These conditions will combine to make this year's fair one of extraordinary The great interest in dairying will bring to the fair the best herds of thoroughbree cattle in the United States, local breed ers will be present to exhibit the stock they have produced on Oregon ranches, manufacturers will have on display all the latest machinery for filling an up-todate slio, and for making butter and cheese after the contents of the slio have been turned into milk. Farmers will be there to see what the inventor's skill has produced for the purpose of lightening the labors of the man with the hos, the scythe nd the fiail. Townspeople will be to see the competing displays of grain. fruit, vegetables, hops, wool, butter, cheese and grasses brought in by the farmers, and the farmers will be there to see what the mechanic, the artist, the manufacturer and the merchant have brought to put on display. Everybody will have money to spend coming to the fair. harvest will be big and prices go business men are enjoying a large trade and are prosperous. All will be able to attend the fair, and since it will be greatest ever held, the crowds will be the argest ever seen on the grounds. The trials of speed will be of unusual interest, for the reason that the purses are larger than before and the entries more numerous. Lone Oak tract is one of the fastest on the Coast, and all the best norses are brought here for training and are entered for the races. As the Oregon State Fair is in the circuit of Pacific Coast fairs, all the attractions presented in other estern States will also be seen here. As the arrangement of dates this year places the Oregon fair before the Autumnal equinox, there is every reason to believe that the weather will be perfect and not rainy, as in previous years, when the fair was the time when the equinoctial storm is due.

Co-Education and Marriage. New York Sun.

"What does it matter if there are a large number of marriages among Syracuse University students? They can't do better, and the marriages are generally happy ones,

This is the answer given by Chancellor James R. Day to the charge against coeducation, that it is too conducive to love-making. Syracuse University is co-educational in every department, and there has never been any movement against it. Every year at commencement time a large number of engagements is announced, and many times marriages take place before graduation. This is not considered to be any reason why the sys-tem of co-education should be discarded, Chancellor Day holding that the students may make love all they want to as long as they keep up in their studies.
