All Activities of Government Are in Direct Interest of Industry-Lecture by H. D. Lloyd.

Henry D. Lloyd, of Boston, addressed the Portland Economic League last night at Unitarian Chapel. His subject was, "Taxation—Newest England." The lecture was a description of the political and economic democracy of New Zealand. He spoke of the governmental system in that country as the highest evolution of democracy that the world presents. The chapel was well filled with auditors, and he held them in close attention for nearly

The lecturer spoke from actual knowledge of political conditions in the country, gained from personal intercourse with He drew an Elysium picture of the enjoyment and contentment of the nhabitants. It was not his intention to ignore the imperfections of the system; he said that the people of New Zealand have their serious problems in politics just as these perplexities exist elsewhere. But his painting of the picture was pe haps a little too rich in color. He told how splacing was the panaces, but did not may enough of the fly in the ountment. was made plain by his remarks that e New Zeslanders have solved some ry troublesome dilemmas, or at least have progressed further in their solution than other nations. This was satisfying to his audience, and they highly appreciated the address, and yet the difficulties of the system were smoothed over in a way that did not draw so strongly from doubt as the lecture might otherwise have done. Perhaps he did not have sufficient time; and perhaps his assurance that the methods of government were eminently successful he regarded sufficient to meet skepticism engendered from the ever-pre-vailing fact of increasing pressure of pop-ulation on land; from the formidable doubt about the efficacy of the single-tax system, and from the many other ques-tions which the practice of individualism is waiting for the theory of socialism to demonstrate satisfactorily. The address treme socialists with a large ammunition of facts with which to fortify their theory, but comparatively few of that faith were present. The audience was comboth sexes, who were conscious of exist-ing abuses in the American system and of An Orderly Revolution.

Mr. Lloyd described the democratic prois in no way radical or subvertive of vested rights. The present political and andustrial status has been achieved almost within the past il years. In this time a large part of the private land and capital of the country has passed into the hands of the government, by equitable process, and there has been a distribu-tion among the people of property and resources. Railroads are run for the bene not for surplus revenue. Labor disputes are settled by compulsory arbitration. Women share equally in all privileges. And there is a system of pensions for aged citizens. The whole array of gov-ernmental functions, according to the speaker, is so admirable, the entire gamut of toleration among individuals is so harmonious, that New Zealand is only short of heaven on earth. The selfishness of citizens, their inevitable competi-tions and discords, last night were left out of the music. The speaker hinted out of the music. The speaker hinted broadly that America might profit by imitating New Zealand. He said the citizens in the antipodal land are more happy and more contented than any in the world.

Mr. Lloyd was introduced by Judge A. F. Sears, of the executive committee of the league. The lecturer began by giving an introductory description of New Zealand, its superb scenery, delightful climate and fertile soil. That country is exis on equal terms with the latter in the government. The new population is the most homogenious, compact and equalized democracy in the world. It is not one of socialists, but of matter-of-fact men and women.

Economic Difficulties.

The speaker told of the economic diffiities of 2890, when the people were subjected to the evils of unequal social pressure. Land and capital monopoly pre-valled, and industry was in the control of a money ring. Soup kitchens, bankruptoles, low prices and unemployed men were features of the general despair. Class was arrayed against class and strikes was arrayed against class and attracts were common. After the next election there was a change. An entire industrial reconstruction followed. It was characterized by entire justice and moderation, however. The system of taxation was revolutionized. Taxes were inid upon land and made progressive. The single tax beof doing public work by contract was as far as possible abolished. The large es-fates were acquired by purchase and divided into tracts for those persons with-out land. A new tenure was devised whereby the land was leased instead of

The government made itself an employ-ment agency to secure work for citizens, and adopted arbitration for settlement of disputes. For six years there has not been a single labor strike. The govern-ment lends money at a low rate of in-terest. The common rate before had been 10 and 12 per cent; now it is 5 and 5 per cent. The government also guarantees producers a market for their exported goods, and itself undertakes the function of finding a market,

An income tax is also in force. Men of small income are exempt, and the tax is a progressive one. The object of taxes is not alone to pay expenses of government, but to adjust them to the industrial progress of the people.

Railroads are managed entirely by the overnment. The function of the roads is the public convenience, and they are not operated for surplus revenue. Even if facilities are not up to date, the speak-er thought this was compensated by the fairness of management of the roads. There are no airbrakes, nor dining-cars; but what the shipper pays the railroad gets. Rebates and discrimination are un-Unemployed citizens are transported at low rates. Rates are calculated so us to encourage exports. The whole my heart, which did not feel right. This trouble grew worse steadily.

interestingly of the simple life of the peo-ple. His speech was smooth, deliberate ple. His speech was smooth, deliberate and unhesitating. At the conclusion of his remarks, he answered several ques-tions from the audience. Mr. Lloyd is an author of several social treatises, among them being "Wealth Against Common-wealth," "Labor, Co-Parinership," "A Country Without Strikes."

The third of the league's series of lectures will be given October 22, by Thomas N. Strong. His subject will be "Municipal

The suit of J. Thorburn Ross, trustee, against the City of Portland, in which Judge Cleiand held Saturday that a mortgage tax of the city is a lien against the property covered by the mortgage, has been appealed by the plaintiff to the Supreme Court. The mortgages in question were on property of P. A. Marquam, and the tax was for the year 1891, amounting to $1900. Prior to the filing of the appeal the complaint was amended to present another point, and especially referring to the particular property involved.

The amendment was that in the case of the State of Oregon vs. Wright, decided by the Supreme Court in January, 1887, the court held that no city charter could be amended by a general law; that in November, 1893, in the case of Morrow vs. Crosby, the Supreme Court held that a general law could amend a city charter, thus overruling its previous decision. It is alleged that the mortgages were made after the first decision, and before the second decision, and that the latter is void as to these mortgages, made while the first decision was in force, and the tax levied within that time.

A demurrer to the amended complaint was filed and sustained and the case will be taken up to the higher court at once. The amendment does not apply to the main question that the mortgage tax is a

Transferred to Federal Court. case of Max Moses vs. the Denve & Rio Grande Railway Company has been transferred from the Circuit Court of Multnomah County to the United States Court. Moses is a commercial traveler who was injured in an accident on the Denver & Rio Grande Railway, and brings his suit here as the defendant corporation is doing business in Multnomah County. His complaint states that while he was traveling in a Pullman car, on the Denver & Rio Grande Railway, occupying an upper berth, a large rock was caused to be thrown or fell on the top of the car, crushing it in and seriously injuring him. He sues to recover $6000 damages for loss of business incurred on account of the injuries he received, and for $80,000 damages on account of his injuries.

Patterson Was Not Implicated. The trial of Fred Love on a charge of robbery of $80 from Frank Johnson, was continued before Judge Sears, and a jury yesterday. The principal evidence against the defendant was given by Mrs. Margaret Dalton, who stated that Love made certain admissions to her, telling her also that she would have all kinds of money if she would stick to him. The defense If she would stick to him. The defense will endeavor to break down her testimony. When the evidence for the prosecution was all in, Judge Sears dismissed the case against R. W. Patterson, who was jointly indicted with Love, on the ground that there was no evidence whatever connecting Patterson with the affair. The trial will be concluded today.
