FOREST GROVE, Aug. 13.—(Special)—I. A. Macrum, for many years a prominent business man of the state, died at his home here this afternoon. Death was due to acute diabetes, from which Mr. Macrum had suffered for more than a month, and was not unexpected.

He came to Oregon in 1870, and since has been prominent in its business, political and educational life.

Mr. Macrum was a native of Pittsburg, Pa., where he was born in 1842. His parents were Scotch-Irish, and emigrated from the North of Ireland in 1820, and later engaged in farming near that city.

Mr. Macrum was educated at the Leeburg Institute and the State Normal School in Pennsylvania. Completing his studies when very young he began teaching in Pittsburg as principal of the Second Ward School, and after three years he secured an interest and taught in the Newell Institute, a private school for fitting young men for college, and also for conducting women in classic, music and language.

In 1882 the former law partners became interested in the organization of the Williams Savings Bank, in Portland, and Mr. Macrum was chosen cashier and manager of the institution.

Mr. Macrum was chosen cashier and manager of the institution. The business of the bank grew so rapidly that in 1886, it was converted into the Merchants National Bank, Mr. Macrum continuing as cashier.

In politics Mr. Macrum was a strong Republican, and his interest in honest elections was second only to the interest he took in education.

When quite young Mr. Macrum was married to Miss Westma Brubbs, of Allegheny City. They had six children, namely, Dr. Charles A. and Will S. Macrum, of Portland; Mrs. W. H. Byrd, of Salem, and Mrs. John W. and Mrs. John W. Forest Grove. The family residence is near Forest Grove, where Mr. Macrum, preferring life in the country after many busy years in the city, had built a large and handsome house.
