In Willamette Valley Wheat Is Not Up to Expectations in Quantity, but Quality Is Excellent—Oats Are Better.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(Special).—Nature has dealt lavishly with the farmers throughout the grain-growing sections of the country, despite the heavy rains of June and July in some localities and the drought in others, and as a general statement the crops have exceeded those of last year, and in many instances prove the largest for years. Not only is there promise of this being a banner year in the amount of grain harvested, but it comes in the face of high prices. Specialists to the Record-Herald give the following estimates of yields:

GRAIN IN THE VALLEY.

Why Wheat Yield Is Reduced—Rotation of Crops.

ALBANY, Aug. 10.—(Special).—Thrashing machines have now been in operation in Linn and Lane counties for weeks or more, and it is apparent from the reports received that the yield of wheat will not be up to expectations. The yield will be good, as wheat yields are reckoned in these days, but will not average as large as the excellent appearance of the standing grain indicated. That the quality of the grain is first-class is declared by all farmers, dealers and flouring-mills men.

Only Winter wheat has been threshed. The spring wheat is still uncut. While the opinion has been that spring wheat will yield an immense crop, the disappointment over Fall grain causes a hesitancy in predicting large returns from any grain yet to be harvested. Oats are generally pronounced a big crop, and the yield will be larger than last year, yet it is not safe to say as this because farmers will have sown a crop of oats as they have been sowing for years.

Small Yield on Summer Fallow.

One of the most surprising features of the crop conditions is the very small yield of wheat grown on land that was summer fallowed last season. Several farmers have reported a yield of only about 12 bushels per acre, or no more than is grown on land that has been cropped for several years. The reason for this is that on summer fallow land indicated the usual large yield and no one suspected the shortage until the threshers began work. The loss of the season has been quite generally assigned to the cause of the poor yield. Very little threshing has yet been done in the hill country, and the farmers from that section, in both Linn and Lane, say that their crops will turn out better than in the flat country. Though the flatlands are high, they did not drain well enough to shed the surplus of water late in the season.

Wheat Acreage Slightly Reduced.

In both the counties named the acreage will be slightly less than last year. Had the weather been favorable in seeding time, the acreage would probably have been greater than in 1921, for many fields not sown to wheat in 1921, would have been sown to wheat in 1922 if the weather had permitted. As a consequence the acreage of oats and hay shows a considerable increase in the counties named. Several farmers have reported a yield of only about 20 per cent greater than last year. In Lane the increase in oat acreage was not so great as in Linn.

Grain Production Reduced 50 Per Cent.

"The amount of grain produced in Linn County now is not more than 50 per cent of what it was 10 years ago," says W. H. Goitra, of the firm of Goitra & Rumbaut, dealers in farm machinery at Albany. "Sales of machinery used in grain raising are just about half what they were 10 years ago. Dairying, fruitgrowing and hograising have driven out the wheat." The decrease in the amount of wheat raised in the Valley cannot be accounted for entirely by the areas of land which have been devoted to the uses of dairying, hograising and fruitgrowing. An everybody knows, the land does not produce as much grain per acre as it did years ago. One crop has been grown so many years in succession that the land is worn out. While there are very few in these counties who still adhere to the summer fallow method of rejuvenating old land, the large majority are adopting the more modern method of giving the land a rest by seeding it to clover or vetches. The farmers of this section of the Valley have been among the first to accept the teachings of the agricultural college people, and though it may be possible that the summer fallow method may prove the best, those who have tried rotation intelligently are satisfied with their experience. One farmer cut from his 30-acre clover field last year one and a half tons of clover per acre, and sold it at $6 per ton. A second crop the same season was permitted to get ripe, and the seed was sold for $180. He cut another crop in May this year and will plow the second crop under for fertilizer. Many dairy farmers in Linn County use the second crop of clover for pasture for their cattle.

Wheat-Growing Will Be Profitable.

"While it is probable that the Willamette Valley will never again produce as much wheat as it has in past years, I expect to see wheat-raising a profitable industry in this section," says A. W. Bow, crop manager of the Portland Flouring Mill Company's mill in Albany. "The mill will not come, however, until rotation of crops has given the land a rest and restored its former productivity. It costs but little more to raise a big crop than a small one, and the profits of the former are, of course, greater. The dairy industry is certain to be a great aid to wheat-growing. In a few years I expect to see some of the land now used for pasture or clover fields plowed up for wheat crops. The yields of wheat on such land will be large for several years. This change will prevent the overproduction of butter and milk, and will give the growing profitable. The development of the dairy industry creates a larger demand for milled and causes a corresponding advance in the price of wheat for his wheat. The removal of the fertility of the land increases the yield of wheat. The two industries should aid and regulate each other." A. W. F.

NO TRACE OF BARTHOLIN

One of His Friends Arrested—Not a Clear Story.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—The search for William Bartholin, who is suspected of having murdered his mother and Minnie Mitchell, was continued today, but no trace of the missing man was found. One of his friends, who was not yet identified, was arrested today. After a long examination, however, Thompson was sent back to his cell, as the police feel confident that he has not told all he knows. From him the police obtained a description of the clothing Bartholin wore when last seen. These clothes were found today in Bartholin's room, thus proving beyond a doubt that he returned to the hotel after his escape. The progress of the search for Bartholin is being followed with interest by the public. The loss on the building will be about $10,000. Schwarzchild & Sulzberger lost $10,000 by water damage. De Noon Bros. lost $25,000.

Perils of Mont Blanc.

CHAMOUNIX, France, Aug. 10.—The two residents of Paris who recently perished in the avalanche on Mont Blanc, and whose guides were reported to have been killed while descending the mountain in search of assistance, were named Stacheling and Mauduit. The bodies of the three men, together with that of the guide, Culea, have been brought here. The guide, Blanc, who was supposed to have been killed, was found alive at the bottom of a crevasse. The fall of the guides into the crevasse was witnessed by telescopes from here, and led to the supposition that both men had been killed. Blanc had a miraculous escape. He had a sheer fall of about 11 feet, but was unharmed, although he suffered from the effects of six hours' exposure. Culea was killed instantly.

Wilson's Nearness Trouble.

NORWALK, Aug. 10.—Fred Wilson, brother of Dr. Wilson, whose report capture and his sentence to death has been the subject of interest between the United States and Nicaraguan Governments, arrived here today on a route to his home in Milan. Mr. Wilson states that when he left Boca del Toro, two weeks ago, his brother was well, and that up to that time no word had been received regarding the situation of the captives in this country. Neither Mr. Wilson nor his brother had been in Bluefields for a month, and he is at a loss to understand how the report started.
