Victory of Railway Bill Not a Personal One.

GOVERNOR GIVES MANY CREDIT

He Predicts That the Republicans Will Sweep the State by the Largest Majority in the History of the Party.

SEATTLE, Sept. 12 - (Special.) - Governor McBride gave his first newspaper interview today since the recent Republican convention, which indorsed his plan for an appointive rallway commission. In brief, the Governor said that in his opinion the adoption of the platform declaring for an appointive commission would result in the greatest victory this Fall ever won by any party in the history of the state. The Governor said, moreover, that the victory he and other advocates of the commission plank won in the convention was not a personal victory for him; that he was not entitled to the credit any more than were the other friends of the Railroad Commission measure. Finally, the Governor predicted that Republicans generally throughout the state would support the platform, and that the members of the Legislature, if that body is Republican, will carry out the platform this Winter by the enactment of a Railroad Commission bill in accordance with the policy. "In my opinion," said the Governor, "the adoption of the plank in the state platform declaring in favor of the creation of a Railroad Commission to be appointed by the Governor will win the Republican party thousands of votes in the coming election. I believe that because of this action by the state convention on Wednesday, we will roll up this Fall the largest majority on record in the annals of the state. The measure will be supported by the rank and file of the Republican voters throughout Washington. Republican doctrines enunciated in Republican platforms have always been crystallized into Legislative enactments, either state or National. The rule will be observed in Washington.

"Moreover, in my opinion, the Legislature, if Republican, as I feel sure it will be, will obey the will of the party as expressed in the platform adopted by the Tacoma convention, and will pass a bill for the appointment of a Raffroad Commission with all the powers such a body should have. The victory won by the action taken by the Tacoma convention does not belong to one man or one set of men. It was earned after a long and a hard contest, by the advocates of the measure, for which we have been fighting since I was nominated for Lleutenant-Governor. In no sense was it a personal victory to which I can assert any claim

RAILROADS ARE HIT HARD. Their Lobbyists Realize They Must Change Their Methods.

TACOMA, Sept. 12 - (Special.) - A story of the Republican state convention just ended, heretofore overlooked, has just leaked out. It illustrates the mahner in which Senatorial politics crept into that gathering, and though the scheme failed, politicians will be interested in the telling. At the time the Congressionel nominations were in the air, and talk of all kinds of combinations was at its height, King was flirting with outside counties which would turn down Cushman, of Pierce. Of course, it was believed then that King would not worry much if Cushman went by the board. and, incidentally, Cushman and Pierce County were not bound up in King County's prospects.

William Jones, formerly of Walta Walla, one of Levi's Ankeny's strongest opponents, and a friend of John L. Wilsion, with a decided Preston-McBride 224 feet cement. leaning, saw an opportunity to injure the candidacy of Ankeny before the coming Legislature. Jones was on the steering committee of the Pierce County delegation. He approached a number of the members of the delegation, or rather the steering committee, with a proposition to take up a certain prominent Walla Walla man, who has long had Congres-sional ambitions, turn down Humphrey

The proposition did not find favor with the steering committee from Pierce and was dropped. It is questionable whether it could have been made to win, but it was a plan that friends of Wilson and Preston fully approved. The man in question has heretofore strongly opposed Ankeny in all his fights, but recently agreed to be loyal and was expected to go down the line with him. It is believed he knew nothing of the proposed

The convention would seem to have indicated a number of important things, Among these is that railroad politics in this state must be conducted on different lines. There is no division of sentiment now on the proposition that the fight was lost through poor management the railroad attorneys and politicians. It is true the railroads have not indorsed any Senatorial candidate and their agents are presumed to be maintaining a neutral position. That they were not is evident, and that they lost their fight against the commission bill for that reason is also evident.

Railronds Keep Hands Off.

The railroad workers at the convention kept their hands off the Congressional fight. This appeared strange, at the time, to many uninformed politicians, but the truth of the matter is that they were told in unmistakable terms that they must devote their attention solely to the rallroad issue. Every proposition looking toward assistance to Congressional candidnies was turned down. road workers were sent into the field to work solely for the interest of the roads. And it is now understood that in the future the railroad agents will not worry so much with outside matters. Of course they will reward their friends by giving them good support, but their own interests will be protected first.

The new management of the transcontinental lines is disgusted with the way politics has been played by railroad workers in the past, and is anxious to get out of this practice if possible. It is out of this practice if possible. It is doubtful, however, if the time has come when the railroads are safe in keeping their hands off, but work toward that end will be undertaken now.

It would appear that Ankeny has made good with the railroads and will have to be given support in return for the next session of the Legislature. He delivered every vote he could control against a railroad commission and will expect compensation. But for that matter, the rail-road influences have nominated a majorroad influences have nominated a majority of Ankeny men for the Legislature where they have controlled the county conventions and this, too, in spite of the fact that the roads were held to be holding aloof from the Senatorial fight. may be the railroad workers will decide their debt has been paid in this way.

None of Senatorial Candidates Lost. Wilson scored repeatedly in the convention; in fact none of the Senatorial candidates have lost anything. Preston, for example, gained the prestige that follows a decided victory on platform matters; Ankeny made himself solid with the railroads, and Wilson played a good all-around political game, ready to profit from both men. Neither the railroads nor McBride can find fault with him. At the same time, he helped to nominate a Congressman from Preston's home county that will be a drag upon his strength in the Legislature, owing to the prejudice against electing too many men to Congress from the same locality. It was his resolution that was telegraphed to President Roosevelt pledging the latter Washington's support in 1904, though another man was given credit, in theory, for the promise. And Wilson, through his control of Cushman, certainly saved McBride.

Wilson Saves McBride in Spokane. Speaking of this point recalls an unpublished story of the Spokane convention. It is known now that McBride and McGraw believed themselves beaten the night before the convention when Wilson suddenly appeared in their room and declared that if McBride persisted in his fight he would go after him on the ground that he was interfering in local politics. McGraw promptly calmed Wilson by a statement that he was a Preston man first, with Wilson as second choice. McBride coincided with this explanation, and Wilson promptly declared his hands were off the commission fight. He left the room and made arrangements to have a commission resolution introduced on the floor of the convention, and that is why Spokane indorsed the commission. Not at any time during the Tacoma convention did Wilson show any hostility to McBride, yet be, at the same time, received credit from the railroads through the actions of his friends against McBride's policy. And, at heart, it is thoroughly believed Wilson is a railroad

The railroads are not discouraged by the outcome. They held that nominees for the Legislature will regard the instructions from their county conventions; that men cannot be nominated and then given a platform upon which to stand. This is likely to prove true and the principal result of the platform will be to embarrass the Republicans two years hence when they are called upon to explain their failure to enact legislation along the lines of that document.

Corbin had an opportunity to present President Roosevelt's message about the St. Mr. Ad Louis Exposition, and Emperor William said he would see that Germany had a good representation. "I will send you a large party," he added, pleasantly. His Majesty sent some personal messages to President Roosevelt through General Corbin, and asked to be remembered espe-cially to "Miss Alice," as he called Miss Roosevelt.

The Emperor conversed with each of the Americans, and told them how much he had enjoyed their visit. The farewell took place on the field just after Emperor Will-lam returned from leading the cavalry charge which concluded the maneuvers. neral Corbin and Earl Roberts both said, in summing up their impression of the maneuvers, that the German Army is the most wonderful in the world.

"There may possibly be a difference among military men," General Corbin said. "as to certain details, but the army to-gether is matchless." What pleased the American General as much as anything was the spirit of the troops—the love of the private for the army. In speaking to General Young of the possibility of Prince Henry of Prussia's sec-ond visit to the United States, Emperor William said Prince Henry might go next April, when the statue of Frederick the Great, presented by His Majesty to the United States, is unveiled at Washington, although the Prince's sea duties might prevent this. Field Marshal von Walder-see told the Americans that he hoped next ear to see them in the United States. The American officers left Berlin to-night. General Corbin, Lieutenant-Colonel John A. Johnston, General Young and Licutenant McCoy went to Dusseldorf, Thence they will go to Paris and from there to London. General Wood and Lientenant McCoy have started for Dresden. Thence they will travel in Austria.
