MORE ROOMS FOR SCHOOLS

THREE BUILDINGS ON EAST SIDE TO BE ENLARGED.

Additions to Be Built at Woodlawn Sunnyside and Sellwood-Rooms Also to Be Rented.

Superintendent Rigler said yesterday that the Board of Education had decided to provide additional school facilities at three points on the East Side this year-Sellwood, Sunnyside and Woodlawn. At Woodlawn a new building will have to be erected, but the present structure will worked into the main structure, and new building will stand on the site of the present one. Nowhere in the die-trict is the need of additional rooms more pressing than at Woodlawn, and this is fully understood by the Board of Educa-

At Sunnyside a six-room addition will be built on the west side of the present atructure, where there is ample ground for the purpose. The rooms of the school are overcrowded, and two outside once are rented to provide for the overflow.

Four rooms will be built at Sellwood.

The present building contains four rooms. These will be used, so that an eight-room structure will be provided for that part of the district this year. The old build-ing will be moved to one side of the school block and rebuilt, so as to conform to the new structure.
While recognizing the pressure on the Clinton Kelly, Brooklyn and Stephens schoolhouses, the Board of Education will be unable to provide additional rooms at any of these structures for this year, but any of these structures for this year, but will meet the pressure by renting outside rooms. The money appropriated at the last school meeting will all be used at Sellwood, Sunnyside and Woodlawn, and hence it will be at least a year before steps can be taken toward the provision of permanent facilities for the Stephens and Brooklyn districts.

Superintendent Rigier says that the Portional district is keeping un closer with Portland district is keeping up closer with the increase of school population than Se-attle and many other cities of the size and importance of Portland. He says that for temporary provisions portable rooms are better than the rented ones, for the reason that they can be placed close to the build-ing which they relieve, but they cannot be regarded as permanent structures.

SERVICES FOR PORTLAND MUTES To Be Held in the Grand-Avenue United Presbyterian Church.

Dr. J. H. Gibson, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, on Wasco street and Presbyterian Church, on Wasco street and Grand avenue, is arranging a regular Sunday service for the mutes of Portland. He has been led to do this from the fact that no provision of the sort has ever been made in the city, and there are between 40 and 50 mutes in Portland who are anxious for this service. Mrs. Gibson, wife of Dr. Gibson, is thoroughly familiar with the sign language of the mutes, and can interpret a sermon or address as rapidly as it may be delivered.

The first scryice will be held next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. There will be no particular difference between it and that which is held every Sunday, except that which is held every Sunday, except that the service and sermon will be inthat the service and service will be seated in the study, out of sight of the congregation, so that the translation of the sermon can take place without interference.

Dr. Gibson is very much interested, and hopes that every mute in this city will make it convenient to be present. He has talked with some of the prominent ones, and they expressed themselves as pleased that they are to be remembered. At the close of the services next Sunday, if it be found that these people are pleased, the programme will be continued. The church may be reached from the Irvington cars at Grand avenue and Multnomah street, and by the Woodlawn car at Union avenue and Wasco street. The church is within one block of either of these two

BOYS HAVE FIGHTS.

Regular Pugilistic Encounter Takes Place on Old Duniway Dock.

Boys attending the public schools on the from the Central and North Central buildlngs, seem to have organized for the purpose of conducting prizefights. Tuesday evening, after school hours, the vacant dryhouse building in the block formerly used by the Duniway Lumber Company, between East Water and East First gtreets, on East Pine street, was the scene of a fistic encounter between two boys, said to be pupils in the Central

The old dryhouse is 200 feet long and about 25 feet wide. In here a ring was formed in the midst of a large number of boys of various ages. The two boys who fought were large, and probably between 16 and 17 years of age. The spectators are very reticent over the affair. A police-man notified the boys that they would not be allowed to fight in the dryhouse

A little chap living on a scow said the boys had decided that they would do their fighting somewhere else, where they would not be interferred with by the police. Where the place was, he did not know, as that was to be kept quiet. He said further he heard that a fight was to nutted off somewhere on the East Side yesterday. Perhaps the principals of the two schools mentioned can find out by ry whether or not pugilistic encounters have become common among pupils in secluded places. Perhaps, also, the parents are interested.

Herr Most's Appeal.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The appellate division of the Supreme Court has just heard arguments in the appeal taken by Johann Most, who was convicted in the Court of Special Sessions for publishing in Der Freiheit, on September 7, 1991, under the caption "Murder vs. Murder," an article which it was contended had a tendency to irritate the public mind. Counsel for Most contended that under section eight of the state constitution, 'every citizen may freely speak, write or publish his sentiments on all subjects, and that the intention of the framers of the constitution was to prevent any censorship of the press." Counsel also contended that the article published was not libelous, and that it did not tend to commit a breach of the peace, and that it did not come within the inhibition of any express statute.

A representative of the District Attor-ney's office contended that under the penal code Most had published an arti-cle which had disturbed the public peace and outraged public decency. The Justices reserved decision.

Judge Charles Long Is III. DETROIT, March 20.—Judge Charles Long, of the State Supreme Court, is very ill at the residence of his son-inlaw, John M. Barton, 247 Lincoln avenue. During the administration of President Cleveland, Judge Long became noted throughout the country by reason of his fight for the restitution of his pension. Judge Lochren, then Commissioner of Pensions, ruled that a soldler who was able to earn his own living was not entitled to the full amount of pension allowed. Judge Long was then receiving a pension of $72 per month, and was also Judge of the Supreme Court. Under the sioner's ruling the pension was reduced to a very small amount. Judge Long took the matter into the courts, carrying it to the United States Su-preme Court. The result was that his pension was restored to its original amount. It was among the most celebrated pension cases ever tried.

They were standing there when I came to Portland." Fire Commissioner Filedner said he arrived here in 1858 and the build-ings were there then, so they must be 45 years old at least. They were originally a row of tiny cottages on the out-skirts of town, in the days when Second candidate of the Milwaukee lodge team, street was a back street, and was the Governor LaFollette who was escorted into the crowded hall amid cheers. These rites were followed by music from the band and a quartet and addresses. The spectacle at the Collseum did not come to an end until far into the night.

> The fact that a donkey engine and steel cable had been placed on the sidewalk near the corner to tear down the buildings might have had something to do with attracting and holding the crowd, which was a large one all day long. While steam was being raised on the engine and the cable was being threaded through the corner building, employes of telephone and electric light companies were busy, swarming up poles and over the buildings, cutting and detaching wires, and their doings kept the crowd interested. At last all was ready, and the contractor waved his baton and told the crowd to fall back out of darger, and out of reach of dangling wires which might be "nlive." body got out of the way of the wires and of the way of passing cars, and the engineer bauled taut on the cable, making the old shack quiver. The spectators waited for the final crash.

A pair of sparrows which were con structing a next in the roof of the old building were alarmed, and the old cock sparrow jumped up on the top of the "fire wall" and shouted, "Suffering earth-quakes, what are you doing?" Then his wife came up, with a straw in her bill, and yelled, "For heving's sake, Dick, wot hever is the matter?" Then the engineer turned on the steam and there was a r-r-r-i-p-p-ping noise and a sound of breaking timbers. The frightened birds struck out for North Portland, and all the spectators drew a long breath and held it. The internal arrangements of the building gave way for a while and then the engine stalled and had to be braced and fastened. The crowd hustled to get a good view of two men sawing a scantling for braces and watched while they were being adjusted, and then fell back to await further developments. Meantime a street-car had been blocked by the crowd and the conductor alighted to see the building pulled down. His motorman had become tired of waiting for the bell and at the first opportunity had started to move up the street. When the conductor awakened to his duty he looked for his car and saw it away up by the Postoffice, and the sprinting he did in overtaking it would have been creditable to a professional.

After a time the engine took another pull at the ruins and hauled some sec-tions of it out on the sidewalk and then a long time was spent in getting the cable attached in a new place. The buildings did not tumble down like card houses, by any means, and there were long pauses in operations, during which the spectators listened to the roar of escaping steam with one ear and the ravings of a pain-cure faker with the other, and in the pauses discussed the "Rapid method of tearing down build-ings," suggested a new addition to the crowd, along in the afternoon.

"I fall to see it." was the reply. "They have been all day tearing down two lit-tle shacks, and all the lumber is so inextricably woven together that it will take two engines to pull a shark start. take two engines to pull a single stick out."

"I think," remarked a third, "that half a dozen good men with axes and sledges would have had the whole row down by this time." These are incidental occurrences which relieved the monotony of things. The most easterly building in the row was occupied by a restaurant, and the proprietor was in no hurry to close down a
