

HERO STORY IS SPOILED

INGRAM DID NOT SAVE THE LIFE OF A GUARD. He Says Himself That He Was Shot by Merrill Purely by Accident in Squabble Over a Ladder.

SALEM, Or., Aug. 3.—(Special)—Frank Ingram, the convict who was shot by David Merrill in the penitentiary stove foundry at the time of the outbreak, tells a story of the shooting that varies materially from the reports that have been heretofore made. The first story of the shooting was that Merrill was about to shoot Guard Girard when Ingram seized the barrel of the rifle, turning it aside and receiving the bullet in his knee. This account has been generally accepted as correct, though some reports have been that Tracy shot Ingram soon as the latter seized Merrill's rifle. The general understanding has been that Ingram risked his life and lost it in order to save the lives of the prison guard. By his own story Ingram claims no such credit, and while he takes from the incident some of its romantic interest, and robs himself of any glory, it leaves a favorable impression by accepting no more honor than is due. In giving an account of the whole scene Ingram says that after killing Guard Ferrell and firing through the windows at the guards on the main wall, Tracy and Merrill ran back to the rear of the molding-room and passed into the adjoining room, where a ladder was kept. All the convicts were running in various directions to escape the bullets, and the guards made their way outside the shops. Ingram had run into the room where the ladder was kept, and was glancing around to see which way to turn next, when he was suddenly confronted by Merrill, whose rifle was pointed directly at Ingram's abdomen, and only a few inches away. Instinctively he grasped the barrel of the rifle and pushed it down, and was about to reach out to catch the shaft of the rifle with the other hand, when the gun was fired and his knee gave way, letting him fall. The two desperadoes then secured the ladder and made their way out through the rear of the shops, and Ingram got so far as he knows, there was no guard near him when he was shot, nor within range of Merrill's rifle. He does not think Merrill intended to shoot him, or that the rifle was intentionally pointed at him, but in the rush and excitement the two came together and in the apparent danger he turned the rifle aside. If there was a guard here, Ingram has no doubt the officer would have been killed; but he has no knowledge of having saved any one's life. The escaping convicts would have shot any officer they met.

AGAIN ON TRACY'S TRAIL

SHERIFFS CUDDEHE AND DE BOLT ARE IN PURSUIT. On Road That is Little Used Between Almirra and Davenport—Hope Capture is Near.

SPOKANE, Aug. 3.—Sheriffs Cuddehe and De Bolt, respectively of King and Douglas Counties, are traversing a little-used road from Connal Creek to Davenport, a distance of about 50 miles, believing that Tracy is somewhere on the road. The officers left Spokane at 8 o'clock this morning, and traveled until about 11 o'clock before they learned that a man with two horses, riding one and using the other as a pack horse, had traversed the road from Govan in a southerly direction toward Connal Creek Saturday evening. The man was seen by several people, who said that his pack horse was dragging a rope that was fast to a tree. It does not do what he wishes. The Japanese have made themselves more unpopular than ever on the Fraser and Skeena Rivers this year, and the move that Mr. Martin made is likely to have popular support.

ARRESTED FOR MURDER.

Fort Hall Killing Charged Against a Blackfoot Man. SALT LAKE, Aug. 3.—A special to the Herald from Blackfoot, Idaho, says: County Attorney Winters, of Bannock County, came up from Pocatello today and placed W. A. Durham under arrest on the charge of murdering E. M. Fritz and J. L. Donaldson on Pocatello Creek when the Fort Hall Indian Reservation was opened in June last. Mr. Winters refused to make any statement except to say that he has a complete chain of evidence connecting Durham with the crime. Asked as to the motive for the crime, Mr. Winters said he was not sure, but refused to be further questioned. The murder of Fritz and Donaldson, which occurred shortly after the opening of the reservation, created considerable excitement around Pocatello, and at the time it was generally supposed to be the work of some drunken Indians. Donaldson was a well-known farmer of Wood River, Neb.

HELENA, Mont., Aug. 3.—A lone highwayman tonight held up Samuel Travis and James Randall, and after he had robbed them, compelled Travis to stop a street-car, tie a handkerchief over his face, and go through the car. The robber secured $50. Travis is one of the identity of the highwayman.

OPINION ON SMOKE.

Comparison of Conditions in London and New York. London Lancet. As is well known, the fuel used for heating purposes in New York, as in most continental cities, is anthracite. As a consequence, the atmosphere of these cities is never blackened with smoke, for anthracite is a smokeless fuel. Owing, however, to the high price of hard coal in New York, and to some extent the inhabitants have been experiencing a condition of things similar to that frequently met with in London, where the householders are allowed to pollute the air with comparative impunity.

The Imperial Rose.

London Field. The rose is, of course, our national flower, soft and fragrant to those who touch it respectfully, but armed with a hundred thorns, like Briareus, to those who pluck it rudely and unwisely. The rose in all its beauty and variety may fairly and freely be taken as representing the character of the whole British people. It is the one flower that grows all over the world, and nowhere more luxuriantly than in South Africa, as at Pretoria, Johannesburg, and elsewhere. As the sun never sets on the British possessions, so also we may say that the rose never ceases to bloom there.

THE AFRICAN ELEPHANT.

Efforts to Tame and Make Him Useful for Domestic Purposes. New York Sun. The need of animals to serve as beasts of burden in Africa is becoming more and more pressing with the extension of white enterprises there. Horses, cattle, mules and donkeys are adapted only to a limited extent to be useful in tropical Africa, and even in the more temperate parts of the continent the prevalence of the tsetse fly, whose bite is fatal to domestic animals, makes it impossible to employ them in the work of the country. The camel is the only animal that is adapted to the work of the Sahara; but the camel is useful only in the drier parts of the continent. An attempt was made, a number of years ago, to introduce camels into the transport service of tropical Africa. A number of camels were loaded with trade goods on the coast opposite Zanzibar and started inland for Lake Tanganyika, and were followed by the Indian Ocean. The experiment was a dismal failure, not one of the animals living to see the waters of the inland lakes. Another attempt was made to introduce camels into the transport service of tropical Africa. A number of camels were loaded with trade goods on the coast opposite Zanzibar and started inland for Lake Tanganyika, and were followed by the Indian Ocean. The experiment was a dismal failure, not one of the animals living to see the waters of the inland lakes.

HAIR CUT OR ARREST.

Desperate Trade Measures Adopted by a West Indian Barber. Washington Star. The large corps of newspaper correspondents which went down to the West Indies after the volcano disasters brought back a number of interesting stories. One of the most curious was that of a barber of Craven at Losburg, Va., on Thursday night. Nipple was taken before Justice Wood, but was remanded to jail without a further hearing, while, at the same time, his arrest was postponed until next week. He has employed counsel to resist his removal to Virginia. Nipple, it is charged, wielded one of the sledge hammers with which the door of Craven's cell was smashed in.

Notorious Cattle Rustler Killed.

BUTTE, Mont., Aug. 3.—A special to the Miner from Billings says that word has been received from Sanders Station of the shooting and killing of a notorious cattle rustler named J. W. Perry, known throughout the Eastern Montana range as "Black Rusty," by James Haynie, foreman of the Hysham Cattle Company. No particulars of the killing are given. Haynie is a well-known stockman and is one of the oldest cattlemen of the state. He has given himself up.

Arrested for Lynching.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 3.—Harry Nipple was arrested by Frederick today charged with the murder of a colored man named Craven at Losburg, Va., on Thursday night. Nipple was taken before Justice Wood, but was remanded to jail without a further hearing, while, at the same time, his arrest was postponed until next week. He has employed counsel to resist his removal to Virginia. Nipple, it is charged, wielded one of the sledge hammers with which the door of Craven's cell was smashed in.

Last Seen With Husband.

CHIPPewa FALLS, Wis., Aug. 3.—The body of Mrs. George Wolf, who has been missing since June 27, was found today buried in the sand four miles south of this city. Mrs. Wolf was seen alive on the night of June 27 driving with her husband, who has since disappeared. Today George Hollinger, while prodding the earth with a spade, discovered the body. Marks on the face indicate that death was inflicted with a heavy instrument or stone.

Murderer Will Die Today.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Aaron Halle, who murdered his wife Mary Mary Brannigan, in May 1900, shooting her, she stood behind a sales counter in a downtown store, will be electrocuted tomorrow at Sing Sing. Halle, who has already been granted a full pardon, has displayed complete indifference as to his fate and evidently expects over the commission of the crime. He killed Miss Brannigan because she refused to marry him, having his own revolver with which to shoot her. After shooting her, Halle awaited the officers and when they arrived he was calmly rolling a cigarette.

THE PEANUT POPULAR. Known in the South as the "Pindar" and the "Goober."

Columbia State. An observant contemporary, considering the virtues of the "pindar," remarks that "they do say a South Carolina legislator can eat more pindars than any body else."

It is a fact that the average South Carolina legislator is abnormally fond of "pindars," as our contemporary calls the fruit scientifically known as the Arachis hypogaea, and variously designated in the everyday language of this country. Even the strictest laws against eating in the legislative halls are insufficient to abolish the habit in the House, and while the Senate is not so openly addicted to it, still we have known the most punctilious Senator to send our superintendent for a bag of pindars and devour them in that dignity of manner becoming a Senator of South Carolina. The Senators eat pindars quietly in the Senate chamber and carefully dispose of the hulls or they slip out into the lobby or cloakroom and there enjoy the feast in peace. But in the House it is quite different. There the members indulge themselves regardless of conventionalities, and after an especially trying day the floor is covered with the hulls that have fallen from their careless hands.

In this article we have followed our contemporary in designating the Arachis hypogaea as the pindar, but there are many other names for this popular fruit. In the South, where the fruit is best known, pindar is the common name given it, although it is spelled either pindar or pinder, while the form "pinda" is also found, as well as "pinder." In Georgia the common name is "goober," and in Virginia, where it is raised on an extensive scale, it is called the "groundnut." In the North the name by which this versatile plant and its product are known as "peanut," or the "ground pea," and it rejoices in still other designations, such as "earthnut," "manila nut" and "jurnut."

"The peanut has been found to be a very profitable crop, and many Virginia farmers have made fortunes out of it. The market is sure, and the expense of planting, cultivation and harvesting is by no means great. The Newberry Observer interviewed a peanut dealer in his own town, who has a $200 peanut roaster, and has 11 acres planted in peanuts on his farm, out beyond Helena. This gentleman expects to gather "500 bushels of good, sound peanuts, leaving the undergrown and defective on the vines for stock." Last year he planted one acre late and got 60 bushels. "Peanut vines yield abundantly," says this authority. "If each vine on an acre yields only a pint, the yield of an acre is 75 bushels. Often a vine will yield a quart. Good pindars bring from 90 cents to $1.25 a bushel through the year." So that there is money in pindars at the rate, when we know that a town the size of Newberry consumes 1500 or 2000 bushels.
