City Districted for '05 Fair
Subscriptions.

CAMPAIGN IS TO BE RENEWED

Many Persons and Corporations
Heretofore Overlooked Will Be Waited Upon—Goal Is $500,000.

A meeting of the advisory committee, the subcommittee on ways and means and the canvassing committee of the Lewis and Clark Fair was held at the Chamber of Commerce headquarters last evening. District committees were appointed to complete the amount of capital stock to $500,000. Leo Friede, president, and all those who attended expressed themselves as encouraged with the outlook, and enthusiastic for the great Exposition. It was the general sense of the meeting that some of Portland's wealthiest capitalists—men who own large tracts of land in and about the city—have not subscribed as freely as they might to the capital stock, and it was suggested that several of them be waited upon again. As soon as the $500,000 capital stock is raised, a location will be selected, and active preparations begun for the construction of buildings.

The first committee appointed to solicit funds were, owing to their imperfect classification, unable to make a thorough canvass of the city, which has now been divided into districts, each of which is placed in the hands of a competent committee. It is the intention of these committees to make a canvass of the business, hotel and manufacturing establishments within their jurisdiction, and it is highly probable that a house-to-house canvass will be made later on.

The divisions and the chairman of the division committees, as announced last evening, are as follows:

No. 1—All territory on the West Side and north of Glisan street, Samuel Connell.

No. 2—Glisan street to Burnside (containing west on Washington street), and from the river to the city limits on the west, E. W. Rowe.

No. 3—Burnside to Washington street, and from the river to Third street, J. M. Long.

No. 4—Triangular portion of the city, bounded by Third, Burnside and Washington streets, E. W. Rowe.

No. 5—Washington to Taylor street, and the river to Third street, C. E. Rumelin and Julius L. Meier.

No. 6—Washington to Taylor street, and Third to Tenth, General O. O. Summers and Sol Blumauer.

No. 7—Washington to Taylor street, and from Tenth street to the city limits on the west, E. H. Kilham.

No. 8—From Second avenue, south, including all territory within the city limits, H. Terwilliger.

No. 9—The Elkhart Ward (all of the East Side south of Hawthorne avenue), D. M. Lonsburg.

No. 10—All of the East Side between Hawthorne avenue and Sullivan's Gulch, J. M. Long.

No. 11—All of the East Side between Sullivan's Gulch and Russell street, G. W. Hite.

No. 12—All of the East Side north of Russell street, Dr. L. M. Davis.

A number of special committees were appointed, to be held in certain districts, in this manner: Leo Friede and H. C. Broeden were appointed as a committee on special corporations; and W. L. Boise, chairman of a committee on land and property owners. John D. Baker was appointed chairman of a committee to solicit funds from butchers, fish dealers, etc. The committee will begin active work next Monday, and will not stop until the necessary $500,000 is realized. The various chairmen are confident of success, and they will no doubt raise the amounts which the merit of the project justifies.

Before the meeting adjourned last evening, Chairman Friede called for expressions from representatives of various fraternal orders. T. B. McDewitt, Dan J. Moore, Judge George J. Cameron and Sol Blumauer spoke on the subject, each of them promising to bring the matter of subscription up before the various lodges to which they belong. Everything looks favorable for the success of the great 1905 fair, and if the districts of Portland to which they should have been waited on next week, all apprehensions—if there are any—of the promoters will be dispelled.

SHE'S A GREAT ACTRESS

Rose Coghlan Justifies Her Reputation at the Marquam.

When a woman, assisted by a man and a play, can cause an audience to hold its breath for the best part of two long acts, no one can deny that she is a great actress. Incidentally, the man and the play come in for much the same kind of recognition, but that Emmett C. King and "Forget Me Not" shared in a large measure the honors which fell to Rose Coghlan at the Marquam last night, it has been a long time since Miss Coghlan has visited Portland, such a long time, in fact, that a good many playgoers seem to have forgotten what an artist she is, for the house was as poor as the attraction was good. Those who were there, however, soon realized that they were fortunate. Such an actress in such a play has not been seen in Portland, with the possible exception of Mrs. Lemoine, in "The First Duchess of Marlborough," for many a long day. Time has not abated a whit of Miss Coghlan's wonderful power and self-command, and while it has added to her figure it has also added to the quality of her elocution, and her naturally fine voice has never been so pleasing.

"Forget Me Not" is a play in which opportunity has been given in such large measure to two characters that little of it is left to any of the others. It is the story of a crafty, wicked and supremely gifted adventuress, Stephanie de Moberwart, who tries to attain a position long denied her by the use of knowledge that her son's marriage to an English girl is illegal without the consent of one or the other of her parents. With this secret as her weapon, she forces her way into the home of the girl's sister, and is on the eve of going forth into society as a member of the family, when an English Baronet, Sir Horace Welby, who happens to combine an affection for the sister with a knowledge of the past of her tormentor, meets her, and after a succession of very pretty contests of wit, finally defeats her purpose, playing as his last card an assassin who has been seeking the lady that he might destroy her for so long that he is very much in earnest about it.

From the time of her entrance, Miss Coghlan commands attention. She is equally good in the air of lofty superiority she assumes with the girl, and the thoughtless attitude she takes when she faces Welby. The fortunes of war shift and vary for two acts and a half, the advantage being generally with Stephanie, and the game of that lady is always played for all it is worth by Miss Coghlan until the end, when Welby strikes his last crushing blow. Then, all her arrogance, all her determination, leaving her, she becomes as pitiful as a figure of pleading misery as is possible to imagine. Numerous curtain calls attested to the appreciation of the audience, but they spoke feebly compared to the rapt attention which it gave whenever she was on the stage.

Emmett C. King, as Sir Horace Welby, ably assisted Miss Coghlan, and her strongest scenes would have been sadly incomplete without such support. Mr. King is an actor of fine presence and good voice, and what is more than either, abundant intelligence and perception. Neil McEwen made a pretty and pleasing Alice, and the other members of the company were all that was necessary. The costumes of the women are brilliant in the extreme.

This afternoon, "Lady Barter" and "Between Matinee and Night," and tonight, "Forget Me Not" again.

MATINEES TODAY.

NEW SITE FOR CARSHOPS

PORTLAND CITY & OREGON LEASES FIVE-ACRE TRACT.

Property at Foot of East Market Will Be Used as Terminus of Electric System.

Mrs. Rosa Wallace, wife of A. R. Wallace, 31 East Eleventh street, has leased her acreage property at the foot of East Market street to Morris & Whitehead, for the Portland City & Oregon Railroad Company. The deal was completed Thursday. While the terms and conditions of the lease are not fully known, it is said on good authority that it is for 30 years. Mrs. Wallace, who was in San Francisco, arrived home last week, so that the deal might be completed. The family occupying the old dwelling built by James B.

With a seating capacity for 40 people. The programme consisted of athletic games, basketball and indoor baseball were the prominent features, and the exercises closed with a basket social. The sum of $16.25 was netted from the sale of baskets.

Within a month's time this organization has achieved a high degree of success, and it now has a membership of 27. A modern gymnasium has been obtained, and the boys spend Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings in practice. Tuesday evenings and Saturday afternoons were recently voted to the women. The society's colors are white and green.

MYSTERY CLEARED UP.

George Cross, Who Suddenly Disappeared Last Summer, Is in Alaska.

It has been ascertained that George Cross, the absconding secretary of the defunct ore factory, is in Alaska. Instead of being carried off to sea, or having been drowned, as was conjectured at the time of his disappearance last summer, he left for Alaska, deserting his young wife and two children. His disappearance was recently voted to the women. The society's colors are white and green.

Late last evening Mr. Means received the following reply from Senator Mitchell:

"Washington, March 21.—Referring to your telegram just received, it is utterly impossible, at this time, as the river and harbor bill has not yet reached the Senate, to determine what disposition will be made, either of any provision in the bill, or of any amendment I may offer. I have strong hope, at least, of being able to retain included in the fourth bill, I shall insist strenuously on increase, but if I can do no better will compromise on the amounts in the House bill. But results cannot be forecasted until the bill comes up for consideration in the Senate committee. The House bill carries about $100,000,000. The only danger would arise from the fact that the Senate committee might fear the aggregate too much and insist on a horizontal cut in the whole bill. Still, I have no serious apprehension of this being done, and everything in my power to do will be done to prevent it, and to get the very best results."

EDUCATION OF THE NEGRO

Booker T. Washington Discusses the Future of His Race.

New York Times, March 16.

The auditorium and stage at the Berkeley Lyceum, on West Forty-fourth street, were crowded yesterday when Booker T. Washington, the negro educator of Tuskegee, Ala., delivered a lecture on "The Education of the Negro."

Mr. Washington opened his address with a recital of his personal boyhood experiences resulting in his acquiring an education at the Hampton Institute, in Virginia, and his assignment to the black belt of Alabama, where he had formerly been educated. He told how he began operations by cleaning out an old henhouse at Tuskegee, and of the surprise of the colored people there when he suggested the doing of such work by daylight. This remark caused hearty laughter.

With becoming modesty Mr. Washington explained how from the little school started in a building that had formerly been utilized for the production of eggs and poultry had risen the great educational establishment of which he is the official head.

"At Tuskegee," he said, "we have 1200 students and a population on the grounds of 1400. We had 56 buildings and 230 acres of land, with 10,000, 80 instructors, who teach students from 38 different states, and from Porto Rico. The demand for educational instruction is so great that we have to turn away annually from 500 to 600 applicants for admission."

Mr. Washington next dwelt on the evolution of the negro of the wilds of Africa to the civilized citizens of the United States, and added: "The negro did not come here by way of the slave ship. He came here by a very emphatic invitation. The white people became inhabitants of this continent under protest of its people in 1492."

A speaker declared that the improvement of the colored race could be brought about by education, and that the white race should appreciate the rare opportunity to lift the negro up. The black man had the opportunity to grow in thought and in intelligence. This would come because there were no wealthy people in the world who gave so much to lift the burdens of others as Americans. What had to be feared was the cultivation of a spirit of extravagance and indulgence in inordinate luxury.

Agriculture was the proper field of the negro. He is seen at his best in the agricultural districts of the South, and when educated he will prefer to live on the farms in the South to locating in the big cities and live by his wits.

In the year 1870, said Mr. Washington, 20 negroes, or Africans, were brought into America as slaves. At the present time there are within the bounds of the United States proper, according to the latest census figures, more than 3,000,000 persons of African descent. In other words we have a colored population nearly equal to the entire population of Mexico, and equal to the entire population of Switzerland, Greece, Honduras, Nicaragua, Cuba, Uruguay, Santo Domingo, Paraguay and Costa Rica. If we add to the original native negro population the 3,000,000 colored people in Porto Rico, the Hawaiian Islands and the Philippines, we have a grand total of 15,000,000 of dark people under the jurisdiction of the United States.

"There are no reliable indications of decay," I repeat, then, that our immediate problem is with the race in the United States, a people that, whether in slavery or freedom, have proved their ability to look the white man in the face, to live by his side, to grow strong in numbers, and to get something from the white man at nearly every point of contact that has made them better fit for American citizenship. So, notwithstanding the injustice and the many disadvantages of slavery, and notwithstanding what has taken place since the days of slavery, it is proper for us to recognize the fact that, whether viewed from a material, intellectual, moral or religious point of view, there cannot be found in the civilized or uncivilized world an equal number of persons of African descent who are the equals of those inhabiting this country.

"In Virginia the blacks own one-twenty-sixth of the entire state. In Georgia they are paying taxes on property assessed at $15,000,000, and have learned from the whites to conceal its true value. Out of 1,400,000 heads of families, 264,000 own their own homes or farms, where 40 years ago they did not own themselves. While there were no colored churches a few years ago, there are churches and church organizations everywhere. These are the results of education, which raises the standard of morality and religion."

After furnishing many instances of the thrift and industry of the colored race, Mr. Washington said:

"The colored race wants to be judged by its numbers in the schools and avenues of

ON THE WAY TO AND SCENES AT THUNDER MOUNTAIN

Great Idaho Mining Camp Which Rivals the Famous Cripple Creek.

CASWELL BROTHERS WASHINGTON OUT GOLD.

THUNDER MOUNTAIN, Idaho, March 15.—A great army of gold hunters is now headed toward Thunder Mountain, since it has been proven conclusively that the district is one of the richest in minerals ever discovered in the United States. Thunder Mountain appears to be the center of a great mineral belt which extends for 50 miles in every direction. The ore is similar to that found at Cripple Creek, and the new camp rivals that famous district in the photograph herewith reproduced. The men who are washing out gold are at work on the Caswell claim, on Thunder Mountain proper. The Caswell brothers discovered Thunder Mountain and their first find has paid them well. The claim under mention is now owned by Colonel Dewey, who paid $100,000 for it. Colonel Dewey had a bond on the property which would not have expired until 1903, but he was so pleased with the property, after a little development work, that he took the bond up at once. In the eight days previous to turning the property over to Colonel Dewey, Caswell brothers panned out rock and washed out $15,000. They took the rock from the mountain side to be seen in the accompanying illustration. They found that the snow was melting, so as to have a good flow of water. Since Colonel Dewey has taken the Caswell claim he has blocked out $10,000,000 worth of ore, which goes $7 to $8000 per ton. Elk Creek Summit, which appears in the accompanying illustration, is on the road from Florence to Thunder Mountain. It is the highest ridge on that route, and is covered with snow most of the year.

written by her brother Charles, and "Between Matinee and Night," a sketch from her own pen. Miss Coghlan wears some fascinating gowns in both these plays, and both are highly enjoyable.

John D. Baker was appointed chairman of a committee to solicit funds from butchers, fish dealers, etc. The committee will begin active work next Monday, and will not stop until the necessary $500,000 is realized. The various chairmen are confident of success, and they will no doubt raise the amounts which the merit of the project justifies.

Before the meeting adjourned last evening, Chairman Friede called for expressions from representatives of various fraternal orders. T. B. McDewitt, Dan J. Moore, Judge George J. COMING ATTRACTIONS.

Fine Vaudeville Bill.

Besides the sensational cycle which which will be the top-line attraction at the Baker next week, beginning Sunday afternoon, there will be Carter and Thornhill, the well-known Dutch comedians; Clara O'More, the singing girl; Lynne and Kennedy, dancing nabobs; the wonderful Duffy children, William Walton, the yarn-spinner; O'Brien, Jennings and O'Brien in a vaudeville sketch, Frank W. Bacon and company in a new sketch, and a number of other features. The bill will without doubt be the strongest that has yet been given at the theater.

"The White Slave" at Cordray's.

"The White Slave" at Cordray's next week is a sensational production which has few equals on the road, and which has been crowding houses all over the Coast.

Blanche Walsh in "Janice Meredith."

Every one in this city interested in current literature will undoubtedly be pleased to learn that Blanche Walsh's great scenic production of "Janice Meredith," a most fascinating play, founded on Paul Leicester Ford's romantic Revolutionary novel of the same title, will be presented at the Marquam Grand next Saturday afternoon and evening. This book is the most faithful and graphic description of thrilling events, that has ever been published. It carries not only an accurate historical interest, but a most charming love story as well. The play is described by metropolitan critics as the best dramatic version of a popular novel ever staged in this country, and the character of Janice is said to be one in which Miss Walsh's dramatic talents shine to a superlative degree. On Thursday and Friday evenings Miss Walsh's play of the emotions, "La Madeline," will be given.

"Way Down East."

"Way Down East" the play that has prompted unstinted and enthusiastic praise from clergy, school teachers, women, and in fact people in every walk of life, including thousands who are seldom seen in the theater, is to be presented at the Marquam shortly. The scene of action is a New England farm, the play being from the pen of Little Blair Parker, dramatized by Joseph R. Grismer, and the entire production under the direction of William A. Brady. The piece is made up of a series of happenings, designed to portray the simplicity, comedy and tragedy of a community, the purity and sweetness of which might run uninterrupted forever but for the casting across of the shadows of the wicked.

NO PROMISE CAN BE MADE

SENATOR MITCHELL ON THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Hopes to Insert Amendments in Senate, but Cannot Be Sure They Will Be Accepted.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce are deeply interested in the river and harbor bill now pending before Congress, and yesterday President S. M. Means sent the following telegram to Senator Mitchell:

"Portland, March 21.—Please inform me what the prospects are for the adoption of amendments of February 17, which you propose to offer to the river and harbor bill in the Senate. Our people expect that our appropriations shall be no less than amounts named in House bill. Appropriations for lower river and Columbia bar should not be decreased under any circumstances."

Late last evening Mr. Means received the following reply from Senator Mitchell:

"Washington, March 21.—Referring to your telegram just received, it is utterly impossible, at this time, as the river and harbor bill has not yet reached the Senate, to determine what disposition will be made, either of any provision in the bill, or of any amendment I may offer. I have strong hope, at least, of being able to retain included in the fourth bill, I shall insist strenuously on increase, but if I can do no better will compromise on the amounts in the House bill. INDIAN WAR VETERANS' GRAVES.

Camp McMillen Has Taken Steps to Have Them All Properly Marked.

At a well-attended meeting of the members of Camp McMillen, No. 1, Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, held at the home of Captain J. H. McMillen, on Crosby street, Thursday night, steps were taken toward ascertaining the location of graves of all Indian war veterans in Lane and other cemeteries of the state, for the ultimate purpose of having every grave designated by a proper monument of some sort.

It is estimated that between 40 and 50 graves of Indian war veterans are scattered through Lone Fir cemetery. A committee will make an effort to find these. At the Oregon City cemetery, where a number of graves are buried, Joseph S. Sorenson, the aged sexton, will be asked to assist in the same work. At Ashland a woman living there has undertaken to locate the graves.

Information as to graves in other cemeteries outside of Portland will be sought through correspondence. McMillen Camp hopes to secure the co-operation of friends, and all information concerning location of graves of Indian war veterans may be sent to Mrs. Laura Mutch, president, or Secretary Minnie McGregor.

Plans for decorating the graves were generally discussed, and nothing was settled on. It was decided to ask for suggestions from the public as to the best sort of marker to use. The G. A. R. graves are marked with an iron marker, which answers the purpose admirably, and it is considered probable that a similar one will be used on the graves of Indian war veterans. It is desired to get the graves marked by May 1.

An interesting letter was read from Captain H. A. Hogue, dated at Winthrop, Mass., commending the effort. Another meeting will be held at the same place the third Thursday in April.

FAIRVIEW ATHLETIC CLUB.

Entertained Friends in Its Quarters With Good Programme.

The Fairview Athletic Club, recently organized, was greeted with a large attendance Tuesday evening on the occasion of an exhibition given in the old schoolhouse. The walls had been decorated with cedar and fir and daffodils, and the room presented an attractive appearance. A gallery was erected for the occasion by the boys of the club and their friends,

Parents and Teachers.

A successful mothers' meeting was held in the North Central School Thursday afternoon. There was a large attendance, over 100 mothers being present. Superintendent Rigler made a plain, practical talk on the relations between the parents and teachers, and strongly urged that there should be more co-operation. He said that much of the friction that sometimes cropped out between parent and teacher was caused by lack of proper understanding. This cordial co-operation and understanding, he said, could be arrived at by the parents visiting the schools and getting acquainted with the teachers.

The superintendent commended the mothers' meetings, and said that their object was to be mutually helpful, and incidentally aid in correcting existing evils. He said that a cigar-smoking mother, who talks were made. Several musical selections were rendered. Principal Hoover said another meeting would be arranged for some time next month.

Mentioned for Local Office.

The name of J. S. Foss is mentioned as a possible Republican candidate for Councilman from the Ninth Ward. Mr. Foss is a well-known business man. In the Eighth Ward, E. White, president of the Brooklyn Board of Trade, is being mentioned for Councilman. He is a large property-owner, and is favorable to public improvements. The name of J. H. Eastman has been mentioned for Justice of the Peace and Constable, but Mr. Eastman has never had any thought of being a candidate for Constable, but is after the former office.

East Harrison Street.

A petition is being circulated for the improvement of East Harrison street, between East Twelfth and East Third streets, with gravel. A considerable number of property-owners have signed the petition, and it is thought that the improvements will be made. As it is proposed to improve East Harrison from East Third, it is the most important improvement project for Stephens' Addition for a long time.

East Side Notes.

G. M. Hyland has consented to speak this evening on "Civic Improvements" before the Progressive Commercial Club of St. John.

Rev. Robert McLean will lecture this evening on "South America," in the Burkhardt, for the benefit of the soldiers' monument fund.

Industry, not by the number of negroes in the penal institutions; it wants to be judged by the numbers owning their homes, rather than by those living in the gutters. You judge the English by Gladstone, the French by Loubet, and the Germans by Bismarck. Those are the highest types, and those are the standards by which the negro wants to be judged. "The negro is capable of the highest citizenship, and the fact cannot be disregarded, but at the same time, his future is largely in his own hands. He should be used as a means of elevation, not for one of degradation. But the negro must have the elements of progress and civilization, which can only be acquired by education. That education is being furnished and appreciated is evidenced by the fact that, while there were no colored schools in the South 50 years ago, every county has them now."

Fined for Selling "Hop Tea." JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 21.—In the Federal Court heretofore Judge Phillips sentenced Thomas A. Brady, a wealthy merchant, to 30 days in jail and fined him $100 for selling "hop tea" at his store, which is also the postoffice, at Payson, Camden County. Brady fought the case hard on the ground that he sold the bitters for medicinal purposes, but the jury convicted him.
