Burleson Brings Boer War Up in the House.

DEBATE TAKES WIDE LATITUDE

Thayer's Resolution for an Investigation of the Sugar Trust is Decried—Other Matters Considered.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The House today continued its consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill, but during general debate on an appropriation bill, the members who spoke devoted themselves to everything except the bill before the House. Early in the day Thayer (Dem. Mass.) attempted to take advantage of the division among the Republicans on the subject of reciprocity by bringing forward a resolution to investigate reports that the sugar trust would be the chief beneficiary of Cuban reciprocity. He tried to overturn a decision of the Speaker in order to secure action on his resolution, but the Republicans came up solidly against such a course, and the bill was checked. Brantley, a Georgia Democrat, made a speech in favor of Cuban reciprocity, and Meyer, a Louisiana Democrat, against it. (Rep. Conn.) made some remarks on his monetary bill. The feature of the day, however, was a speech by Burleson (Dem. Tex.), attacking Secretary Hay for declining to require the British authorities to furnish a passport to go through the British lines to Rev. Hiram W. Thomas and wife, who desire to go to South Africa to distribute Bibles and other religious literature. (Rep. Ill.) chairman of the foreign affairs committee, made a spirited reply to Burleson, charging the Texas member with attempting to prejudice the case before the evidence is in.

The Proceedings.

When the House met, Thayer created something of a flurry by rising to a question of privilege, which, he said, involved the "dignity of the House and the safety of its members." He therefore presented a resolution setting on foot an investigation regarding Cuban reciprocity, together with allegations that the sugar trust is to be the chief beneficiary of such reciprocity; that it is subsidizing newspapers, establishing literary bureaus and in other ways attempting to create public sentiment in favor of Cuban reciprocity. The resolution declares that the dignity of the House is involved, and calls for a special committee of seven members to investigate the subject.

Loud (Rep. Cal.) made a point of order against the resolution, which was sustained by the yeas.

Thayer appealed from the decision of the chair.

"I move to lay the appeal on the table," instantly cried Payne, the Republican leader.

Thayer demanded the yeas and noes and the roll was called. The Republicans voted solidly for the motion to lay the appeal on the table, while two Democrats, Phipps (Ga.) and McMillan (N. Y.), voted away from their party associates and voted with the Republicans. The appeal was laid on the table, 125 to 87.

Some of the members of the committee of the whole (Littlefield in the chair), and entered upon consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill. As Littlefield took the chair there was an outburst of applause on both sides of the House.

Loud, in charge of the bill, explained its provisions in a preliminary statement. The bill, he said, carries $75,500,000, being $18,500,000 more than the appropriations for the current year. The main cause of the increase, he said, is the increased salaries of postal employees, which under this bill would amount to $1,000,000.

Brantley (Dem. Ga.), taking advantage of the latitude allowed in general debate of an appropriation bill, discussed the question of Cuban reciprocity. He contended that whatever reciprocity should be done speedily. He favors reciprocity. He argued that the South would benefit greatly from the commerce of Cuba if free trade were established. He said that Cuba was prosperous, a sanitary condition would be maintained there which would remove the danger of yellow fever, which had constantly threatened the Southern ports.

Hill (Rep. Conn.) followed Brantley with some remarks in favor of his bill to maintain the legal tender value of the silver dollar at a parity with gold. He was speaking, a group of Republicans were listening to Senator Hanna. The little gathering attracted much attention.

Finally Sulzer (Dem. N. Y.), rising to a point of order, asked that reciprocity be done speedily. He favors reciprocity. He argued that the South would benefit greatly from the commerce of Cuba if free trade were established. He said that Cuba was prosperous, a sanitary condition would be maintained there which would remove the danger of yellow fever, which had constantly threatened the Southern ports.

MALLODY ON SHIP BILL

FLORIDA SENATOR ANALYZES THE SUBSIDY MEASURE.

Says It Would Not Accomplish the Result Hoped for by its Promoters.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—For several hours today the Senate had the ship subsidy bill under consideration. Mallory made an extensive and able speech in opposition to the measure. He analyzed the bill carefully, and held that there is no good reason for its enactment into law, saying he believed it would not accomplish the result hoped for by its promoters.

Prior to consideration of the subsidy measure a lively debate occurred over an effort on the part of Berry to ascertain what the committee on privileges and elections might be expected to report to the Senate the resolution providing for the election of Senators by the direct vote of the people. Hoar indicated his vigorous opposition to such a resolution, on the ground that it would subvert the fundamental principles upon which the Senate was founded.

The Proceedings.

The Senate, when it convened, at the request of Cullom, one of the conferees, disagreed to the conference report on the bill providing for the carrying into effect of the stipulations of article 7 of the Paris

Convention. The Senate then, at 2 o'clock, resumed consideration of the ship subsidy bill, and Mallory, one of the Democratic members of the committee on commerce, addressed the Senate in opposition to the measure. He said in his ultimate analysis the bill is a measure to take the money of the taxpayers to build up the private business of individuals and corporations, and to bring to Fry's argument in support of the establishment of an auxiliary navy, for which the pending bill provides, he does not believe there is sufficient justification for the extraordinary expenditure proposed by the bill. In the event of a war between the United States and Great Britain, France, Germany and other great powers, this country would find itself in a very different situation from that in which it was during the Spanish War. The proposed auxiliary cruisers would not be left to scour the seas, because it is the policy of the nation named now to build vessels which could be converted into any one of the ships which the pending bill provides would become a part of the naval auxiliary fleet.

After reading the length the provisions of the measure, Mallory declared a measure never in its history passed a measure of this character. It has passed many laws to provide private gains under the pretense of public policy, but never one so absolutely bald and so devoid of the vantage of private purposes as this measure.

He would go as far as any Senator to put the American merchant marine on a footing of equality with other nations, but he could not indorse a measure so at variance with every principle of right and justice.

McClure and Dewey gave notice that they would introduce the Senate tomorrow on the ship subsidy bill.

Proctor gave notice that after the disposition of the bill to protect the President of the United States he would move that the ocean mail line bill be made the unfinished business.

Frye referred to the fact that it had been claimed that the clause in section 6 of the ship subsidy bill, which directs payment of the subsidy to be made to the vessel of the United States "duly registered by a citizen of the United States," would place under the provision of the bill the four ships that had been admitted to an American register. He therefore submitted an amendment, which was adopted, making the clause read: "Hereafter built and registered in the United States, or now duly registered."

Allison, Irving, as he said, "to get an interpretation of provisions that are a little blind to me," directed some questions to Frye. His desire, he said, was to ascertain whether proper safeguards had been provided to prevent the Government in the making of a large expenditure as it proposed. The questions asked by the Iowa Senator were largely technical, relating to the classification of ships, the number of vessels to be benefited by the act, the amount of money paid in the aggregate, etc. The colloquy which ensued developed the fact that a coastwise vessel might register at any port which it touched and enter from that port, and that a vessel engaged in trade between the United States and the Philippines would receive the subsidy until the vessel had been broken up and the proceeds sent to the Philippine Archipelago. Afterward no vessel engaged in the Philippine trade would receive the subsidy.

Frye explained that the subsidy, being paid to the vessel, would be received by the owner of the vessel, and would be paid to ships without respect to their age, the worth of a vessel being dependent entirely upon its classification.

The conclusion of the colloquy and after reading a veto message from the President, the Senate, at 5:25 P. M., adjourned.
