OIL VERSUS WATER.

The Revolution Schemed in Great Power Plants.

H. V. Gates, of Hillsboro, who is interested in a number of light and power plants in Oregon and Washington, has recently returned from San Francisco after looking over gigantic schemes for furnishing power in that vicinity. He thinks cheap oil will revolutionize the systems now in vogue, and will even put water power plants out of business. "Claus Spreckels is building an immense power plant in Oakland, Calif., and last evening at the Perkins, "and when this is put in operation he can transmit power to San Francisco cheaper than the Blue Lake Company can from its plant 70 miles away in the Santa Cruz Mountains. Spreckels has a system of underground conduits laid all over the City of San Francisco, and he is spending millions in perfecting his plans, which, although involving great outlay at first, will be capable of producing power at a very low cost in current expenses. He not only proposes to furnish power to San Francisco factories, but to those of Oakland, San Jose and adjacent Coast towns as well."

Mr. Gates thinks, however, that water power will be the main reliance in Oregon, as the enormous waste of water in the Cascades will some day be taken advantage of to supply the factories of Portland and of every town in the Willamette Valley. He looks for a company to be formed some day for the purpose of transmitting power of wire to the various Oregon cities, and then steam plants will be brought into serious competition. The power from the mountains will be so cheap that the cities can afford electric lights in all the places that are now dark, as the energy that can be utilized in the Cascades is absolutely inexhaustible.

RICHES OF CANDLE CREEK.

Working Claims in Old Glory Creek—Nuggety Gold.

Henry Ruhl and daughter and Fred Sandstrom, who have returned from Northern Alaska, tell an interesting story of a land of gold up there. They went from Nome to the Fairhaven district last August, and have been working claims on Old Glory Creek, near where Humboldt Gates, well known in Oregon, paid $5000 for some placer interests. Candle Creek, the latest discovery, Mr. Ruhl considers the richest spot up there. His daughter saw men take out $10 to the pan there in spots, and colors were found everywhere. The country was flat and hard to prospect, but 200 people went in there this Fall and started a town named Keavallik. Most of the gold found is nuggety, and the gravel is of a loose nature. The new mines are within 15 miles of the Yukon belt of timber.

On Hazsum Creek this Fall some ground yielded as high as $50 a day to the man, but there were only 15 days of sluicing. The Fairhaven district, Mr. Ruhl says, contains more gold than Montana, or Idaho did in early days, but lack of timber and climatic conditions are against it. Its streams run north and empty into the Gulf of Good Hope.

THE KHAKIS COME AT LAST

Oregon National Guard Received 1500 New Uniforms.

Last Spring Adjutant-General Gantenbein made a requisition on the Quartermaster-General of the United States for 1500 khaki uniforms for use of the Oregon National Guard. The requisition was disallowed for the reason that the new regular Army requirement needed all such uniforms as were available. General Gantenbein persisted in the matter, and made another requisition this Fall, which met with more success. The requisition was granted, and the 1500 uniforms were shipped, and have now reached here. The advantages of these khaki uniforms are their suitability for field service, and they can be washed at one-fourth the expense of laundering blue-woolen uniforms. This, in case of a regiment, is a considerable item. The new uniforms will not be issued at present, as there is no immediate necessity for them. But they will be issued to company commanders in ample time for field and camp duty next Summer. The Chief of Ordnance of the Army has recommended that Krag-Jorgensen rifles be issued to the National Guard as soon as possible, and General Gantenbein considers the recommendation an important entering wedge toward the carrying out of the plan. The present Army used by the National Guard is the old Springfield 45, and all the guardsmen think it is high time they were brought up to date in the matter of weapons.

MEIER & FRANK COMPANY

NOT AS A FAULT-FINDER.

Mr. Lombard's Remarks Were for the Weal of Portland.

PORTLAND, Nov. 6.—(To the Editor.)—The necessarily short references to some of my remarks at the recent meetings of the Chamber of Commerce, embodied in your reports of those meetings, are calculated to put me in the light of a fault-finder merely, unless taken in connection with my other remarks.

Criticism of some special features of your local conditions, without a generous appreciation of the many and important points of excellence to be observed about your city, would be obviously in bad taste, coming from one who, like myself, is comparatively a new resident. What I said on various occasions to my colleagues of the Chamber of Commerce was this: That I, as a comparatively new comer, and one who had selected this city as a place of residence after looking over a number of other places, could testify most emphatically to the superiority of this city in point of picturesque and advantageous location, admirable climate, abundant and pure water supply and exceptional salubrity; as also to its superior educational, religious and social advantages.

All of these advantages are of a fundamental and permanent character, but along with them there are certain blemishes observable on the surface, which are not fundamental, and can be remedied, but which strike a visitor quite unfavorably, and are calculated to mar the good impression otherwise produced, the more so as some of these are so glaringly in evidence to the casual observer. Among these I have made special mention of the dilapidated approaches of the City Park at the head of Washington street, because I know that a large proportion of the travelers and tourists that pass through the city during the season visit the park and must carry away an impression that is not complimentary to our city. From the point of view of the average visitor, which I am still able to assume, these and other unightly things, including some dilapidated sidewalks, glaring advertisements and ruined and tumble-down buildings, will practically neutralize our numerous attractions and the efforts we put forth to make them known.

As a member of the advertising committee of the Chamber of Commerce, in which capacity this subject happened to be discussed, I have insisted all along that our advantages and attractions ought to be better known abroad, and that a united effort of all our commercial bodies should be inaugurated to better advertise our city and state. It was along that line of endeavor that during the Summer I suggested the propriety of taking some steps to have our daily meteorological record published in the principal daily papers east of the Rocky Mountains, in striking contrast with the records then prevailing in those parts of the continent. But I have insisted at the same time that it is just as much a part of a sound system of advertising and just as important as a means of attracting the right sort of people, to stimulate as far as possible from our midst those conditions which create a bad impression and cause unfavorable comments. It is suggested that the present Char-
