

ACCIDENT HAS FATAL END

HARRY N. ANDRESEN, INJURED BY ELEVATOR, DIES.

Mystery is Unsolved Whether He Fell From Fifth Floor or Was Caught by the Cage.

Harry N. Andresen, shipbuilder, and residing at 47 North Seventh street, died yesterday morning at St. Vincent's hospital from the injuries he received in the elevator accident at the Washington building, Saturday night. His widow is prostrated with grief. By a strange fatality, her first husband, Mr. McDougall, was killed about 17 years ago by a chain breaking and striking him on the breast, while he was engaged in moving a house. Mrs. Andresen's only son, Jesse McDougall, an accomplished musician, died one year ago from spinal meningitis. Now she is stricken with a new sorrow and must bear her grief alone, with all her relatives living many miles away.

The exact particulars of the accident by which Andresen lost his life will probably never be known. So far as can be learned, nobody was present when he walked to the elevator well. Two men who declined to give their names, and who are believed to be the men who were on the sidewalk, and this account I did not see Mr. Andresen enter the street door leading to the elevator. At this point, I was on the other side of the street. I followed, and when I reached the top of the building I was surprised to hear a man scream, and then I saw he was jammed against the top of the elevator cage and the landing. I am not sure about Mr. Andresen's position as he lay there, as the light near the elevator was not lighted, and in the darkness I could not see clearly, but I think his body was on top of the cage and he was caught between the top of the cage and the landing. Then some men came and lowered the elevator and lifted him out.

"Then you think from the position you first found Mr. Andresen that he could not have fallen from the fifth story landing?" was asked. "That's just it," said Mrs. Koch, emphatically. "I followed so closely behind him, when I noticed him on the street, that he could not have had time to ride on the elevator to the fifth floor, lower than the second story. The first top of it. Of course I cannot tell how the accident happened, but since I was one of the first, or maybe the first, to see him after he was caught, I think he must have walked up to the elevator door, finding it open, and that he saw the cage was in the basement. Probably he pulled the rope and the cage ascended more quickly than he expected it would, and then he was caught before he knew it."

J. F. Kilien, who occupies an office in the Washington building, said: "I was busy in my office when I heard the sound, apparently proceeding from the elevator. Thinking that some one was hurt, I ran down stairs and saw Mr. Andresen pinned between the top of the elevator cage and the landing. I tried to get him out, but I do not know, nor have I heard, how the accident happened."

It was stated at the Washington building yesterday afternoon that the elevator attendant goes off duty for the night, after 8:30 o'clock or so, that many of the people who live there operate the elevator themselves, in preference to walking upstairs, and that probably Mr. Andresen knew this and thought he could manage the elevator, without assistance.

Mrs. Andresen is being cared for in her afflictions by women friends. She has been somewhat of an invalid lately, and suffers from heart trouble. Her nearest relatives are two sisters, one of whom lives in Illinois, and one in New York. Two of her late husband's friends, who live at Sacramento, and word of the accident has been telegraphed to them.

The dead man was 48 years old, and he was born in Denmark. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed, but will be held under the direction of the Woodmen of the World, Webfoot Camp, of which Mr. Andresen was a member.

The coroner will conduct an inquiry into the case this afternoon.

ELUDE SLOW POLICEMAN.

Masquerading Wives Escape and Husbands' Plot Falls Down.

Over in Irvington, a dozen or so women of a literary turn of mind have formed a sort of club which meets once a week at the home of one of the members, and spends the evening reading and discussing the works of some author, and discussing the man and the merits or demerits of his work. The victims chosen for consideration at the last meeting were Donker T. Washington and Paul Dunbar, the colored poet. As these meetings are attended by members only, their worse halves finding it more congenial to their tastes to assemble by themselves and play whist or some other equally intellectual game of chance, two of the women arranged to present themselves at the meeting as representatives of the colored gentlemen to be discussed. They at first intended to dress in men's clothing, but finally compromised on rainy-day skirts, with their husbands' coat vests, and wearing collars, etc., and with their faces and hands blackened, of course.

The husbands of whom the women became aware of the scheme, entered into an unholy compact, and informed the Chief of Police that two women dressed in men's clothes and with their faces blackened, were masquerading tonight on the streets of Irvington, and that they had information that on a certain night they would be out, and also of the direction in which they would travel. He asked the Chief to have these highly suspicious characters arrested and, if possible, these improper actions checked. The Chief was surprised to learn that such suspicious characters were running at large on the streets of quiet, orderly Irvington, and he at once took steps to have the women masqueraders arrested. He directed a policeman to station himself at a point where the two women were likely to be met in company and ordered the patrol wagon to be in waiting near by.

It was intended that both the women should be arrested and landed in jail before they knew who was the man with them. Fortunately for the women, they took a different route to the place of meeting of the club, and so did not fall into the arms of the policeman, and when he discovered them and gave chase, they took to their heels and fairly outdistanced the cop and reached the place where the club was assembled, slightly winded, but all right in other respects. The doors were locked, but the policeman had not the nerve to ring the bell at the rather handsome house in which his intended victims had found refuge, and so Messrs. Washington and Dunbar were discussed to the entire satisfaction of the club.

The policeman went away back and was sat down on by the Chief. It is now suspected that the Chief was in the dis-

Receiver of Portland Savings Bank Will Turn $3000 Into Court.

The final hearing on the report of Receiver Nixon, of the Portland Savings Bank, will take place in Judge Bellinger's court tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock, when the receiver will tender to the court the money remaining in his hands, some $3000, and will ask for his discharge. Receiver Nixon submitted his final report in November last, and the final hearing was set for January 12, and R. B. Lamson was appointed to examine his books, accounts, vouchers, receipts, etc. Notice was also given to all parties interested to file objections to the final report, if any they have, before the date set for the hearing thereof. Mr. Lamson is prepared to submit his report of the examination of the books, and the final hearing will be had tomorrow. Depositors who had not secured their dividends prior to

THIS DEMANDS ACTION. Something That President Roosevelt Ought to Consider.

PORTLAND, Jan. 12.—(To the Editor.)—For several months the appointment of a successor to the present incumbent of a certain Federal office in this state removed because of immoral conduct, has been pending. The junior Senator no doubt has a preference for one of the seven candidates for the position, but for the best of reasons has declared his willingness to recommend to the President the nomination, with a single exception, of any one of the seven. The senior Senator, it appears from your recent Washington dispatches, and your local reports, refuses to act in this important matter until the President gets the two Senators together. In view of the facts it seems that Senator Simon needs to be "got together."

Bennett, Ed Krinnick; clerks, Peter Van Hoomisen, George Zillinger, George Shearer. Precinct 40—Judges, A. Van Hoomisen, W. A. Mundy; clerks, E. B. Seabrook, G. W. Harter.

NINTH WARD. Precinct 41—Judges, G. W. Holcomb, Precinct 42—Judges, R. F. Ayers, F. W. Forster; clerks, Valentine Brown, B. Falow. Precinct 43—Judges, Joseph Worth, T. J. Hammer; clerks, M. A. Raymond, Leroy Donagh.

TENTH WARD. Precinct 48—Judges, M. D. Wisdom, Ben F. Hedges; clerks or judges, A. J. McAvay, G. G. Mayer; clerk, Charles S. Barnes; clerk, Ernest Kroner, George W. Butler.

ELEVENTH WARD. Precinct 52—Judges, J. C. Thomas, William Montag; clerks, C. P. Haight, V. S. Ogie. Precinct 53—Judges, George Easterli, Leg Stopper; clerks, P. L. G. Wiser, E. S. Salzer.

THIS DEMANDS ACTION. Something That President Roosevelt Ought to Consider. PORTLAND, Jan. 12.—(To the Editor.)—For several months the appointment of a successor to the present incumbent of a certain Federal office in this state removed because of immoral conduct, has been pending.

Senator Mitchell is ready and willing to act, and fairly, Senator Simon is not willing to do anything but what which he supposes will further his own personal and political interests. He is perfectly indifferent to the fact that the Senator who appears from your recent Washington dispatches, and your local reports, refuses to act in this important matter until the President gets the two Senators together.

The officer was removed for being solely responsible for the nastiest scandal which ever polluted the moral atmosphere of any community of our state, and which outraged and disgraced his own wife and children, and forever destroyed his own home. Moreover he did publicly and shamelessly, and in open defiance of public sentiment, and in absolute disregard of the advice and admonition of his friends and relatives continue his notorious conduct while an officer of the public service.

It is understood that there will be an effort made tomorrow to have the money remaining in the hands of the receiver divided among those depositors who had not received what was due them when the bank was closed the second time. It is said that the bank worked a very unfair scheme on these people, who had agreed to an extension in order to allow them quarterly payments under the extension of 10 per cent, but many who did not present their claims within a certain time were not paid, and so have not received as much in the shape of dividends as the others.

In this connection it may be stated that the Portland Savings Bank building is to be sold tomorrow to satisfy a first mortgage of $100,000. The building was sold by the receiver a short time ago in the interests of the depositors, subject to the first mortgage, which was purchased by P. L. Willis for the Topaz Land Company for $100,000, and was sold by this company to Henry McClure, of Seattle. The first mortgage was foreclosed several weeks ago, and McClure, as one of the defendants and not a resident of this state, petitioned to have the foreclosure proceedings held in the United States Court. The proceedings, however, were had in the State Court, and now McClure alleges that the foreclosure is illegal and asks to the Supreme Court, and will appeal the matter to the Supreme Court, and, if defeated there, will carry it to the Supreme Court of the United States. It is not improbable that the matter will be carried to the courts for four or five years, and if in the end McClure wins he will be entitled to the rents of the property for all that time, say some $20,000 per year. This is an outlandish issue and of no consequence or interest to the depositors. It is likely, however, that the trouble arising out of the failure of the Portland Savings Bank will not be entirely settled and disposed of for several years.

GREAT DAY FOR CHURCH. First Presbyterian Church Receives Sixty New Members. Yesterday was a red-letter day at the First Presbyterian Church. It was a common day, and just 90 persons were received into membership. It was a very tender service and at times during the hour many were in tears. Last week the pastor and people were invited to a series of meetings it has had for many years. There was no special excitement, and no professional evangelist was present. The pastor and people were invited to a series of meetings, and every evening the lecture-room was filled and the meetings were pervaded by a sense of unusual solemnity and sagacity.

The work of the First Presbyterian Church has grown to such proportions that it has been found necessary to secure another helper. Five prospective members are being conducted by this church, the Rev. A. D. Soper having charge of the well-known Men's Resort in the North side of the city. The Rev. E. T. Allen, of San Francisco, will assist Dr. Hill in the pastoral work of the church. Mr. Allen is a man of attractive personality and is a good preacher. He is of family, having a wife and one child. He will begin work about April 1.

Track Is Taken Up. The City & Suburban Railway Company has taken up its track on Commercial street, between Stanton street and Killingsworth avenue. This piece of road was formerly used by the St. Johns steam motor, but the change of the junction to Killingsworth and Williams avenues does away with the use of the Commercial street line. However, the track is retained on Stanton street, as the car barn at the old junction is still in use. The new junction on Killingsworth avenue is a great improvement in every way. Passengers step from the motor to the electric car under shelter. Residents also on the Peninsula are greatly pleased with the new schedule on which cars are now operated.

WATER BOARD IS TO STAY SEPARATE COMMISSION WILL HAVE CHARGE OF CITY WORKS. New City Charter Strips Committee of Legislative Power—Municipal Elections on Oct. Years.

If the report which will be submitted to the Charter Commission by the revision committee is adopted, future Boards of Water Commissioners will be stripped of the legislative functions now vested in that body, and the duties will entirely executive. The committee will report in favor of the Water Commission being preserved as a separate department of the city government, and it will not be under the control of the Executive Board.

The details have not been all settled as yet, and at tonight's meeting of the revision committee the question of length of office of Water Commissioners will be determined. It is quite probable, said one of the members of the committee yesterday, that four years will be the term of office on the commission, and provision will be made for the first appointees to go out at the expiration of two and four years, so as to bring subsequent appointments under alternate administration. The committee is agreed that the members of the commission shall be appointed by the Mayor.

The number of members of the commission will be reduced from six, as at present, to four, and the members will be elected to office by the Mayor. One of the reasons for preserving the Water Commission was the fact that the Executive Board already has its work cut out. A number of important departments, including police, fire, parks, harbor, streets, pound and others, will be under the direction of the board, without any feeling among the members of the revision committee that too much work would be assigned to the board, and difficulty would be found in selecting capable men to serve as members.

Following the example of other cities of the country which have recently adopted new charters, the revision committee will report in favor of municipal elections being held in alternate years from the state elections. Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other large cities have adopted this plan, with a view of divorcing local and state affairs, and making the city elections on purely municipal issues, in which party lines may be obscured if the necessity for so doing comes up. The extra cost of taxpayers in holding the elections separately will not exceed $5000, said A. L. Mills last night, "and the good that will result will more than justify the expense."

At the meeting of the Charter Commission Thursday night, there will be considered the powers of the Council, franchise and public utilities questions. The revision committee is holding nightly sessions, and is almost through with the executive branch of the city government, all the offices having been considered except that of City Engineer, being work of outlining the duties of the different boards is completed, with the exception of the Civil Service Board, which will be considered this coming week.

CARPENTERS RAISE WAGES Their Union Demands $3 a Day as Minimum Wage. The local branch of the Carpenters' Union has served notice upon the contractors of the city that on and after April 1, 1902, the minimum wages for carpenter-work shall be $3 per day, with a 50 per cent addition to the regular scale for each extra hour. The carpenters say further that eight hours shall constitute a day's work, and that extra pay must be given for all additional time. The demand as to time is not new, for it has long been the custom of Portland contractors to pay for overtime. However, the demand of $3 per day, for a minimum wage, may jar the feelings as well as the pocket-books of the builders of mansions.

The carpenters say that, in Seattle, the minimum wage is $2 50 per day, while Tacoma and New Whatcom have adopted $3 as the minimum wage. In Spokane the scale is even higher. Portland contractors have been paying wages varying from $2 up, but their employers say that it's time for the metropolis of Oregon to adopt a higher scale of wages, and it is up to the contractors to pay the wages demanded. Speaking of the situation last evening a member of the Carpenters' Union said: "We demand nothing unreasonable or unjust. In the other towns of the Northwest, carpenters get $2 and $3 per day. The contractors here are not doing so well, and why shouldn't we? When the price of lumber is raised the contractors say nothing, but simply add the extra expense on to the cost of the building. They can do the same with the extra expense involved in raising our wages. If people want houses built they ought to be willing to pay for them. Certainly we have given the contractors the benefit of help in doing so. If a man's services as a carpenter aren't worth $3 per day, he ought to quit and try something else. We have given the contractors three months notice, so that they will not lose anything on present work."

There are more than 500 carpenters here in Portland, and they are getting ready to belong to the union. We are gaining strength right along. At our last meeting we initiated 23 members. I anticipate to Emma Creek, where their placer claim, said to be the best in the territory, is located. T. C. McNam and others interested in the claim will postpone their start for two or three weeks, in order to escape as much of the winter weather as possible. MINERS LEAVE FOR ALASKA C. F. and R. D. Morris Start for the Koyukuk District.

The weather has been so Spring-like of late that people who have mining interests in Alaska begin to imagine that Spring is at hand, and are getting uneasy and anxious to go North long before the wild fow have thought of such a thing. C. F. Morris, a partner of the McNam and Bros. arrived here from his home in Linn County in company with his brother, R. D. Morris, Friday, on his way to the Koyukuk country, Alaska. The two left Saturday morning over the Northern Pacific with their trained dog team and outfit, and will push their way with all possible speed 1000 miles by snow trail toward the railway terminus at White Horse
