VETERANS IN CAMP

Great Crowd Gathers at the Pleasant Home Reunion.

ADDRESS BY REV. F. E. COULTER

Portland Minister Condemns Pessimistic Views of Gompers and Speaks of the Economic Value of Optimism.

At the G. A. R. campground at Pleasant Home yesterday a great crowd gathered from the surroundings. During the morning many wagons and buggies loaded with families came to spend the week. Day broke cool on the grounds, shaded by the tall firs and vine maple, and the savory odor of breakfast was wafted among the many stands which had sprung up the day before. Those who had obtained privileges for opening stands of various kinds had them decorated with the National colors, so that every part of the campground was resplendent with flags. There were 30 small tents in the space reserved for them, all of which had been rented for the week. Some of the families had comfortable camps, with hammocks swinging among the trees. The speakers' stand was handsomely decorated.

The morning was devoted to a reunion of families. Old soldiers who had not met each other since the last encampment exchanged cordial greetings.

The feature of the day was the lecture of Rev. Frank E. Coulter, of the People's Christian Union, of Portland. At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the opening exercises were held. Henry Kane, president of the M. A. Ross Post, presided. He welcomed the audience to the encampment of 1902, and expressed the hope that all would feel at home on the grounds. He then introduced Jiles G. Stephens, who is an honored member of the local post. Mr. Stephens said:

"I take great pleasure in extending a formal welcome to the guests and audience in behalf of the M. A. Post and Woman's Relief Corps. This is our sixteenth annual reunion. While the Civil War is over and new conditions have come upon us, we of the Grand Army of the Republic have come to understand that these reunions should be educational to be successful. We cannot hope to keep them up unless they are educational. There are many and varied appropriate subjects that may be handled with interest and profit on these occasions, and hence we have invited several prominent speakers to make addresses on current topics for the education and betterment of the people who come out to the meetings. I think I can safely say that no G. A. R. reunion held in the state in this year has been able to engage a higher class of speakers, and I trust you will receive profit from them."

The fine Gresham quartet, called Multi-Auro, composed of Rev. C. A. Nutley, William Cathey, Clarence Cathey and Fred Conley, then gave several selections, when Mr. Coulter was introduced.

Rev. Frank E. Coulter's Address.

Mr. Coulter spoke on the "Economic Value of Optimism," and although he occupied considerably over an hour he was listened to with the closest attention by an audience which extended from the platform for a distance of 150 feet. He reviewed at length the labor question, and scored Mr. Gompers, who recently spoke in Portland, for not touching on the vital part of the subject. All the way through Mr. Coulter appealed for broader consideration of the labor and capitalist question, and strongly urged workingmen to be governed by sound judgment and pure optimism. He was frequently interrupted by applause. In part he said:

"In addressing an audience of G. A. R. veterans and their friends, I am reminded that I must needs be practical if I would be worth while. You old soldiers have doubtless observed the immense revolutionary change which the rebellion inaugurated in the affairs of men. I think it not too much to say that the struggle, in its ethical and economical effects, was the fulfillment of the prophecy of the end of the world and the creation of a new earth. We now live in a new industrial heaven which is the awakening of the masses to the Divine optimism and economic power of collective endeavor.

"It is a great truth that the ground work of all reform is the mental and spiritual attitude of the reformer. So it is that a nation struggling as one man for the liberty of another persecuted fellowbeing has been the spiritual cause of a new mental attitude toward economic cooperation. We have at last discovered, (as in a glass, darkly) the economic power of the commandment, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thy self.' The battle is on, but no longer waged with the relics of barbarism, the torch, the club. The battle, a spiritual one, is raging between confidence, faith, energy and optimism on one hand and fear, distrust, jealousy and pessimism on the other, with victory always on the banner of optimism.

"This is the modern spirit, as it were, a large, full-chested broad-browed man of affairs who finds his life's character in humor, veracity, enterprise, charity and success, while over against him stands the thin, gloomy specter of a dead past, whining because the universe does not stop and let it catch up.

"What is this talk we hear about environment, which seems true, but is not? The victory is not to the pampered and fortunate, but to the determined and energetic. We see every day in the life history of brothers and sisters the failure of one and the success of the other. Yet they had exactly the same environment, and should have made the same record if environment counts for anything. 'Tis the old story of optimism versus pessimism.

"Like the Oregon pioneer who neither wanted to go to heaven or hell because Old Yamhill suited him well enough, so it is with the men and women of today who are too occupied with business and attention upon the moral and economical obligations they have taken upon themselves to be aware of the 'scare heads' and bogie enemies conjured up by fearing minds. They find themselves victorious, while those who nurse fear and indecision and see specters of envy and malice, discover nothing but failure and drudgery to the end of their days.

Scored Labor Leader.

"A few days ago it was my pleasure to attend a great mass meeting of labor, addressed by the heads of various branches of the union movement, as well as the head of the American Federation of Labor. What was my surprise and disappointment to hear the addresses delivered as mere appeals to the galleries; quantities of sympathy, much invective against imaginary enemies, combined with faultfinding with ministers and churches—all put together with carefully rounded appeals to the pessimistic prejudices of the laborers present, with the one idea apparently to provoke applause. Not a word did I hear as to the raising of labor itself above the prevailing epidemic of pessimistic know-nothingism and do-nothingism, which is labor's only enemy today. Are we to believe that this giant of American production—labor—this greatest power the world knows, these united workingmen who have it in their power to be the kings of economy, stand in danger of either life, liberty or happiness at the hands of a few men who have money? The real trouble is the discouraged mental attitude of the workman himself, which leads him to flock in droves, waiting to be exploited by every trickster of capital who makes his appearance. So hungry is he for sympathy that he sympathizes with himself, like a boy in his first love, who sits down and nurses his woe. Or, shall the other hypothesis be that the combines of capital are deliberately directed at labor to weaken and paralyze it? To admit this would be unwise, proclaiming capital as foolish and suicidal. Combinations are not made with the idea of coercing labor; if they were they would die for lack of spirit and mental powers to make them vital. Organizations and combines are brought about through the operation of a commercial law which eliminates waste. For the truth of this statement let me direct your attention to the case of Mr. Hanna, for years the most abused and vilified man before the public eye, and yet evidence is plenty that organized labor never had a better friend than he who has seemed its enemy only because he did not yield to the extravagant demands of pessimistic thought. Mr. Hanna simply struggled onward, obeying the law of elementary waste.

"So far as immediate observation goes, the trouble arises out of the fact that the real economical situation is in a state of transition from extreme individualism to its finality of a broad centralization. The car of progress moves on, paying little attention to the cry of the small-souled, who have largely obtained control of the labor movement. They have taken it out of the hands of the progressive men of positive force and cast adrift upon the negative sea of class prejudice. This is the enemy labor needs to fear, and the one its leaders should avoid. Whence comes the strikes which mean death to both capital and labor but from the distrust of the two factions? The workman is afraid to meet his employer, fearing he will 'do things to him,' and the employer has an equally silly fear in return.

"Because things have changed today from what they were yesterday, we run hither and thither, filled with anticipations of dreaded things about to happen. The only one we need to fear is a mental and spiritual strife within ourselves, which brings us hate, envy and distrust, where love, confidence and energy should reign.

"Things are as they are because the war opened up new powers of collective operation in men and set in motion the universal law which economizes in wastefull excesses. The present combines of capital and labor have arisen out of this law—not to antagonize each other, but to finally become one.

"Let labor rejoice and be glad—he has nothing to fear but the loss of his own progressive spirit. Let the farmers catch the spirit of the age, the elimination of waste by co-operation. Let optimism and fellowship take the place of distrust and interference. Learn to know that trust is here because it belongs here. The labor union is with us because it belongs here. Co-operation among farmers will be here because common sense will make them co-operate. Then, when the ruin and turmoil of today's pessimism is forgotten and we emerge upon the mountain top of industrial co-operation, we shall realize what we but dimly see at present, the beauty of the Divine optimism."

At the conclusion of the lecture the Gresham quartet gave the "Star-Spangled Banner," and while it was sung the audience arose and remained standing.

Campground Notes.

Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway arrived yesterday at noon. She became the guest of the post and Woman's Relief Corps. A tent was prepared for her especial use for the three days she will remain on the ground. She will deliver the main address this afternoon.

Last night there was a short programme. The campground was illuminated by a beacon placed in the center. This is a platform 10 feet high, and eight feet square. Dirt covers the floor, on which a huge bonfire was built, which throws its light all over the ground, and illuminates the speakers' stand. The Gresham quartet, under the leadership of Rev. C. A. Nutley, sang many patriotic and stirring songs from the platform. There were recitations and solos by local talent. The young people danced till a late hour.

Mrs. L. H. Additon has written the committee on programme that owing to sickness she would not be able to be present during the week.

The three sawmills in the neighborhood of the campground will close down tomorrow for the rest of the week to enable the young men employed to attend the reunion.

A MERRY STORY.

The Latest Number Just Arrived From San Francisco.

It seems not to matter how often a story is told, if it is good, and has facts that are indisputable, it takes with the public. The latest shipment of Mormon Bishop Pills, every box telling the story of relief from the effects of liquor or tobacco habits, and all other excesses that are injurious, is only another proof that they are in great demand, and that they do the work at 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50. They are sold by S. G. Skidmore & Co., Portland, Or.

RECREATION.

If you wish to enjoy a day of rest and pleasure, take the O. R. & N. train from Union depot at 9 A. M. for a short trip up the Columbia, returning, if desired, by boat from Cascade Locks. Tickets and particulars at O. R. & N. ticket office, Third and Washington.

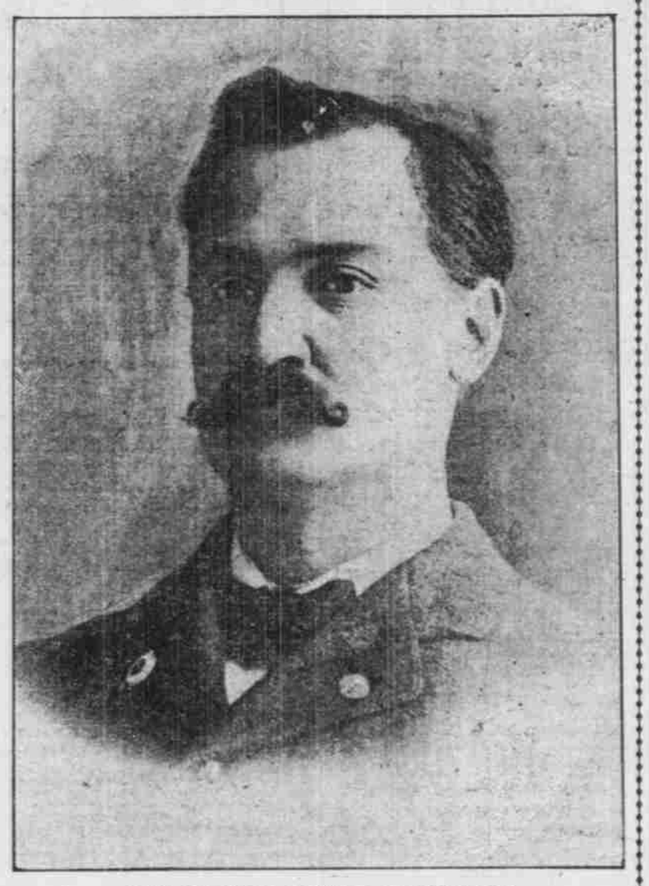
SPEAKS ON OPTIMISM AT G. A. R. REUNION.



REV. FRANK E. COULTER, OF PORTLAND.

SHALL LAME MAN BE KEPT?

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS DISCUSSES CASE OF FRANK CASSIDY.

He Has Nine Children and One Arm, but Is All Right for Street Work, Says the Mayor.

The appointment of men to positions in the street-cleaning and sprinkling department was the principal matter discussed at the meeting of the Board of Public Works yesterday. Superintendent Alexander Donaldson, by request of the board, sent in a report showing resignations in the department as follows:

Hugh Ewing, foreman; J. H. Cox, sprinkling-cart driver; J. C. Gatzke, sprinkling-cart driver; Charles Lund, cartman; James Mulvaney, cartman; Lars Olsen, broomman; Oscar Olsen, broomman; Joe Whalen, cartman.

The report also shows that the following men have been employed:

E. F. Jenkins, foreman; Frank Cassidy, buncher, night force; J. Mochow, sprinkling cartman; E. Heath, cartman.

The members present explained that no report had been made of these changes until it was asked for. Mayor Williams said that so far as he was concerned he had advocated that no man be discharged who was reliable and able to perform the work assigned to him. Some men had been laid off because there was no work for them to do, and the report showed that some men had resigned. The Mayor called attention to Frank Cassidy, a man with one arm, who has been working in the street-cleaning department for four months. He said this man had excited his sympathy. He had nine children and Cassidy said he could shovel dirt into a wagon, although it was hard work for him to do so. The Mayor stated that they were not running an eleemosynary institution, and had suggested that all unfit men be weeded out; but he thought the case of Cassidy was a deserving one.

Mr. Cogswell stated that the former Board of Public Works had adopted a resolution authorizing the superintendent of the street-cleaning force to employ and discharge men, and the present superintendent seemed to think the resolution applied to him.

Mayor Williams said the superintendent had the right to appoint men subject to the approval of the board.

Referring to Cassidy, Mr. MacMaster said: "If we employ this lame man, it will open the door for employment of others of the same kind."

The Mayor replied: "It does not necessarily follow that there will be others. I have refused to recommend the appoint of men to these positions, except when they are able-bodied. This seems to me to be an exceptional case. He is able-bodied and strong, save that he has only one arm. He has nine children and an invalid wife and has been working in the department now for four months."

Mr. MacMaster asked if Cassidy lost his arm in the service, and was informed that he did not. Mr. MacMaster proceeded to say that Cassidy would set the pace for the gang in which he worked, which would be slow, and would keep the others back. They ought not to have a man who could not keep up.

Richard Williams expressed himself as uncertain as to whether it was proper to employ any but able-bodied men. He said further that the superintendent of the street-cleaning and sprinkling department is held responsible for the amount of work done, and ought to have power to discharge men. For example, if a man got drunk while at work or brought in his wagon in bad shape.

"But he should report to the board," Mr. Cogswell replied. Mr. Cogswell introduced a resolution providing that the superintendent report within two days the names of men discharged, and the reason for their removal, and also the names of men employed by him and by whom recommended. The resolution was adopted.

A communication from the Buffalo Pitts Company was read, offering to sell the city a 10-ton steam road roller for $2800, and to provide an engineer for six days to operate it.

Mr. MacMaster said the city had a 15-ton roller which needs repairs, and the Buffalo Pitts Company had agreed to take it and make an allowance, and sell the city a new 10-ton roller and put wider wheels on it, which would be an advantage. Mr. MacMaster, however, explained that the new roller cannot be furnished at once, and that the old one can be repaired at a cost of $300 or $400. The matter was referred to the engineering committee, of which he is a member.

A petition signed by E. R. Pittelkau and others asking that an arc light be placed at the intersection of Taylor and Park streets, was referred to the light committee.

R. B. Knight and others submitted a protest against the acceptance of the improvement of West Main street, between King and Chapman, which was referred to the street committee.

Various street improvements were accepted.

To Fix Colorado Boundary Line.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 12.—Arthur Kidder, of this city, who has been doing special work for the Government Land Office in ascertaining boundary lines, will go to Colorado this week and with a corps of engineers ascertain and mark the southern boundary line of Colorado. The line is plain enough on the maps, but along its 500 miles many of the landmarks are gone, and there are people who do not know whether they are inhabitants of New Mexico or Colorado. The first survey was made 50 years ago and today there is a vagueness about the line. The Kidder party will start at the southwest corner of the state and work east.

CABLE TERMS DON'T SUIT

The Pacific Orient Line Will Make Counter Proposition to Roosevelt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—George W. Clapperton, traffic manager for the Commercial Pacific Cable Company, says, according to the Times, that the company is not satisfied with the conditions imposed in the memorandum made public Saturday by President Roosevelt regarding the laying of the cable between San Francisco and the Philippines and China, and adds that a reply to the President's terms will be made in a few days. Mr. Clapperton was not prepared to say what the company's reply would be, but intimated that it would be in the nature of a counter proposition, embodying certain modifications of the Administration's proposals.

One of the chief points over which the company is dissatisfied is that referring to the control of the line by the Government in time of war or war is threatened, because, in the terms submitted by the President, no compensation is provided for. In regard to other clauses the company is disposed to meet the wishes of the President, with a few minor changes in detail.

A draft embodying the company's various objections to the clauses added by the President to the proposed contract has been drawn up by the company's counsel, William W. Cook, and has been cabled to the company's executives, now in London, Clarence H. Mackay and George W. Ward. On receipt of their reply a communication will be addressed to the President.

SUCCESSOR TO CORRIGAN

Opinion at Rome Generally Centers Upon Bishop Farley.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Among the passengers who arrived today on the steamer Hohenzollern from Naples was Rt. Rev. Thomas O'Gorman. Bishop O'Gorman said he brought a letter from Cardinal Rampolla to Secretary Hay, also a present and a letter from the Supreme Pontiff to President Roosevelt. The bishop said:

"I shall probably go to Oyster Bay to see the President first and then to Washington to see Mr. Hay. The pope was in remarkable health and spirits when I saw him last.

"Up to the time of my departure from Rome, the question of the appointment of a successor to the late Archbishop Corrigan had not come up for consideration, but it was the consensus of opinion that Bishop Farley would be selected."

Woodford Talks of His Trip to Japan

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—General Stuart L. Woodford, ex-Minister to Spain, has returned to his home here after a trip through Japan. In speaking of this trip the General says:

"What most impressed me there was the really brave attempt that is being made to raise the standard of education among the people, particularly among the women. The public school system is extensive, embracing schools of all grades, from the kindergartens up to the two imperial universities at Tokio and Kioto. The Empress has established a special institution for girls at Tokio, known as the Peeress school, where the daughters of the nobility, of high government officials and of officers of the army and navy are educated. Among the professors in the universities are several graduates of Harvard and Yale.

"The Japanese are a wonderful people. Compared with the rest of Asia, Japan is almost immeasurably in advance. Her people are clean, polite and industrious, and indicate that Japan is certainly to be at the front in the development of the new Orient."

Western Union Putting in New Lines

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—In anticipation of an early surrender to the Postal Telegraph Company of the telegraph offices and wires along the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Western Union Telegraph Company has many construction and repairing gangs at work in the territory affected. It is building new lines, repairing old ones, and endeavoring to establish new lines as far West as Buffalo. There are 25 wires between Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and 65 wires between Philadelphia and New York, which will have to be taken down before December 1 and replaced by an equal number of wires along the new routes, which it is said will be by way of the Reading, the Beech Creek and the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg Railroads into Pittsburg, and by way of the last-named railway into Buffalo.
