THE WHEELEST SATE

THE PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, December 5, 1901.

The Wheeler's Fate

Derrilet Barge Found to Pieces in the Breakers.

COLOURED COOK DROWNED

Sailors Abandoned by the Vessel Bumpkin.

THE NEWS is that the Bell milking wagon has been taken over for use as a milk wagon.

CLARA BROWN WAGNER

Small Steamer C. C. Wagner

SCTTLE, Dec. 6. - The small steamer C. C. Wagner, which left Seattle last July on a trip to Japan, was reported missing last month. The vessel was carrying 24 or 25 passengers and an unknown amount of property. It was last heard of on October 21 at sea. The steamer was owned by the H. C. Brown company of this city, and the passengers were various individuals.

KETESEN GETS $10,000

DAMAGES AGAINST HUNTING HILL & YAKULNA WOOD COMPANY

See it's a bit of a mystery how the vessel got into the shoal water. It was reported that there were several boats on the scene, but none could determine the cause of the accident. The vessel was going to Japan when it struck a shoal and the crew were able to get off without injury. The vessel was carrying a large amount of property, including a large quantity of lumber and a number of cattle.

TAKINIA BAY, WHERE THE LUMBER BARGE C. C. WHEELER WENT A HOME.

When the crew discovered that they were in danger, they immediately attempted to get off the vessel, but were unable to do so. They were then forced to abandon the vessel, and were later picked up by a passing steamer. The vessel was completely destroyed by the accident.

THE TRAGEDY has been described as a great loss to the shipowners. The vessel was valued at $10,000, and the owners were unable to determine the cause of the accident. The vessel was owned by the H. C. Brown company of this city, and the passengers were various individuals.

THE BREAKERS have been described as a great loss to the shipowners. The vessel was valued at $10,000, and the owners were unable to determine the cause of the accident. The vessel was owned by the H. C. Brown company of this city, and the passengers were various individuals.