SOME LAWTERS OBJECT .- License Officer McEachern was out yesterday after per-sons who have not paid their licenses. While a large number of lawyers have paid their licenses promptly, it is found that a considerable number of members of the profession have failed and neglected to do so, and some of them protest against paying, and some even hint at contesting the ordinance. If others would only em-ploy them to contest the law, that would be business; but there is not much business in conducting a lawsuit against the city to endeavor to escape paying a trifling license, unless one has more time than money. The city authorities are of opinion that more prompt and energetic action in the matter of collecting the licenses would secure better results.
