Of a pair of spectacles or eyeglasses does not lie in the frame, nor even in the lenses, until the master hand and eye of the skilled optician has accurately measured and adjusted them to the vision they are designed to serve. Anybody can fit lenses to the frame; only the few can fit lenses to the eye. This accounts for the continuous and prosperous existence of a scientific establishment like the Portland Optical Institute, and the frequent shipwreck of light-ballooned concerns on the rock of incompetence.
