Official returns from seven counties and complete, but unofficial, reports from 19 others, together with incomplete figures from the other 16 counties of the state give Chamberlain's plurality over Furnish $41. It is not deemed probable that the returns yet to be received will greatly change these figures, though the plurality is so small compared with the total number of votes polled that it will require the official canvass to make the result absolutely certain. Among the surprises yesterday were Grant and Malheur counties, the former being ordinarily heavily Republican, but this time giving Furnish but a plurality, and the latter, ordinarily heavily Democratic, this time giving but a small Democratic plurality.

In the tables where figures appear in only one of the two columns for 1902 they represent pluralities.

EXPERT COUNSELS

Words of Advice From the Charleston Officials.

SMALL SITE; CLOSE IN

Talk About Buildings, Construction, Promotion of Exhibits, Publicity and Matters of Fair Administration.

(By a Staff Writer—Letter No. 4.)

One of the most intelligent men connected with the management of the Charleston fair is Mr. E. L. Tessler, the treasurer of the association and a member of its executive board, and I have had practically been abandoned by those who established exhibits in them early in the season.

Proceeding, Mr. Tessler said: "The nearer you can get your site to the center of town the better. If it could be got within walking distance it would be a great advantage, and I am convinced that if it were possible to walk to a fair it would increase the attendance at least 20 per cent. Time is also a great consideration, for people will ride on the cars for 15 minutes without impatience who will not do it if 30 minutes is required. There are those who will tell you that this is not so, that after people get on the cars it makes small difference whether the distance be small or great, but they are wrong, as I know from experience both here and in Europe. The evening attendance—and evening attendance is all profit—is greatly affected by distance. Make it possible for people to walk at least one way if you can manage it, and by all means make it a short and easy trip, with no annoyance from transfers or delays and no hazards which may make the hour of getting home uncertain.

"Put all your buildings where they can be taken in from one point of view. It

COUNTER BOYCOTT

By All Portland Sawmills, Planing Mills and Master Builders' Association.

Whereas, The Building Trades Council and Federated Trades Council of this city have declared the manufacturers of certain planing mills unfair by reason of the refusal of said planing mills to recognize the arbitrary demands of Local Union No. 66 of Amalgamated Woodworkers of America; and

Whereas, The said Federation of unions is thereby intending and attempting to boycott the manufacture of said planing mills so as to coerce them into compliance with said demands; and

Whereas, The said system of boycotting is contrary to law and calculated to do irreparable injury, loss and damage to the said planing mills, and also to the interests of every manufacturer of and dealer in building materials, and to contractors and other employers of labor in building lines and to the public at large; and

Whereas, The said Federation of unions is by means of the said boycott directly instrumental in working this injury, loss and damage upon every one engaged in the building operations of this city, and are meanwhile entirely irresponsible for damages so resulting; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the undersigned, manufacturers of and dealers in building materials, and contractors and employers engaged in building operations, do each declare against this said system of boycotting and demand that the same be at once removed; and be it further

Resolved, That, unless such boycott is removed and building operations permitted to go along without the constant menace of boycotts and threats from said Building Trades Council and Federated Trades Council, we will not furnish any materials in our respective lines to persons participating in or enforcing said boycott until the said federated unions entirely cease from boycotting the manufacturers of any mill or mills, and cease from boycotting contractors engaged in the building operations of this city.

TO FIGHT UNIONS

All Mills Unite to Resist Boycott.

CONTRACTORS ARE ALSO IN

"Call Off Boycott, or We'll Boycott You," They Say.

FRAME POINTED RESOLUTIONS

They Will Furnish No Materials to Any Persons Participating in Enforcement of "Unfair" Order.

The sawmills of Portland have united with the planing mills in fighting the unions; and the combination has besides the active support of the Master Builders' Association. It was yesterday decided to initiate a counter-boycott against the Building Trades Council and Federated Trades Council, unless the "unfair" ban is removed from the products of the planing mills. This means that the building contractors propose to supply material from the planing mills and run the risk of another strike by carpenters and affiliated unions; and that neither sawmills nor planing mills will sell to persons participating in or enforcing the boycott.

Union strength will be tested to its utmost in the present fight between the federated unions and the Master Builders' Association. The manufacturers and dealers in building materials and contractors and employers engaged in building operations have all united as one body, and declare they will fight the union issue to a bitter end. Union rule or union death is involved. The employers' combination is one of great strength, and has in its membership all of the leading firms in each special line of work connected with the building trades. The unions will be able to put up a strong fight, as the action of the employers can be interpreted as a lock-out, and the men draw a weekly benefit from the National strike fund. The action of the employers yesterday, in refusing to deal in any way with persons or firms or companies who assist in the boycott declared upon the mills, will entirely stop all building operations until the boycott is removed or nonunion men can be secured. Union planing mills will not be able to start, for all of the sawmills have signed this agreement, which will prevent their selling lumber to union mills. Lumber will not be shipped in from outside points, for the contractors have also joined in the fight and will demand that men working for them use the material from the home mills.

How the Building Trades Council will meet this move cannot be said until after their next meeting. They realize that the situation is grave, indeed, and that their next move must be deliberate and strong.

At a meeting of the sawmill men and the planing-mill men, yesterday afternoon, the projected movement against the union was given active form. The resolutions adopted are but the outward expression of a spirit that has existed among them for some time, but for political reasons it has not been before made public. The planing-mill men have for some time past had assurances from the employers in various other lines of building that they would be supported in every possible way, and as evidence of their sincerity approximately $50 per week has been contributed to assist the planing-mill men in meeting the losses caused them by being idle.

Last Tuesday, the first day after election, a meeting was called between the sawmill and planing-mill owners. There were some who did not receive notice of the meeting, and the attendance was incomplete. All who were absent, however, were known to be heartily in favor of any action to oppose the boycott upon the planing mills, and a committee was appointed to frame a plan of action. The accompanying resolutions were drawn up and submitted at yesterday's meeting for approval. A full attendance was at hand, and all approved of the method proposed. The names signed to the resolution practically represent all of the employing building interests of Portland, and they pledge themselves to stand as one organization until the present trouble with the union is definitely settled.

An authorized representative of the millmen, who has been present at all of their meetings, yesterday said:

"The document is signed by 14 manufacturers in the special lines of work, and is also signed on behalf of the Master Builders' Association by a committee of four contractors appointed to confer with the millmen. The resolution is indorsed and signed by the Master Builders' Association, composed of practically all the contractors in the building business in the city. These employers who have signed the document insist that the boycott of the planing mills is a direct blow at the building industry of the city, and that its use is destructive of all legitimate business. No new contracts are being placed; no mill orders can be safely placed; it cannot be known whether a building when once begun can be completed, and it is the intention of parties concerned to insist that the unions shall call off the boycott and allow the question between the
