AMUSEMENTS TONIGHT.

MARQUAM GRAND THEATRE—Matinee at 2:15 o'clock. Mr. N. C. Goodwin and Maxine Elliott in "When We Were Twenty-One." Evening at 8:15 o'clock. Maxine Elliott in "When We Were Twenty-One."

THE BAKER THEATRE (corner Third and Yamhill streets)—"The Count of Monte Cristo." Matinee at 2:15, evening at 8:15.

Mr. Wilcox's Contribution—On last Thursday a telegram from the New York World, soliciting contributions of codfish, flour and other necessities for the relief of the sufferers by the Martinique earthquake was received by T. H. Wilcox. Supposing that citizens generally had been requested to contribute, Mr. Wilcox at once telegraphed the World that he was shy on codfish this year, as the crop in this section had been light, but he would send a carload of flour if there was time, and if not he would wire $500. The reply was that the case was urgent and the $500 was wired at once, and soon after a dispatch was received stating that the money had been forwarded by the steamer Dixie that evening. So far as can be learned, no one else in the city was called on for a contribution, and Mr. Wilcox has concluded that it is due solely to the world-wide fame of Portland Flouring Mills flour that he was honored with an invitation to contribute.

JUNE FLOOD ARRIVES—At the head of the roadways leading to the lower dock of the O. R. & N. Co. at Ash street, signs were placed yesterday on which was inscribed: "Freight received only on the upper dock." The water has risen quite rapidly for the past two days, and is now within less than two feet of covering the lower dock, and a small boat is being used to keep the floor from floating and with the aid of jackscrews placing timber posts under the beams of the upper dock, which is being supported, because they are intended to hold up the lower floor, instead of holding up the upper one. Captains of the company's boats coming in reported a swift current down the Columbia, and one up the Willamette, so the June flood is fairly on.

STREETS WIDE ENOUGH—Complaint is often made that the streets of Portland are not wide enough, and would like for every street to be a boulevard. The man who has long been engaged in building and improving streets said yesterday that in the residence part of the city it would be better to have streets one or two feet in width between curbs, and to have them well improved than to have them 36 feet between curbs and not improved. He also favored a sidewalk, with a wide strip of turf for trees, so that they need not destroy the curbs or sidewalks. He said that a well-improved street 30 feet in width gave all the room necessary for teams, cars, and there was no use in having it wider, except to increase the cost of improving them. He did not approve of trees on the streets, as there is no more sunshine here than in needed; but if the sidewalk were wider those who wanted trees could have them.

TO MAKE PLANS FOR THE FOURTH—A number of patriotic citizens have already under consideration the details of a program for the celebration of the glorious Fourth of July, which it is intended to celebrate on the coming anniversary with greater magnificence than ever before here. Mayor Rowe will call a public meeting of citizens some time next week to appoint the necessary committees and transact such other preparatory business as may be required to give the celebration scheme a good start. All Portland's country cousins will wish to spend the National holiday in the city, and it is due to them that they shall have something provided which will be worth coming to see.

WORKED IN THE SHOWERS—Yesterday was not a very pleasant day for working outside, but there were men at work on most of the buildings around town, paying no attention to the occasional gentle showers. In one place up town as late as 2 P. M. half a dozen bricklayers were working on a foundation wall in their shirt sleeves, and one without a hat, but they were all old Oregonians. Half an hour later a shower that was no sprinkle drove them to shelter in a hurry, and then as the weather cleared and the sun shone out brightly, toward evening the air grew quite chilly, and an overcoat was not uncomfortable.

SUPPORT ALASKA PROJECT—Alexander Kuntz, who is the moving spirit in the Alaska steamship line project, reports that the enterprise is making good progress. He has secured no active soliciting, but has secured pledges for $200 worth of capital stock among persons whom he happened to meet. He has no doubt that the $25,000 required will be raised. The 30 companies named to solicit subscriptions to stock will begin work bright and early Monday morning.

THIS IS BABY HOME DAY—The managers of the Baby Home, in expectation of a large attendance at the annual tea of the institution from 5 o'clock this afternoon, have made arrangements to entertain all visitors, and have also provided for special cars to run out to the home every 20 minutes. All friends of the little ones should attend.

WORK ON ROAD RESUMED—Messrs. Smyth & Howard, who have the contract for widening the White House road, were enabled to resume work on the job yesterday with a small force of men. The machinery was set at work clearing timber off the right of way south of the cemetery. They will have a full force employed on the work next week.

JOHN G. WOOLLEY and the Menzies at White Temple Wednesday, eve. May 21.

WAITING FOR ROSES TO BLOOM—Every one who has a garden is waiting anxiously for the roses to bloom, and he is a proud man who has the first fine roses. Those who cannot afford to indulge in all sorts of fancy rose bushes need not feel that they are behind the times, as in a tiny plot in front of a little cottage up town was seen yesterday a "tree" of the common wild rose, which was covered with blooms, which, while not so large or so brilliant as some of the roses, on which so much care and cultivation are expended, was exceedingly beautiful and ornamental. The delicate color of the petals of the wild rose is surpassed in beauty by but few of the cultivated ones, and as for blooming early and blooming late, the wild rose is ahead of them all. No one need be without roses in this favored land.

BICYCLES SHOULD HAVE LAMPS—A member of the legal profession who narrowly escaped being run down by a bicyclist last night and perhaps killed or maimed, wishes to register a complaint in regard to the common habit of bicyclists of dispensing with lights on their bicycles. He says he not only does the city ordinances require lamps on bicycles ridden at night, but an act of the Legislature passed February 25, 1901, wisely and properly provides that in all parts of the state bicycles used at night must be provided with a light plainly distinguishable and anyone violating this law may be arrested and fined before a Justice of the Peace. The fine for violating this law is not less than $5 or three days' imprisonment, or both.

CHINESE "DORE" SWEET—After the commodities of a Chinese saloon on Second street near Oak had been removed from the building by officers under a default judgment order yesterday afternoon, United States customs inspectors seized a keg of what appeared to be syrup and opium and a small drug bottle containing about seven gallons of the liquid, and the owners alleged that they had been selling it over the bar as a drink. The inspectors were in doubt as to whether the opium contained in the keg could be reduced to a form fit for smoking purposes as well as it could be drunk in a liquid, and sent the contents to the United States Appraiser for examination. A report was made by the examiners in a few days.

MEAT PRICES STILL FIRM—Shift prices for meats show no symptoms of letting up. The only kinds that are perceptibly weaker are mutton and lamb. Receipts of sheep are getting easier. The Spring season has been very backward this year, especially for lambs. Most of the Portland supplies of sheep are drawn from the Willamette Valley, and there is an unusually large number of sheep this Spring. Beef comes mostly from Southern Oregon and the extreme eastern part of the state. A few days ago the market was firm, but the price of pork consumed here. The hogs are very fine animals, grain-fed and equal to the best that the Eastern States produce.

TO LAUNDRY NEW DREDGE—The 20-inch dredge, being built by the city, is pretty nearly ready to receive her boilers and machinery. Ways for launching her are being built, and she will probably be floated in a few days and will be supposed, be taken to the Willamette River. Works to have her boilers put in. The old city dredge Portland, which has been undergoing an overhauling at the O. R. & N. boatyard, was got out yesterday, and is lying off the old Weider's mill site. She was thoroughly caulked while on the ways, and is as tight as possible. The other repairs to her amount practically to rebuilding all the machinery in her.

NEW FAIR SUBSCRIPTIONS—The Bricklayers' International Union, No. 1, of Oregon, has subscribed to 10 shares of Lewis and Clark stock. Mr. Lewiston, business agent of the Carpenters' Union, says that the constitution of that body prevents it from subscribing as a body, but that the members will take stock individually. The union has 50 members. Fraternal orders have subscribed as follows: Martha Union, No. 8, Order of Washington, one share; Myrtle Chapter, No. 15, Order of Eastern Star, one share; Lincoln-Garfield Post, No. 3, G. A. R., one share.

BIDS FOR 2,000,000 FEET OF LUMBER—Bids were opened Thursday in the Government Quartermaster's office at Portland and Seattle for nearly 2,000,000 feet of lumber. The lumber is for shipment to Manila, and is to be delivered at the city where the contract is awarded by June 5. At Portland bids were made by the North Pacific Lumber Company and the Eastern Lumber Company for $9 per thousand feet. It has not been reported from Puget Sound what the bids were there.

THOUSANDS OF TROUT—The Oregon Fish and Game Association yesterday planted 10,000 Eastern brook trout in Panther Creek, five miles west of Carlton, Yamhill County. These fish were caught in the Columbia hatchery. Next Sunday representatives of the association will plant 10,000 of the same species in Ford and Lake Labish Creeks, near Salem, and during the following week will begin the work of planting trout in the other creeks of the association.

PROGRESS ON LAWRENCE BUILDING—The Lawrence Company's building, at First and Oak, which was the first of the large brick buildings started this Spring, still keeps ahead of the others. The masonry walls are up to the second story, and the beams or girders to support the second floor are rapidly being put in place. They are supported on iron pillars, and three rows of these are in position with the girders on.

THREE PORTLAND HEAVY-WEIGHTS—Portland boasts of a trio of heavyweights, the Morien brothers, who together weigh 600 pounds. Edward, the oldest of the three, has been about 40 summers. He weighs 230 pounds. His brothers, Jim and John, who are a few years younger, weigh 220 and 240 pounds respectively.

CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLEMENT—E. F. Morefield was arrested last night on a charge of embezzling $200 from George Woodworth. It is alleged that Morefield was employed as traveling salesman by the Chicago Portland Company, that the cash had been advanced to him, and that he converted it to his own use.

AMUSEMENTS.
Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott in "When We Were Twenty-One," at the Marquam.

Richard Carver, N. C. Goodwin, Sir Horace Plimley, Bart., comedy, called Wallace, Neil O'Brien, Colonel, Mrs. Graham, the soldier, man, R. Crawford, Terrence McGrath, the doctor, H. F. Tyler, Richard Terrence Miles Audine, the Imp, Fredrick Tiden, Kay, Glynn, known as the First, Mrs. Grant Gordon, Miss Florence Havreleigh, Mrs. Grant Gordon, Miss Gertrude Ingram, Mrs. Ericson, Miss Maxine Elliott.

Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott have not been in Portland for nearly two years, but the fact that it was necessary to order to get the people who wanted to see them play H. V. Esmond's "When We Were Twenty-One" at the Marquam Theater last night may be taken as an indication that they are still regarded as the best the stage has to offer just now. There may have been occasions when more people were packed into the theater than last night, but they have not been numerous. All the seats were taken long before the doors were opened, and when the feeble strains of the orchestra endeavored to penetrate the curtain, and it was only the ladies in the audience to take their seats, the house was full. What may be called crowded without any misuse of the term.

The people came to the theater expecting to see a good play, and they got it. "When We Were Twenty-One" would not be pleasing in the hands of an inferior company, but Mr. Goodwin does not carry that kind. As presented by himself, Miss Elliott and a number of men and women who know how to act, it is delightful, and the humor, the pathos and the sentiment that the author has so adroitly combined in its construction were harmoniously and beautifully brought out. Mr. Goodwin as Dick Carver, who has under his protection the wayward son of an old and dear friend, has much to do, and he does it in his best manner. Old friend, natural in every word and action, he makes of the character the noble, big-hearted, self-sacrificing man that Esmond imagined and sketched, but could not interpret. His scenes with the girl who is supposed to be in love with him. Her taunts and mischievous rilleries were exceedingly clever, and she made the act hers, even though participating in it with so distinguished an actor as Mr. Goodwin.

The support is all that it need be. Nell O'Brien, J. Crawford and H. F. Tyler make a fine trio of old friends and brother patrons of the Imp. Frederick Tiden is an interesting Imp, although he lacks the fire of his predecessor in the part. Florence Havreleigh is an imposing figure, and the rest of the long cast is up to the high standard required by the play. The staging is handsome in the extreme, and the lack of the brilliant third act of the former presentation is more than made up for by the heightened tone given the place by its absence. The setting of the Carver apartment is exceedingly clever, for the room looks as if it was really lived in, an effect not ordinarily attained by the stage manager. Miss Elliott wears some handsome clothes, as do the other women in the company, and altogether the production is one which would give pause to the pickers of minor faults. It will be repeated this afternoon, tonight "An American Citizen."

MATINEES TODAY.

Goodwin at the Marquam—"In Mizsoursa" at the Baker.

Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott will appear at the Marquam this afternoon in "When We Were Twenty-One," the great play which delighted the biggest house of the season last night.

At the Baker—"In Mizsoursa," which has been crowding the house all the week, will be the matinee attraction, and the last performance of this charming play of Augustus Thomas will be given this night. There has been a big advance sale for both performances, and there is no question that the two biggest houses of the week will see the play today.

Redfern Corsets
 Redfern, the greatest costumer the world ever produced, is responsible for the statement that "the corset is the foundation of good dress." Redfern models his own corsets. Dressmakers who know the Redfern corsets, recommend them. Redfern corsets fit with comfort and never lose their shape. Lessers of fashion wear Redfern corsets. In order to thoroughly introduce this high-grade corset, and by permission of the manufacturers, we have made a most extraordinary cut in prices. Note—The $3.00 corset, most extra to $2.50, and the $2.50 quality cut to $2.00, and the $2.00 cut to $1.50.

stronger company of players than Mr. C. S. Bailey will bring to the Marquam next Monday night, when the Fraxley organization begins a week's engagement at that house. Among those in the cast will be found Benjamin Howard, Harrison Reynolds, Ben Johnson, John Daily Murphy, H. S. Duffield, Herbert Ashton, Charles Fleming, Reginald Travels, A. D. McDonald, Blanche Douglas, Frank McAllister, Lillian, Braconcome, Lillian Douglas, and clever little Minnie Barrett, the Portland girl who has made such a hit this season. All of these people are well known to local theater goers, and their names alone insure a perfect rendition of the plays to be produced.

"Two Little Waifs" at Cordray's.
 "Two Little Waifs" will claim recognition from the patrons of Cordray's next week, beginning tomorrow night. The piece is said to be the pen of Lincoln J. Carter and is said to be one of the box office winners of the dramatic year. Stanley and Lolita Lamb, who will present the play, will essay the parts of the waifs. It is said they enact their parts with apparently as much knowledge of the requirements of the nature of the story hinges on the lives of two sisters bearing a striking resemblance, who, unknown to each other, are the temporary cause of many intricate misunderstandings. The dual role is taken by Miss Helen Carrall, and the constant and rapid changes from one character to the other are manipulated with such adroitness that the audience is not to detect two people not engaged in the work. The scenery, electrical effects and mechanical devices are said to surpass any production Mr. Carter has yet sent on the road.

"The Count of Monte Cristo."
 The final rehearsal for "The Count of Monte Cristo" was held at the Baker Theater yesterday afternoon, and the Stuart Company, who will present the play, are thoroughly up to it. The story is one of great dramatic strength, and as told by this excellent organization is said to arouse the greatest interest and expense has been put in making the production worthy, and as the play requires a great deal of scenery, this means that the staging of it will eclipse any play that has been put on by the company. "The Count of Monte Cristo" will run all the week, beginning Sunday afternoon.

"The Banker's Daughter."
 Monday the Stuart Company will begin rehearsing Bronson Howard's great play, "The Banker's Daughter," which will be given at the theater following "The Count of Monte Cristo." The costumes for the drama are unusually elaborate, and although they have been in preparation for more than two weeks, will not be ready until the day before the opening performance.

The Hit of Two Continents.
 Edwin Owens Towne has given many laughing creations to the public, but nothing so satisfactory as "Too Rich to Marry," which comes to Cordray's Theater soon. It was the hit of the season when presented at the Drury Lane Theater, London, and met with over-whelming success. The disturbance thus created when produced in New York City the press christened it "The Hit of Two Continents."

VOLCANIC ERUPTIONS.
 A strange man, with "Dreamy Eyes," a lively imagination, and a cool, contented came rapidly to this town and gave out the startling announcement that Mount Hood was smoking. His statement was generally discredited when it was found that Wright's music store, 240 Washington street, was selling "Dreamy Eyes" and hundreds of other late pieces for 10c, and were selling mandolins at 25c per cent discount. The disturbance thus created in the musical atmosphere has been generally attributed to a volcanic eruption. We are still smoking, but you must call soon.
