THE OREGONIAN'S HANDBOOK.

The Oregonian's Handbook tells all about Portland, the entire Columbia River watershed and the 1905 World's Fair, commemorative of the Lewis and Clark expedition to Oregon. The book centains over 150 handsome illustrations, and it is printed on enameled book paper. It will be malled to any address in the United States or Canada for T cents a copy.

FUNNT TO A SPECTATOR -A reporter. passing along Alder street yesterday, op-posite the establishment of the Honeyman Hardware Company, was witness to a performance which might have been the rehearsal of an act in a paniomime, as he could not hear what was said by the actors. A man drove up to the Alder-street entrance of the hardware company's store, jumped down to the sidewalk and said something to a clerk who came out. This clerk disappeared down a sidewalk elevator, and in a few minutes arose from the basement with a keg of spikes on the elevator. He turned to the customer and was talking to him, evidently about the keg of spikes. Just then another clerk came hurriedly out of the store, stepped on the elevator, pulled the chain and disappeared below the sidewalk. This was not noticed by the first clerk. as his back was turned; so, in a moment having finished his talk with the customer wheeled around to help lift the keg of spikes into the wagon. He did not no-tice that the clevator was gone, and so fell backward down through the sidewalk. This was so far strictly in the line of pantomime. The man, in failing, landed on the head of the man who had taken the slevator away, crushing his hard hat quite fact, and the failing main turned a somer-sault and issided on his feet. Nobody was hurt, and both men were considerably shaken up. There the elevator came to the surface with both clerks and the keg of articles and the both clerks and the keg of spikes, and the clerk whose hat had been ruined was considerably the mndder of the two. His name is John Foste, and he thought that W. E. Allison, the shipping clerk, who had smashed it, had put up a job on him, and there was no more pantomime about the affair, but an evident inclination to conclude it with a fight.

The whole affair was inexpressibly amusing to an onlooker, especially as no one was hurt. DETECTIVES BREAK UP CHINESE FIGHT

-Six Chinamen, armed with iron bars and the butt ends of revolvers started a handto-hand fight last night at Second and Yamhili streets, and matters were reach-ing an interesting climax when Detectives Snow and Kerrigan, who were passing, took a hand. Then the fighters broke and fied, but the detectives chased one China-man, Lang Fu, who flourished a revolver, and they caught him before he had gone 50 yards. Lung Fu dropped his revolver on the sidewalk and said: "What fo' you chase poor China boy? Him good." At this juncture Tu Ching ran up, now that all danger of bloodshed had passed away, this ju and he said that Lang Fn had tried to rob him. Two different interpreters began to tell the story of the attempted robbery, and they agreed generally that Lung Fu was a bad Chinaman. It was not possible to learn what had caused the fight, and Lung Fu was locked up. He signified that he was an ill-used individual.

FREEDOM IS CELEBRATED.

Afro-Americans Observe Annual Anniversary.

The Afro-American Council No. 1, of Portland, held its annual celebration of the anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation at the A. M. E. Zlon Church, Thirteenth and Main streets, last evening. An excellent programme was arranged by the committee. It consist-ed of several musical numbers and addresses. After the exercises refreshments were served on the first floor of the church.

Mr. W. H. Carter opened the pro-gramme by singing "The Star Spangled Banner," the congregation joining in the chorus. The master of ceremonics, J. N. Fullilove, introduced W. L. Brady, the president of the council, who made a short speech urging the colored people to co-operate with the whites. A portion of the Declaration of Independence was read by Charles Ritter. Mrs. Biggers read an essay on the Eman-cipation Proclamation. Mrs. Eaton on cipation Proclamation. Mrs. Eaton on the piano and Edward Rutherford on the horn rendered an excellent duct. Rev. J. W. Wright delivered a lengthy address on slavery, which took up the sub-ject in a manner which showed much study. The Misses Wright sang a vocal duct. The next number on the programme the address of the evening, by Judge John F. Caples. Mr. Caples could not remem-ber the time when he had not been present at these meetings. He said that ever since 1855 he had always made it point to attend and had not missed on except during his absence in Chile. His address was interesting and greatly ap-His poaled to those present. He was ap-plauded throughout his speech. At the close of his address he announced that he was going to take up a collection for the pastor. He passed his high slik hat among those present and many libtral contributions were forthcoming. The programme was closed with a plano sold by Mrs. Enton, after which the meeting idjourned to the refreshment hall. LEWIS AND CLARK FUND.
