, and, possibly, make both Portland and the State dignified and advanced in any in the Northwest, so far as their commercial, manufacturing and producing interests are concerned.

The committee was organized and proceeded to work with energy and push, and have spared no pains nor expense to develop something new that would interest the people. How well they have succeeded is shown by the attendance here tonight on this our formal opening. There never was a time in the history of our city and state that was more prosperous than at the present time—prosperity of all kinds, successful harvests and a good market for our products. What more could be asked for? Few of our own people here realize the advancement made by our local manufacturers and business men in our large commercial interests, so the committee which represents you, after a period of deep study and careful attention to all these details, has formulated the present Carnival and Exposition, studying the modern idea by combining both amusement and instruction, and I know of no better way of developing these points than by concentrating all the various enterprises under one roof. In the words of our late lamented President, who so beautifully expressed the true value of these exhibitions in his last speech, delivered at the Buffalo exposition, before he was shot: "Expositions are the timekeepers of progress. They record the world's advancement. They stimulate the energy, enterprise and intellect of the people and kindle human sympathies and brighten the daily life of the people. They open mighty storehouses of information to the student. Every exposition, great or small, has helped to advance the progress and comparison of ideas is always education, and as such instructs the brain and hand of man. Friendly rivalry follows, which is the spur to industrial improvement and human activity. It excites a study of the wants, comforts and even the whims of the people, and recognizes the efficacy of high quality and new prices to win their favor."

And were it not for the deep mantle of sorrow which has spread its cloak over you by his death, this occasion might be made more of a harvest festival, but we have our hands and hearts full of the work which is before us. God will be done, and I take up the broken thread of life again, and, as stated, "Good citizens are the riches of a city." It may truthfully be said of your committee that they have assumed much for your common good and at their own personal sacrifice.

In behalf of the committee I give me great pleasure in saying to you, welcome, and I trust it will meet with the interest and success it deserves—may I not say profit—and study will what you may see and enjoy under this roof, and as I have said to the committee I bid you a hearty welcome.

Mayor Rowe's Response.

As soon as the applause that followed General Summers' address had died away, Hon. H. S. Rowe, Mayor of Portland, spoke as follows:

"In the wake of sorrow comes duty. Our Nation has suffered. We have paid due respect and tribute to the illustrious dead. The events of the past two weeks form a dark chapter of our Nation's history. It is now the part of duty and good citizenship to return to our several occupations. The highest interests of humanity have not suffered. Our Constitution has been preserved. Our Government has not been lessened nor has the stability of government been threatened. President Roosevelt has assumed the duties of his high office. He is a man of clear, well-balanced mind, the result of careful study and large experience. He is full of noble impulses upon which he acts promptly. His patriotism is above ambition. The honor of our Nation is dearer to him than his life. He is considered an ideal American, and we may conclude that the powers of government are in safe hands."

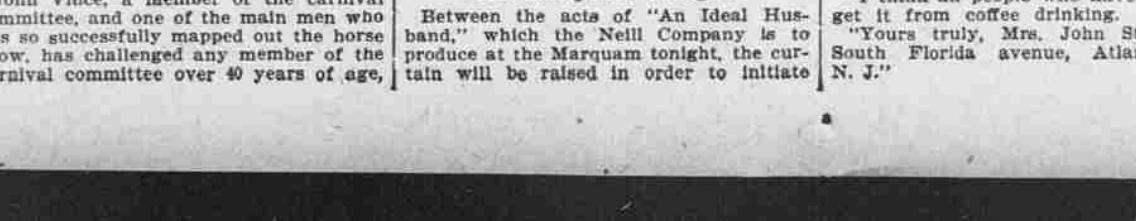

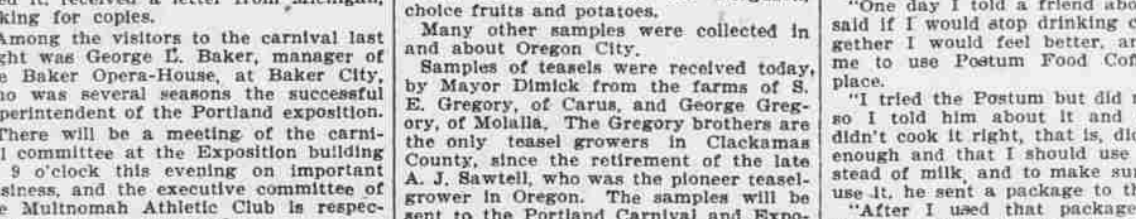

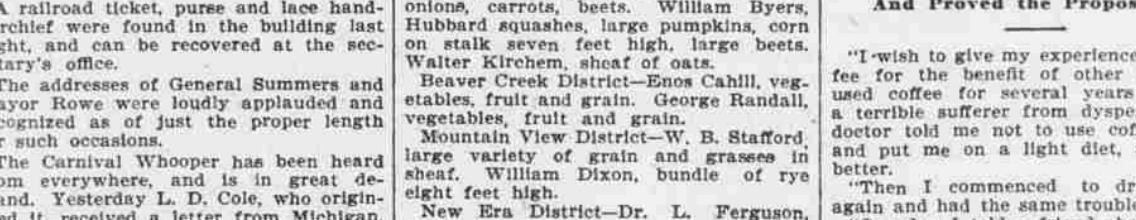

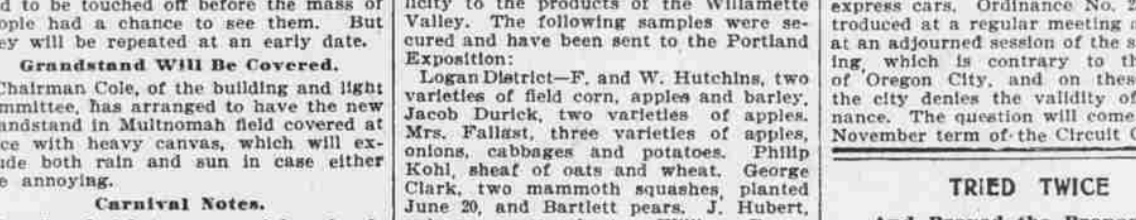

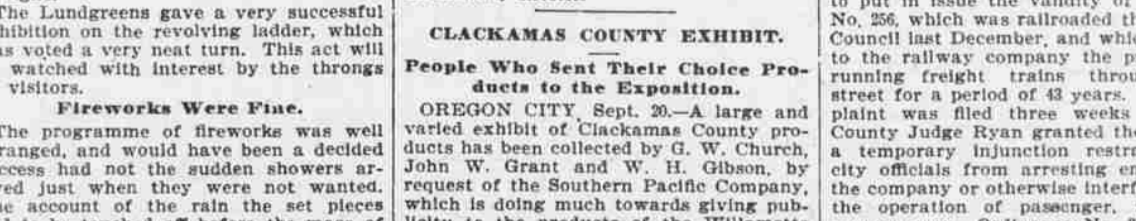

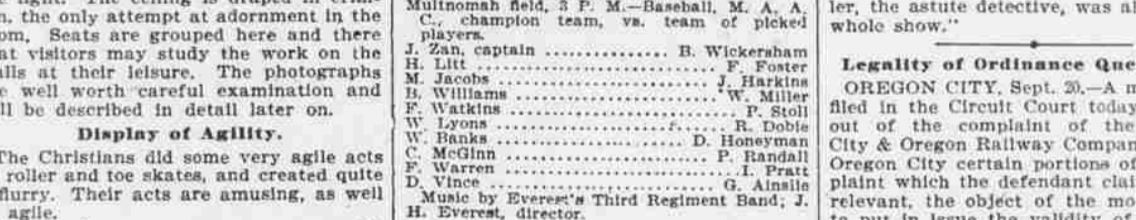

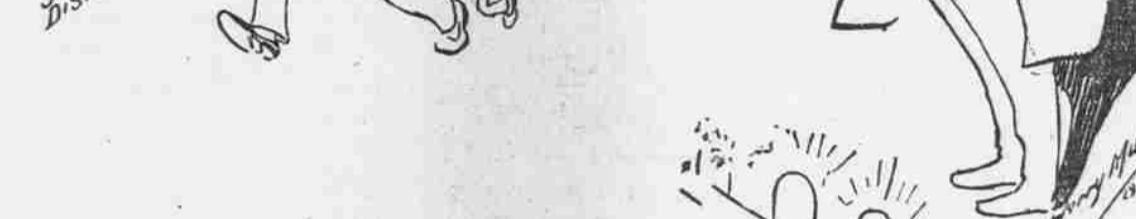

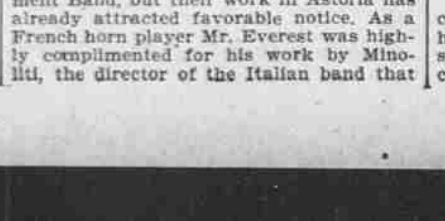

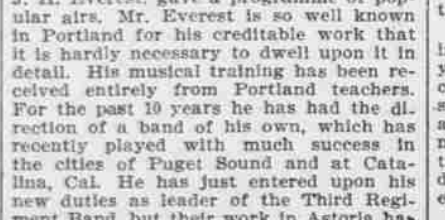

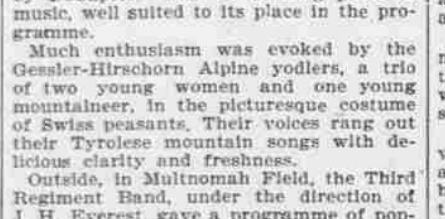

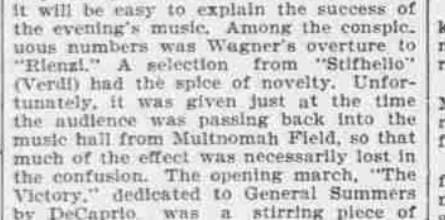

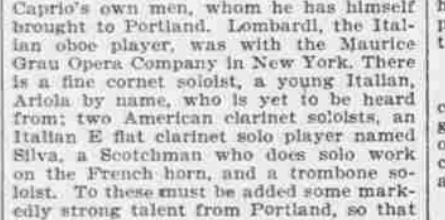

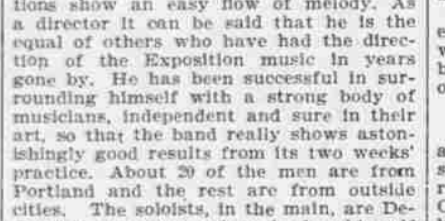

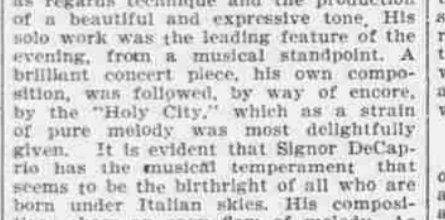

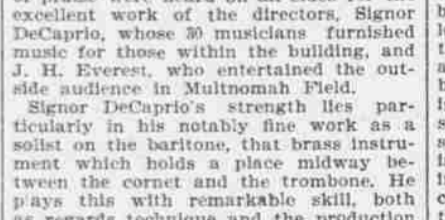

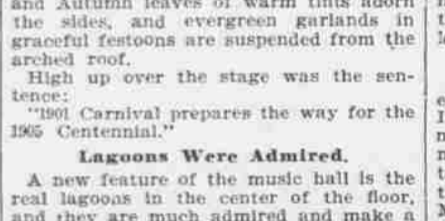

"It is now becoming that we should cheerfully do our part as citizens. I therefore take great pleasure in formally opening this carnival, and I hope it will receive the liberal patronage which it deserves, and that it will be productive of all the good to our state and city, of which it seems possible."

Grains, Grasses, Etc.

The agricultural, horticultural, forestry and fishery department is making an exhibit that is most notable. It is in charge of Captain E. Edwards, and he has made a great success of the enterprise. His efforts were highly commended by the crowds which last night inspected and admired his exhibit. It is well worth inspecting, and will soon be described in detail.

Beauties of Music Hall.

A grand transformation has been wrought in the appearance of the Exposition music hall. The artistic eye, the decorator and the landscape gardener have all been there since the general public were last there previous to last night, and scenes of beauty now greet the eye on every side. Evergreen bowers and autumn leaves of warm tints adorn the sides, and evergreen garlands in graceful festoons are suspended from the arched roof.

High up over the stage was the sentence: "1901 Carnival prepares the way for the 1905 Centennial."

Lagoons Were Admired.

A new feature of the music hall is the real lagoon in the center of the floor, and they are much admired and make a striking scenic scene. Lagoons of real water, spanned by a rustic bridge, with real islands like these, and the beautiful borders of green and living grass, the potted plants representing all climes, make a very pretty picture.

Model Fish Farm.

One of the corners that attracted the most attention last night was the fish hatchery, where salmon and salmon eggs were shown in all stages. Two officials of the United States Fish Commission in uniform showed how artificial propagation is worked, and great interest was shown by visitors.

The Excellent Music.

The music of the two bands was an important feature of the evening. Words of praise were heard on all sides for the excellent work of the directors, Signor DeCaprio, whose 30 musicians furnished music for those within the building, and who has the musical temperament that outside audience in Multnomah Field.

Signor DeCaprio's strength lies particularly in his notably fine work as a conductor on the baton, and the production of a beautiful and expressive tone. His solo work was the leading feature of the evening, from a musical standpoint. A waltz, "The Holy City," which is a strain of pure melody was most delightfully given. It is evident that Signor DeCaprio has the musical temperament that seems to be the birthright of all who are born under Italian skies. His compositions show an easy flow of melody. As the music proceeded, it was heard by the equal of others who have had the direction of the Exposition music in years gone by. He has been successful in securing the services of the best instrumentalists, independent and sure in their art, so that the band really shows astonishingly good results from its two weeks' practice at Portland. The instrumentalists from Portland and the rest are from outside cities. The soloists, in the main, are DeCaprio's own men, whom he has himself brought to Portland. Lombardi, the Italian horn player, was with the Maurice Grau Opera Company in New York. There is a fine cornet soloist, a young Italian, Artola by name, who is yet to be heard from the Exposition. The clarinet soloist, an Italian E. flat clarinet solo player named Silva, a Scotchman who does solo work on the French horn, and a trombone soloist, who is a native of the Exposition.

The highest interests of humanity have not suffered. Our Constitution has been preserved. Our Government has not been lessened nor has the stability of government been threatened. President Roosevelt has assumed the duties of his high office. He is a man of clear, well-balanced mind, the result of careful study and large experience. He is full of noble impulses upon which he acts promptly. His patriotism is above ambition. The honor of our Nation is dearer to him than his life. He is considered an ideal American, and we may conclude that the powers of government are in safe hands.

It is now becoming that we should cheerfully do our part as citizens. I therefore take great pleasure in formally opening this carnival, and I hope it will receive the liberal patronage which it deserves, and that it will be productive of all the good to our state and city, of which it seems possible.

THUGS HOLD UP A SALOON

TWO MASKED MEN ARMED WITH REVOLVERS.

One Terrorizes the Proprietor and a Friend While the Other Taps the Cash Register.

Two rough-looking men with handkerchiefs tied over the lower portion of their faces, last night, at 11 o'clock, entered the saloon at the northeast corner of Park and Burnside streets, shortly after 11 o'clock last night, stole $5 and escaped. One of the robbers terrorized the inmates of the saloon with a drawn revolver, while the other robber looted the cash register.

Bishop has been in the saloon only since August 1. Formerly he conducted an eye-house on Third street, near Yamhill, and about seven months ago a masked robber held up his assistant in this place and stole all the money in the cash register and other valuables. Last night trade was dull in the Burnside-street saloon, and Bishop and a friend named H. J. Hyde were playing cards on a table located near the Park-street entrance when the two robbers suddenly entered.

"Throw up your hands," growled one robber, leveling his revolver, and Hyde, who is a tall, young man, promptly obeyed. Bishop sat in amazement, and as he did not make any motion to throw up his hands, the robber with the revolver sharply "I didn't you had a moment to you to hold up your hands?" Still Bishop made no sign, and the robber gave a smothered exclamation of disgust, and the saloon "Well, you were a fool to face to the wall and don't look at us, be quick," Bishop obeyed.

By this time the other robber was being the busy at the cash register, and he shoved into his capacious pockets a dive for the door, and the other robber followed him, leaving Bishop and Hyde together.

Bishop sprang to the Burnside-street door, and saw the two ruffians speeding down Park street. It was a dark night, and about instantly they disappeared in the gloom. Concluding that he was without firearms, Bishop made no attempt to follow them, but he quickly telephoned to the police.

"Well, I suppose those fellows will spend my money in some other saloon."

"They ought to call back and spend it in your place, Bishop," said a neighbor jokingly.

MATINEES TODAY.

Attractive Bills at All the Local Theaters.

There will be matinee this afternoon at all the theaters at the usual hour. At the Marquam the Nell Company will present "The Case of Rebellious Susan," the play with which they opened their week's engagement. As this is "bread and butter" in their repertoire, the grown women bring marvels of the modist's art, it is sure to be popular with a matinee audience.

At Cordray's "Daughter of the Diamond King," which is a melodrama run over with that alluring quality known as heart interest, will be the attraction. The play tells one of those stories to which every one likes to listen, and there is no reason to doubt that the attendance at the afternoon will be as large as it has been all the week.

"The Queen of Hayti," acoon show, which is one of the best of its kind ever seen in Portland, will be the attraction at the Metropolitan, and, judging from the advance sale, the house will be crowded.

Cathartic or purgative pills do more harm than good. Carter's Little Liver Pills do only good, but a large amount of that. Only one pill a dose.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The barometer has fallen very rapidly over Western Washington, and cloudy and unsettled conditions generally prevail in the North Pacific States. Rain has fallen in the Sound country, and a few light sprinkles have occurred in the Willamette Valley. Rain which spread over the entire district during the next 24 hours.

High southerly winds will occur tonight and Saturday along the coast, and the storm of the company or otherwise interfering with the operation of passenger, freight or express cars. Ordinance No. 256 was introduced at a regular meeting and passed at an adjourned session of the same meeting, which is contrary to the charter of Oregon City, and on these grounds the city denies the validity of the ordinance. The question will come up at the November term of the Circuit Court.

TRIED TWICE

And Proved the Proposition.

"I wish to give my experience with coffee for the benefit of other people. I used coffee for several years and was a terrible sufferer from dyspepsia. The doctor told me not to use coffee or tea and put me on a light diet, and I felt better."

"Then I commenced to drink coffee again and had the same trouble come on. One day I told a friend about it, who said if I would stop drinking coffee altogether I would feel better, and advised me to use Postum Food Coffee in its place."

"I tried the Postum but did not like it, so I told him about it and he said I didn't cook it right, that is, didn't boil it enough and that I should use cream instead of milk, and to make sure I would use it, he sent a package to the house."

"After I used that package, I would have no more coffee in the house. Now I don't know what it is to have dyspepsia and I can eat anything. I also give Postum to my two children and they are the healthiest children you could find anywhere. The youngest is a boy of a month old and we have been drinking Postum for seven months, three times a day. He weighs 20 pounds, and I know that Postum is what keeps both of them so healthy."

"I think all people who have dyspepsia get it from coffee drinking."

"Yours truly, Mrs. John Stringer, 29 South Florida avenue, Atlantic City, N. J."
